STUDENTS' DIRECTORY

The Directory of Staff and Students will be issued by the end of this week, it was learned yesterday. Mr. E. A. The actual work of printing and collecting the information required for the Directory has been in the hands of the Registrar's office, he stated.

ATTITUDE TO WAR

SUBJECT OF QUERY

ternative is imprisonment, or refusal military but render humanitarian service only.

If the student were to actively oppose the continuation of war, how would he do so, by refusal to pay taxes, by organizing peaceful mass protests and petitions, or by engaging in a general strike?

In the last question, he is asked to state what body he would endorse for purposes of general peace. In the suggested list are the following: a World Court, the League of Nations, an international police force, investigation into the private manufacture of arms, a World Federation of States, and an International Language such as Esperanto. Other suggestions are welcomed.

In each case, the student is given the opportunity of stating his absolute aversion for participation of any sort, in any war whatever, and interested co-eds are asked to put themselves in the place of a brother or fiancé, when answering the questions.

TRACED BY SPEAKER

where apprentices were taught the beauty that was possible in their own trade. Everywhere this method was followed up. In Germany, titles were given to men who gave money or a collection to a museum.

Museums steadily improved—German sent classes of children through with their teachers; America went one better and brought competent school teachers right into their staff. Also they spent a great deal of time on mounting of objects to make things more attractive. This decidedly went out to the people and created a lively interest.

"As for our own museum," Dr. Curran went on, "although coming late into the field, blind luck has helped tremendously." During the war a gentleman was forced to give up his collection of Greek vases. Again, a print of a Chinese statue by accident fell into the hands of a gentleman named Croft who was instrumental in bringing the best Chinese collection in the world to Toronto.

Others have gone before it and there is no doubt that evolution will go too. To discover what thin and theoretical ground one is on all one has to do is open a text-book and see there the disagreement among evolutionists as to our remote ancestor.

The mental exercise of turning an earth-worm upside down and tracing its development into a higher form is fascinating. But to believe this fantasy of the imagination is another question. Admittedly it takes keen perception to differentiate but we college students are supposed to have developed that power of discrimination above the common crowd. It is most annoying to find glibly students who have never studied a biological course in their lives accepting with all possible assurance evolution as a fact.

It is no more ridiculous to assert that since you accept the molecular theory you cannot believe the Book of Genesis. Don't believe the Book of Genesis if you don't want to. But by all means have a better reason for it than evolution.

"The Department of National Defence at Ottawa looks upon the C.O. His concluding remarks were to the effect that the corps is "not" giving training for war purposes, but to maintain a reserve force of officers grounded in fundamental military principles. The type of training given has not, as is popularly believed, outgrown its usefulness; at least those whose lives are devoted to the work do not think so.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Conservative members-elect of the next Ontario Legislature, assembled in caucus at the Albany Club yesterday, endorsed former Premier George S. Henry as house leader for the next session but recommended that the provincial organization call a convention immediately after the session for the consideration of the party chieftainship and general lines of policy.

Attorney-General Roebuck's expressed hope of accomplishing something towards banning the starvation wage and the sweatshop from Ontario industry was endorsed by his colleagues in the provincial cabinet at a meeting yesterday afternoon and his proposed labour legislation to that end is now to be submitted to a caucus of Liberal members.

London—John H. Labatt, London brewer, victim of a kidnapping gang which held him for three days for a ransom of $150,000 today positively identified David Meisner, Cincinnati and Detroit bookmaker as one of the kidnapers.

Ottawa—The physical growth of Dominion Stores, Limited, and examples of low wages paid by Metropolitan Stores Limited and the United Five Cents to One Dollar Stores of Canada Limited were stressed today when the Mass Buying Commission continued its investigation of chain stores.

O.A.C. TO FORE

Razor keen competition is marking the last stages of the race for play-off berths in the annual struggle for the Mulock Cup, emblematic of intercollegiate football supremacy. Last year's champions, Senior S.P.S., are already out of the running, and the team from Victoria, which was only downed in the finals last November, has failed to enter the semi-finals this autumn.

The lads who play for Senior Dents are taking it easily now, as winners of Group I, they have earned a bye for the finals, having pounded out victories over the senior teams from the Faculties of Medicine and Applied Science. The husky farmers from O.A.C. have been crowned kings of their group (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENTS FAVOUR ESTABLISHMENT OF DEBATE UNION

Would Give Opportunity of Hearing More Noted
Debaters

WOULD INCLUDE WOMEN

Also Strenuous Opposition to Idea on Grounds not Practical

Officials of student organizations in all the different parts of the campus expressed themselves, with some exceptions, heartily in favour of the organization of a debating union in the University. The main reason given for their stand in most cases was that much larger crowds, including women, would be given an opportunity of hearing noted debaters than it is possible to accommodate in the Debates Room of Hart House.

"I consider it an excellent idea," said D. P. Rowland, president of the Undergraduate Association Executive of Knox College. "An opportunity should be given to every student to hear polished debaters, such as those who spoke at Hart House last night. I believe our society would be solidly behind it, and I personally think that the idea would be a great success."

HERMANT AND CRICHTON WIN IN HART HOUSE DEBATE

"That This House is of the Opinion that Pacifism is an Economically and Spiritually Impossible Creed,"

PACIFISM UPHELD BY 218-70 VOTE

"Pacifism means the refusal on the part of any one individual to go to war except, of course, in the case of a League war or class war." Such was the definition of Pacifism laid down by Mr. A. R. Tilley (Trinity) when he rose to support the motion "That This House is of the opinion that Pacifism is an economically and spiritually impossible creed", at the Hart House debate last night. The debate was held in conjunction with the National Federation of Canadian University Students, and among those who took part were Mr. Leslie Jackson of Balliol College, Oxford, and Mr. Robertson Crichton of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The motion was eventually defeated, 218 votes to 70.

Women Students Would Attend Future Intercollegiate Debates

UNANIMOUSLY IN FAVOUR

The presence here of the Oxford-Cambridge debating team, and the importance of the subject under discussion in the debate at Hart House last evening, has given rise to a considerable amount of resentment on the part of the women in the various constituent colleges of the University, owing to the fact that only a very limited number of seats were available for women.

Opinions have been strongly voiced among prominent members of the "fair sex" on the campus, opinions, all of which were unanimously in favour of having some common meeting ground where both men and women could hear and take part in intercollegiate debates.

Mr. Tilley argued that the main reasons for war were economic. "Nations today," he stated, "depend on imports and exports for their very existence. But in recent years they have cut off this life blood by raising tariff barriers. If this continues one nation will, by force of arms, try to break down these barriers and impose its authority upon its neighbours. Such radical change in economic and political structures should come slowly and invariably bring chaos and revolt in their train if they are brought about suddenly by war. What man with the right to call himself a man would not stand up and fight against such an invader?"

Mr. S. M. Hermant (U.C.), replied for the negative with vehemence and was very well accepted. "The absolute pacifist," he said, "is useless in the world today. Pacifism is the only

U.C. HOLOS NOVEL PARTY

On Wednesday evening next, the Women's Union will be the scene of one of the most novel class parties of the year, when the second and third years of University College come together to hold the first joint party in that College's history. Red and white streamers will float throughout the dance floors, that have been the setting of many successful social occasions.

The committee have been extremely fortunate in procuring the services of Murray Armstrong and it has been hinted that he will be aided by another orchestra, whose identity is not yet known. It is expected that refreshments will be served and like all class parties, being a Dutch treat, a good time is in store for the sophs and the juniors.

Of Sense in These There's Not a Trace But Still They Help To Fill Up Space

Gentle reader, prepare yourself for a shock. Get the aspirin all ready. Lean well back in your chair, ready for the impact.

I'll break the news gently and let you guess. In Trinity College women's room there are three brass receptacles. What are they? No, not flower pots, and decidedly NOT cuspidors. They are ash trays.

The Saints have broken the bonds that bound them and this is alleged to be the way it came about. One evening, Robert, the porter, went into the common room after Saints had left and found the air all ready for that far-famed knife-cutting act. He looked for the chairs and after some search found them hiding behind piles of cigarette stubs.

He set off and got the Provost. Then the momentous decision was made. It was better to let the Saints lose their sainthood than have them burn down the college. Hence the ash trays.

The old story might now be written: "Who was that Saint I saw you with last night?"

"That wasn't no Saint, that was one of Nicotine's wives."

If, for the sake of a psychological experiment, you approach your professor sitting quietly in his chair, and pull his hair, tweak his nose or call him a fool, you may notice that your experiment is followed by several interesting physiological and psychological changes. The rate of your subject's heartbeats will increase and the distension of the small veins in his skin will cause him to flush. The frontals muscles will pull down his eyebrows, causing the lines between them which we call a frown. If you watch his upper lip closely you may notice a slight tendency of the corners of his mouth to rise. This is a relic of the snarl of the animals which attack with their powerful canine teeth. You may also notice a tendency of the hair at the back of the gentleman's head to raise itself and stand on end.

The most important bodily change, however (which may make the exact examination of these other changes difficult), will be the impulse to violent behaviour. The subject of your experiment will either strike you, or at least will experience an impulse to

A WORLD WITHIN A WORLD

It is often said that the "average" Londoner—a person who is usefully obscure—is so absorbed in the life and work of his city that the Tower, Madam Tussaud's, the British Museum, and Charlie Brown's are merely to the inquisitive tourist. And if you quote Tennyson at him, he merely mumbles something about the Albert Memorial.

Although the analogy is not an exact one, the "average" University student—a person who is not quite so obscure—often does the same thing. Living in the midst of a microcosm of human existence, he fails to realize what a fascinating epitome of the more complex universe it is.

There is, first of all, its manifold outward life. There are in Toronto—to bring the matter home—facilities for the study of every conceivable subject, from Fine Art to Physiotherapy and from Engineering to Veterinary Science. In Arts, for example, one can study anything, from Thales to Targums of Onkelos. There are facilities, too, for social, intellectual and cultural contacts: the resources of Hart House, for the seeker of pleasure and profit, cannot be exhausted in a mere four years, and the range of such activities in the University as a whole is imposing.

But in any great centre of industry the human element is the most important: humanity with all its interrelated currents of love, of hate, of friendship, of tragedy and romance. In this inner aspect, the University is no less a part of the great world around it, and it is the aspect which we should regard with deepest affection. It is an exciting, cosmopolitan world, for learning knows no tariff regulations.

The University world is often inclined, we admit, to pat itself on the back and to consider itself as, somehow, set apart for a Nobler Purpose. This is quite true: leaders in the University often turn out to be leaders in the nation. It is much healthier, however, to regard our world as merely one of many—exceptional in its opportunities, of course—but still much the same in its reflection of human aspiration and desire. We are, however, young, and to step aside from the hurried procession of life in order to meditate thereon seems to be the peculiar occupation of maturity.

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARDS WAR

In this issue we print a query which is designed to discover the attitude of University student towards war and all the wholesale death and destruction war entails. The questionnaire is one provided by the International Student Service so that they may know what college men and women feel about international conflict. Every student ought to feel it a duty to answer truthfully all the questions for through them will be reflected what Canadian students generally and University of Toronto students specifically think about a problem which is so vastly important to the future of civilization.

Fill in the form immediately and get it into the offices of The Varsity, in Hart House, as soon as possible.

CRITICAL VIEWPOINT AIM OF FINE ART

Professor Alford Traces Development of Art from the Greeks

SERIES OF LECTURES

"The ultimate object of Fine Art is to gain a critical and appreciable viewpoint," stated Professor John Alford last night in his lecture on the "Study and Appreciation of Fine Art" in Convocation Hall. After a brief introduction of his subject, Professor Alford went on to explain his meaning by comparison of the treatment of subject and theme.

Tracing the development of Fine Art from the Egyptian to the Greek, from the Greek to the Roman, the Roman to the Medieval, the Medieval to that of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and from there to the Modern, the speaker went on to point out the characteristics typical of the North and South. The influence of the Normans is essentially Gothic, the South is characteristically Romanesque. The Gothic is mystical and organic, while the Romanesque is of a more practical nature. The Notre Dame in Paris is one of the best examples of the Gothic.

Although the domain of Fine Art is too large to be considered as a whole it holds a universal interest in view of the fact that in some form or other it is of natural interest to every individual.

A series of lectures on this subject will be held in the Royal Ontario Museum beginning a week from Monday.

Art, Music and Drama

The U.C. Players' Guild

Yesterday afternoon the Players' Guild attempted an interesting experiment in presenting Jesse E. Middleton's Lake Dore, one of the prize-winning one-act plays in a Canadian Drama competition several years ago. This experiment is of particular interest to those who are advocating a national drama for Canada, since it typifies one trend in the development of a characteristically Canadian theme.

Mr. Middleton is apparently of that school which believes that a Canadian drama is one in which all elements of similarity with other countries must be absolutely eliminated, and all themes which do not treat of extremely rigorous forms of life are not truly Canadian. In other words, Mr. Middleton would foster that "Frozen North" conception of Canada which presents a very one-sided view of our national life to the people of other countries. This trend in our drama is a dangerous one; it engenders all nature of misconceptions about every phase of Canada, particularly of her natural resources and characters, and it introduces a hysterical note in her problems.

Reg Watters has brought out all the commendable aspects of Lake Dore. His direction of the play shows care and understanding in the development of the theme. As a matter of fact, his presentation does more than justice to the play. Exceptionally fine direction and acting lift it above its own level as a slenderly-themed melodrama.

Dick Fonger was excellent as Luke Parsons. His interpretation of a character which in itself shows no psychological development is the work of a fine actor. He is far surer in his treatment of the melodramatic than Ruth Wood, whose acting falters at times.

The latter's presentation of Stella Kirkman shows a sincere attempt to understand the character she portrays, but a definite sense of being hampered by this great opportunity to overact. She is successful, however, in suggesting scarcely-controlled emotions, rather than actually indulging in complete hysteria. But Dick Fonger takes advantage of the melodrama, revelling in his orgy of anger. Tome Dale, a newcomer to the Guild, gave an exceptionally fine performance as Lawrence. His directness and sincerity are very pleasing, especially in such an exaggeratedly bleak atmosphere.

The setting for Lake Dore was remarkably fine. The barren discomfort of the northern shack was adequately brought out, and the effect of snow against the window and cold northern sunlight streaming in at the doorway was remarkably real. The sound effects were fairly successful. The blare of the wind, which introduced the atmosphere of the play before the rise of the curtain was not so well worked out as the drone of the airplane later in the scene.

This sympathetic presentation of a new type of play shows an admirable progressiveness on the part of the Players' Guild, although it is regrettable that there should be little or no truly fine material in the Canadian drama field.

NO COMPROMISE FOR CHRISTIANITY

Professor E. J. Urwick Addresses Student Christian Movement

SUCCESS PRIME AIM

"After studying the gospel I have come to the conclusion that a Christian cannot compromise with the present industrial system," Professor E. J. Urwick, head of the department of Political Science, told members of the Student Christian Movement yesterday. Professor Urwick was one of the members of Sir Robert Falconer's commission which has been studying the relationship between the Christian Standards and the Social Order.

The speaker felt that it was impossible to place the blame for the present state of affairs on any person or group of persons. The men who are in control today are no less humane than you and I, he declared.

"We have a false estimate of what wealth stands for. Until we get a proper concept of wealth, that it is not worth bothering about except in order to make it possible for us to live a normal life, we cannot consider ourselves Christians," Mr. Urwick thought.

During the course of his address the speaker outlined the growth of capitalism and then vividly pictured some of the appalling conditions that he had seen in Toronto. People living eleven in one room, six sleeping on a couch in a kitchen, these were the results of an economic structure which stressed the profit motive and the freedom of initiative.

"We are taught to succeed, to set out to reach some position in life, a ten thousand dollar a year salary, and that is all that we consider," Professor Urwick declared. "It is difficult for us to forget this and it is this which is keeping us from the brotherhood of Christ."

THE PASS COURSE

The pass course at the University of Toronto enables it to remain the largest university in the British Empire.

C-C

The object of the pass course is to send the graduates into the cold, hard world equipped with enough culture to combat the pitfalls that confront Youth (See "Pilgrim's Progress"). In order to attain such an objective, subjects such as Military Studies are placed on the curriculum. When the graduate has become a respectable commuter, he can estimate at a moment's notice the amount of supplies necessary to last him into the city. Did you ever hear of a graduate starving out NEVER.

C-C

In order to choose your subjects in the pass course, you find out the dates of the social functions for the coming winter and make sure that you do not have any lectures on the following day.

C-C

The A, B, and C standings of the Pass course correspond exactly with the early letters of the alphabet, as in fact do the D standings. The E standings correspond with the Registrar about appeals, supplements, etc.

C-C

In comparison with the Pass Course, Honour Courses are so narrow as to be of absolutely no value, because they teach only one thing. The Pass Course, however, can teach to one person, in three years, such interesting subjects as Biology, Religious Knowledge, Latin, English, and Psychology.

C-C

At the end of this course the student is prepared to enter the conversation at almost any bridge table.

C-C

SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

It caused me some pain as I read the epistle to you, Sir, penned by a Mr. Wilfred Smith, who purports to be and obviously is, a freshman; as well as an authority on science and religion. One cannot but admire his enthusiasm, but his logic, Sir, is abominable.

Admitting the truth of his first statement, namely "true science and true religion cannot conflict, mainly because they have never come near enough to each other," I think we are on common ground. But as a "fool scientist", I should like to point that just as "Scientists become objectionable when they try to expand science outside its own field" so do "fool theologians", become objectionable when they meddle with statements whose purport is wrongly conveyed to them, because it is written in a new language to which they are unaccustomed.

Contrary to his statement that science and religion cannot mix he immediately proceeds to quash two successive scientific facts, made by a Mr. Van Loon, by two theological arguments as old as country parsons; therein mixing the very two fields which he asserted could never mix. Hoping this will aid Mr. Smith to a clarification of his own opinions, I am

Yours sincerely,

L. G. Cook.

HART HOUSE QUARTET HAS HIGH REPUTATION

Clippings sent home by Milton Blackstone, show that the Hart House String Quartet is living up to its reputation for providing superlatives in the smaller centres. "A.A.A.", in the Winnipeg Evening Tribune, during the course of a review almost a column long, waxed most enthusiastically over the performance of the Beethoven Quartet (Op. 127), given by the Hart House four in Winnipeg last week.

"Faced with their tremendous task," he wrote, "our Hart House visitors, more so than ever before, were revealed as artists whose comprehension of such matchless music was never lacking in the fundamentals of the truly adequate."

The Hart House Quartet's next appearance in Toronto will be in Hart House Theatre on Saturday evening, December 15, when with Harold Bauer, the pianist, they will give the Cesare

THE SPORTSWOMAN

The St. Michael's lassies further clinched the group honours when faced by the U.C. Freshies. Their stellar passing and their taking advantage of the breaks convinced the gallery that they will at least put up a good fight for the interfaculty title. The Freshies were rather poor on the defensive which made for a ragged type of contest. Plays did not click and the general outfit seemed to lack coaching. Oodles of personal fouls gave a free scoring title for the San Miguel's. U.C.'s chances went up the flue after the half time. Little Minnie, a Freshie, who follows all the games religiously, remarked "Gad, what a game! I could do better myself."

Personal fouls were scored at The Varsity staff Donsant a Souper last night. Black and blue shins bore mute testimony to the rough-house tactics of the staff huskies. The congealed syn-copation with muted trumpets inspired the female members of the staff to retaliate. When the final whistle blew during a blue number, the girls were rather groggy and inclined to be a bit snappish. When asked about the dance, one poor girl who was still conscious, wearily yammered, "fun and games".

Considerable excitement is in store for the mushball fans when the ball teams swing into action wherever floor space is available. The Meds-U.C.-app-Public Health-Social Science nine S.P.S.-Household Science-Physiother have definitely combined to form a fighting squad ready to do or die for the old faculty, and spirit should run high.

Stiff opposition may be expected from the Scarlet and Gold and the aggregation from St. Mike's, who will oppose this fighting contingent tooth and nail. Reports from the sand-lot would indicate an early crop of diamond debutantes. The game scheduled for tonight will not come off but the girls will be all ready to enter the fray tomorrow.

MEDICOS CONVENE HERE NEXT YEAR

By an almost unanimous vote the Association of American Medical Colleges have chosen Toronto to be the seat of their annual meeting in October, 1935.

Dr. E. Stanley Ryerson, who has had an illustrious record as member and chairman of the Committee on Educational Policies, has been re-appointed chairman for the coming year. Dr. Ryerson is well known throughout the medical profession through his position as assistant Dean and secretary of the Faculty of Medicine of the University of Toronto.

His excellent services have found recognition in the fact that the association and its Executive Council have seen fit to re-appoint Dr. Ryerson year after year.

PHARMACY-DENTS TIE IN SOCCER

U.C. Defeats Meds in Close Struggle, Scoring Difficult

FAST LAST HALF

University College cinched their group honours for the Arts Faculty trophy, by defeating Meds 2-0 in an interfaculty soccer game on the front campus yesterday afternoon. Dents and Pharmacy struggled futilely to break a 1-1 tie on the other half of the front campus.

The former game was very close in the first half. Neither team was able to crack the ice and score. U.C. had perhaps a slight advantage on the territorial play, but the Meds' toe artists gave Bryden a few anxious moments on their attacks. In the second half U.C. really turned it on and proceeded to show the Medical students what it was all about. They repeatedly ganged the Meds' goal and were unfortunate not to pile up a larger score. McPherson was responsible for both tallies and was easily the outstanding player on the field.

Dents opened the scoring in their game when Stapleton hoofed a point about midway through the first half. Pronger tied it up soon after the final stanza commenced. Play saw-sawed continuously up and down the field all through the contest. For the Dents H. Mason was a tower of strength on the defense and thwarted many efforts of the Druggists to score. Wilton looked very good on the forward line as well as Sully and Pronger. For the Dents, Stapleton looked about the best, and he was ably supported by Wier and Lankin.

U.C.: Bryden, Jack, R. McKay, Toy, Johnson, Self, Golding, McPherson, Rae, Errington, Daly, L. McKay. Meds: Outerbridge, Parks, Robinson, Greenwood, Cadie, Sinclair, Lor, Black, Green, Epping, Feldman, MacDonald, Snide, Singer.

Referee: Rowland.

Dents: Cowan, H. Mason, Sprott, Mackie, McColl, Galbraith, Wier, Pon, Stapleton, L. Mason, Lankin, Brown, Ryan, Rockman.

Pharmacy: Rheinart, Armor, Jackson, Ramsay, McIntyre, Blythe, Stevens, Sully, Pronger, Ballantyne, Wilton, Lazarus.

Referee: Cochrane.

WYCLIFFE ARE VICTORS IN VOLLEYBALL TOURNEY

Emmanuel B Team Defeated in Hard Fought Game

The Wycliffe volleyball team moved up a notch from the cellar position when they outplayed Emmanuel B 15-9, 12-15, 15-11, in Hart House upper gym yesterday afternoon. The Anglians avenged themselves for a defeat by Emmanuel earlier in the season and won on their steadier play.

Wycliffe took the first game rather easily, winning nine points in a row with Newton Smith serving. Emmanuel rallied to win the second game, showing occasional flashes of good ball.

Neither team displayed much ability or interest in the first two games but the third was an exhibition of keenly contested volleyball. With the score changing hands several times with no scoring, Wycliffe slowly added lone points to win the game.

Fairweather and Smith played well for Wycliffe. Don Amos played a good game for Emmanuel.

Wycliffe: Fairweather, Smith, Morissey, Ruch, Emmet, Nickle, Patterson, Simmons.

Emmanuel B: Amos, Griffith, Boyd, Kewley, East, Gordon.

Referee: Crockower.

Engineering Society

Mr. W. D. Black was the speaker at a well-attended meeting of the Engineering Society yesterday afternoon. His address was on a subject of vital importance to students of engineering—"Construction—its Economic Past and its Possibilities". The meeting opened with the usual rendering of "School" songs by the audience.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

One of the most spectacular victories of the season was that of the Varsity Juniors in their triumphant march toward an intercollegiate championship. The junior edition of the Blue team are now the intercollegiate champions of eastern Canada. And the junior edition of the Blue team have won but one game this season. That victory was chalked up in an O.R.F.U. fixture Saturday. It was originally intended that Varsity would have the bye into the finals but now it appears that Bishop's College have won the eastern division and cannot see their way clear to finance the trip here for the playoffs. As a result the Varsity juniors are champions through the default of the eastern club.

By the same method the juniors can claim the Dominion title as the West will not challenge. This would leave them with a Dominion intercollegiate championship, without having played one intercollegiate fixture and having won only their last start in the O.R.F.U. series in which they operated. This appears to us to be a unique method of winning a title. They may of course challenge for the O.R.F.U. title through the intercollegiate but it is not likely that they will pursue this course. There is always opposition to this move and the "second chance" alibi never tends to make any team popular.

In the meantime the intermediates are preparing for their battle with Bishop's College here Saturday. The winner of this tilt will meet the winner of the McMaster-O.A.C. game here the following week. Aggies put Varsity out last season but whether they will meet again this year is still doubtful. Bishop's College are reputed to have a strong team, while McMaster and O.A.C. are also very good.

The big battle of the week will, of course, be the meeting of the Queen's-Varsity teams in their playoff game at the Stadium. This should attract one of the largest crowds of the season to the Bloor Street oval. There are seldom many dull moments when these two traditional rivals clash regardless of how unimportant the contest may be and with the intercollegiate title at stake the game should be in a class by itself. Varsity will be at the peak of their form, but Queen's will probably be stronger than at any previous time this season. At any rate we would not advise any one to stay home and rake the leaves off the lawn when these teams face each other this week.

Hockey is once more back on the sports calendar and from the activity in evidence at Varsity Arena the Blue team is going to be heard from this year. The three men from Ottawa have been very impressive to date, and look like the makings of a new and formidable line. MacPherson, Hendry and McLelland are also doing good work up in front, while many newcomers have been much in evidence. Close to forty men have been turning out to the practices during the week. Out of this there will be selected the senior team who will operate in the Senior O.H.A., and an intermediate team who will be entered in the T.H.L. The juniors will be playing in the O.H.A. series, probably in the same loop as last season.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock the Parliamentary Club of University College will debate the subject "Resolved that Socialism cannot be attained through Parliamentary means." The debate will follow the usual procedure; both the Prime Minister and the leader of the Opposition will speak.

This afternoon's debate marks the return of the club to serious topics. The members feel that a subject of the kind to be presented today holds greater interest both for the debaters and the audience, than do those which have been presented during the past few weeks.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS HEAR OF BOULDER DAM

Special Precautions for Delivery of Enormous Horsepower

The striking feature of the Boulder Dam power development, as outlined to the Toronto section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, is the enormous scale on which the entire project is being carried out. The address was given by Mr. O. W. Titus, a graduate of this University, who has spent some time at the scene of operations in the Electrical Building, Friday night.

The Colorado River, across which the dam is being built, is the sole drainage for a large portion of the mountainous area of the south-west. It carries such a huge volume of water that four diversion tunnels, each fifty feet in diameter, were required to carry the river past the dam while it was under construction.

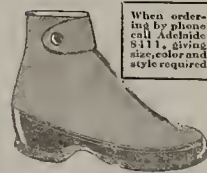

The subject of particular interest to the meeting was the transmission lines which distributed the 1,350,000 horsepower generated at the site to many of the important centres of the south-western states. Special precautions are being taken to ensure absolute continuity of service over the power line leading to Los Angeles, since it is to become the sole source of power for that city.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

NEED PSYCHIATRIST MAJORITY BELIEVE

Schoolman Endorses Idea, as do Law Students and Co-eds

"Being a practical Schoolman, I think that we really need a psychiatrist. I believe it should be included in the medical examination. Around School there are many maladjusted individuals who are not suited to their environment." Thus spoke Art Northover, JTG S.P.S., when asked his opinion concerning the appointment of a psychiatrist for students to consult.

D. Vane, III Law, stated: "I think that too many people enter University courses without any definite knowledge of the value of that training, in so far as they themselves are concerned. To adjust that difficulty, a psychiatrist would indeed be useful. I think it is a social problem really."

J. Mirsky, also of Law, concurred in this view, adding: "Most useful and in some cases necessary—especially for a naive freshman who has need of advice and no authoritative source from which to get it. Advice with regard to the choosing of a profession can often be most accurately given by a trained psychiatrist."

Two co-eds, who preferred to remain anonymous, declared that there was a decided need for one, as it would be much easier to tell one's troubles to a stranger with unbiased opinions than to a member of the family or a friend. Miss M. Drummond, III U.C., agreed with this opinion, declaring that many people have problems that could be solved better in this way.

It is in the third group that the bitterest battle is being waged. The game that was scheduled for yesterday afternoon, between Jr. Meds and Trinity, has been postponed until today since the black and red squad played games on both Monday and Tuesday. The teams will clash at the Stadium this afternoon; the kickoff whistle will be blown at 2 o'clock. The winners of this struggle will have several days' respite before facing the gridiron veterans from Guelph to determine which team will challenge the Senior Dentists in the finals. The semi-final tilt will be held on Tuesday next, November 20th, at the Stadium, the game being scheduled to start at half past two. Definite arrangements about the final game have not yet been made.

VALENCE THEORIES GIVEN AT LECTURE

Theories of Chemical Reactions Are Explained by Dr. Barnes

PHYSICS SEMINAR

"In 1700 it was discovered, in mechanics, that mechanical explanation is a necessity if a physical phenomena is to be explained. This belief remained till the nineteenth century when there was an intense study of electro-magnetism." With these opening words, Dr. C. Barnes proceeded to explain "Modern Theories of Valence". This, the second of Dr. Barnes' lectures on this subject, was given last Friday evening in the Physics Building.

Matter consists of positively charged protons and negatively charged electrons. The Corpuscular Theory of light has become indispensable in the study of physics. Furthermore, it is necessary to explain the absorption of light by atoms.

Recently very successful mechanical rules have been developed but they will not apply to atoms. According to Dr. Barnes, "The trouble with atoms is that they won't work with Newtonian rules."

The property of an electron is only found when moving around a particle as a wave. Dr. Barnes showed the effects of coupled oscillations in the movements of two pieces of string and also through the operation of a little transmitter of short waves. With atoms, coupling means the forces between the electrons which couple them.

In the chemical combination of two hydrogen atoms, energy flows rapidly from one to the other. The energy principle is a valuable guide in atomic phenomena. If energy has a minimum value, these two hydrogen atoms come to rest according to the theory of Minimum Potential Energy which is a fairly satisfactory theory. This theory brought to an end the explanation of the solved problems of valence.

PLAN ESSENTIAL IN DECORATING

Choose Important Points and Then Emphasize Them

"The first essential in furnishing a room, after having decided on its dominating lines, is to form a plan," said Miss Evelyn Hamilton, addressing the group interested in interior decorating, yesterday afternoon at the Museum. "Choose the important points for emphasis and arrange around them artistic groups of furniture. These points may be niches, fireplaces, corners, long wall spaces or unusual windows." The second essential is to have a material and a type of wood, that harmonize with the woodwork in a room. Certain periods may be mixed, but this must be done judiciously.

The young married couple of average income are advised to plan their house with a view to the future. "Have at least one beautiful piece and use it as a yardstick." Too little is very preferable to too much, for over the years interesting additions can be made, if the room is not cluttered with mediocrities. With an income of $2,000 per year, we should purchase a house worth $4,000 and furniture worth $2,000 and spread the cost over several years.

Until recently, the guest bedroom, the drawing room and the dining room were furnished with the best. But now, the modern family enjoys and demand comfort, with the result that the rooms most in use receive the best furniture.

thing that can prevent the world from having a new war in the future, but to have pacifism we must fight to enforce peace as well as refusing to fight for any other reason. Nations are coming to realize that they cannot slink by themselves in a corner and this applies especially in the matter of economies."

Mr. L. Jackson (Oxford), was the first speaker from the floor and he took the side of the "ayes". The growth of logic and philosophy are to blame, he thought, for the present chaotic state of the world. "There is no inborn tendency in man to fight for more glory and love of fighting," he said. "That theory is tenable but outworn. However, man does possess the instinct of self-preservation, and to a very high degree; this and the desire for justice are the things that make men fight."

Now Cambridge, in the person of Mr. R. Crichton, took the floor. "What a relief," he exclaimed, "after tossing on the Atlantic, turning political problems over in our minds and more pressing problems elsewhere in our anatomy, to be switched away from the rough Atlantic to this gentle motion of the pacifist." Admitting his great debt to his country, Mr. Crichton said that he couldn't see how he would be able to serve his country if he were to go and get shot in the next war. "War has been commercialized," he stated. "Sir John Gilmour even, has 3,066 shares in Armstrong Vickers, the firm that stopped its munitions making for two minutes to commemorate the death of the men that died in the War to Stop Wars." Both Mr. Crichton and Mr. Jackson were very well received, and their speeches brought great gusts of clapping.

"That pacifism, to function at all, must have no racial differences in its way, no economic competition, and no individualist spirit," was the contention of J. D. Brumke (U.C.). On the other hand, "That another war means not only a further and greater loss of life but virtual extermination," was the point emphasized in a speech by J. S. Woods (Trinity).

Such famous men as J. R. P. Selater, D.D., Col. Cockburn of the C.O.T.C. and Col. Hamilton, were also speakers on one side of the House or the other. "Governments," said the Rev. J. R. P. Selater, "are not the villainous things they are made out to be; they are merely not brainy enough to cope with the modern situation." Col. Cockburn and Col. Hamilton both stood up staunchly for their profession but Professor McDougall, of the History Department of the University, himself a soldier once, showed himself a true pacifist.

Others who spoke were W. C. Smith (U.C.), C. Ignatieff (Trinity), S. F. Gray, M. Wynn (U.C.), W. Curry (Vic), A. Harris, T. Keenan, and K. M. Mayall of the Faculty of Forestry. After the ladies in the gallery had been welcomed and many times referred to in the course of the evening, the last named brought the debate to a close with the words, "You and I, Mr. Speaker, with the co-operation of the gallery up there, must have pacifist children and lots of them, if we really desire peace."

When a ballot had been taken it was announced that the motion had been badly defeated by 218 votes to 70 votes for the affirmative.

STUENTS FAVOUR DEBATING UNION

T. C. Keenan, president of the Forum Club, was also very enthusiastically in favour of the idea. "I think it would serve as a great impetus to debating throughout the University, both among men and women. The majority of the members of the club are actively interested in debating, and would support the idea."

S. M. Hermant, one of the debaters at Hart House last night, and president of the University College Literary and Athletic Association, expressed an opinion that the idea of a debating union was not practical. "Hart House debates have a character of their own, and the idea of transferring them to Convocation Hall whenever an outstanding speaker comes along would be ridiculous." He pointed out that debates had been held in the library of Trinity College recently, at which women were welcome, and the combined attendance of both women and men did not exceed fifty persons.

E. M. Auger, president of the Victoria College Debating Parliament, was also opposed to the idea, on the grounds that practically every faculty has its debating parliament, and so such an organization wasn't needed. He believed that the students themselves would be discouraged from debating, if outside debaters were brought in. However, he pointed out that this was a strictly personal view, and he could not say just what attitude his society would take on the question.

CO-EOS PRESENT AT FUTURE DEBATES

"There certainly ought to be some provision made for the women of the University to hear the intercollegiate debates, since part of the money they pay to the S.A.C. goes for the purpose of holding such debates. Convocation Hall might prove too large for the purpose, and no fee should be charged unless this applied also to the men. Support from about fifty women members of Vic could be expected for such a plan."

Miss Marion Ridout, U.C., Vice-President of the Debating Union: "There decidedly should be somewhere where women also could hear such debates as the one last night, but Convocation Hall is not the place. Debating is not popular enough among the students to fill the hall to any reasonable degree. Trinity library would be much better for the purpose. The reason for the clamour for tickets by the women is only another illustration of the 'forbidden fruits' idea. If the debates were made public, the suspense would be found decidedly lacking. Entrance into the sacred precincts of Hart House is the drawing card now."

Miss Edna Gray of the Debating Society of St. Joseph's College: "The idea of holding the intercollegiate debates where they would be available for the women of the University is an excellent one. The women of St. Joseph's have shown a considerable interest in debating, and although a minority numerically, would give full support to the debates. Convocation Hall would be a fine place to hold them, although it is too large to be filled to capacity. The admittance fee should be left to the authorities."

BLUES MEET TRICOLOUR HERE FOR TITLE TO-MORROW

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Manila—As a result of a typhoon in the Philippines, thousands are now homeless—20,000 in the city of Naga alone. Eleven provinces are cut off from communication with Manila. Only a few wireless stations are left. The Danish steamship Noramsuk has wrecked there she is in danger.

Algiers—Archaeologists believe that recent excavations have uncovered ancient Carthage. Complete villas, flag-stone streets, temples and other records of life in the second and third centuries of the Roman and early Christian eras, have been dug out of the North African sands.

London—Authoritative quarters last night emphatically denied rumours that Britain and the United States were considering the possibility of a naval agreement between themselves.

Ottawa—That Hon. Peter Heenan's plan to spend $17,000,000 in Northern Ontario is simply a political ruse, is the charge which is being openly heard on Parliament Hill here.

Ottawa—Improvement in railway earnings, constantly mounting national revenues, and savings through lowered interest rates on government borrowing, have combined to paint a much and make more pleasant reading of the happier picture of Canada's finances budget to be presented at the next session of parliament.

Goslar, Germany—Nazi decree has standardized the quality of bread for all Germany.

ETHICAL TRAINING OF CHILD DISCUSSED

Duty of Teacher is to Give Moral Training to Youth Indirectly

HOME MOST IMPORTANT

"The duty of the teacher is to give moral training indirectly. Mere ethical maxims, in copy-book fashion would be most unsuccessful in the lower school curriculum," said G. S. Brett, commenting on the suggestion to introduce the teaching of formal ethics into the schools.

Spectacular Sale Of Various Articles Held By Schoolmen

A perambulator, a tremendous stein, other household articles, and a School Dinner ticket of amazing proportions, were amongst the objects that went on the Block at a spectacular Auction Sale in front of the School of Science Building yesterday afternoon. A crowd of nearly six hundred students from all faculties watched the top hatted and red whiskered Auctioneer pound the gavel and receive the bids. Competition was keen, the perambulator bringing a cool ten thousand to lead the field, with the School Dinner ticket lagging in the rear with a much repeated bid of seventy-five cents, spot cash in paper money, also of tremendous proportions. A cornet accompaniment enlivened the proceedings by rendering the well known "How Dry I Am" and other suitable selections.

ANTI-WAR QUESTIONNAIRE AROUSSES VARIED COMMENT

Members of Faculty do not Consider Opinion of Students Now Would Determine Their Action in Time of War; Co-Eds Are on the Whole Pacifists; Function of Questionnaire in Stimulating Thought Lauded.

The questionnaire of the International Students' Service, published in yesterday's issue of The Varsity, coupled with the Hart House debate on Pacifism, has provoked a great deal of controversy around the campus, and although many students do not wish to express themselves for publication, the majority is definitely inclined to the pacifist point of view. The questionnaire is a series of pointed questions on the subject of war, which is designed to provoke some expression along more definite lines than those which are adopted by many of the general public whose thinking on the subject is often disorganized.

Students Voice Opinions

Toronto co-eds are not at all backward about expressing their views concerning war and peace as evoked by the questionnaire appearing in today's Varsity, but few of them have any constructive suggestions to offer. The general feeling, however, is that of definite pacifism. "War is a very great menace to our civilization," declared Lilian Karmalska, II St. Michael's. "I would never support a government engaged in war for in my opinion no wars are justifiable. In fact I would oppose it in every possible way." Betty Bealey, president of the University College women's S.C.M., said that she was completely against war in every respect and she felt that if public opinion could only be moulded so that the masses would take a definite stand for peace there might be a ray of hope for pacifism.

Lynette Roddy, II B. and M., felt that, although people talked a great deal about their hatred of war, they were not moved to take any definite stand. "That Anti-War paper published last year was a definite flop. Students just are not interested. It does not strike near enough home. I'd have to get my father to fill out that questionnaire—I don't know enough about it myself."

One exchange student from Manitoba said that the questionnaire itself was at fault. "Any country can manufacture propaganda enough to justify either side and thoroughly convince the average citizen of any nation that he has right on his side. You simply cannot say whether war is justifiable or not. Moreover there is no danger of Canada's invasion under any circumstances." (Continued on Page 4)

Faculty Express Views

Among the women members of the faculty of the University there seemed to be a general lack of interest concerning the "questionnaire" in yesterday's Varsity. Miss J. Macpherson of Victoria and Miss M. Cartwright of St. Hilda's together with several others, refused to give any opinion.

However, Mrs. Creighton of Victoria said she was in favour of anything making one think more seriously on the problems of war, but she added, a questionnaire taken in academic circles would be of very little value, because the final decision of a war is made in a highly emotional atmosphere. Mrs. M. Kirkwood, U.C., was in favour of the questionnaire as a constructive move towards peace. She also commented that it was likely to contain radical views, which would lessen its value. Mrs. Kirkwood advocated that anti-war movements should endeavour to secure the more conservative element and the movement would thereby be much stronger.

Dr. V. Mueller of St. Michael's College, expressed her view that student opinion could do very little towards averting a war. But from the ranks of the University students, the leaders of our country arise, and in this way only can the influence of pacifism encouraged in the University be made manifest.

Professor N. A. Mackenzie and Professor J. R. Cockburn, when interviewed by The Varsity yesterday as to their opinion of the questionnaire, stated that the questionnaire would not prove what the action of the students would be in time of war, but would show what their attitude was at the present time.

Winter Sing Song

The winter series of Sing Songs will begin today. Mr. Ross Workman will again direct these between 1.30 and 2 p.m. in the East Common Room, Hart House, when an interesting group of songs will be sung.

MANITOBA CO-EDS BARRED FROM SPORT

Women's Association Forbid Girls to Join Outside Team

NEEOEO IN COLLEGE SPORTS

Winnipeg, Manitoba—Two girls were barred from all University athletics at the University of Manitoba after they had applied to the Women's Association Council for a release in order to play with city teams in Winnipeg. The girls, Doris Perry and Vange Howe, had made their application at the same time that Che Drover had made hers and was successful in obtaining permission to play basketball for a non-University organization.

The two penalized have been members of a city team, the Northern Lights, and for this and for other reasons they prefer not to play for the U.M.S.U. teams. The council, however, was of the opinion that the constitution should be rigidly enforced. (Continued on Page 4)

BOBBY COULTER

Fast Varsity quarterback, who is expected to play a stellar role in tomorrow's crucial struggle.

JR. MEDS VANQUISH TRINITY GRIDDERS

Now Enter Semi-Finals in Contest for Mulock Cup

BARRON SCORES TOUCH

Two titans of the gridiron clashed yesterday on the back campus when Trinity and Jr. Meds met to determine which team would enter the semi-finals for the Mulock Cup. When the smoke of battle had cleared away the Meds were out in front by an 11-5 count. The game was a re-play of a previous tie game which was called on account of darkness.

Meds demonstrated that they weren't fooling in the first minute of play when Belton snared a forward from Newton to register a 50 yard gain. Newton then hoisted one over the line for point number one. Immediately following this Trinity lost 15 yards when A'Court had his kick blocked. A'Court then fooled one, giving Meds possession. Medlock tore through for yards and on the next play Newton counted again with a lengthy boot over the line.

During the second quarter Trinity messed up an end run and were extremely fortunate to recover. A moment later a Medical end run went haywire and Trinity recovered. The pigskin changed hands again almost immediately when Meds intercepted a forward. Newton lifted a beautiful hoist which Rudcock fumbled, giving the Meds possession on the Red and Black 20 yard line, from which position Newton made it 3-0.

Meds gained 50 yards on two end runs by Newton and Barker and kicked. (Continued on Page 3)

ONLY ONE GAME SEPARATES VARSITY FROM THIRD CHAMPIONSHIP IN ROW

FORCE REPUDIATED IN U.C. PARLIAMENT

Government Defeated by Vast Majority in Yesterday's Session

DISCUSS DEBATES UNION

"Only by an insurrectionary overthrow of the capitalistic class can we divest the capitalistic class from the control of industry and government," Prime Minister Mr. Wayman, said in addressing the U.C. Parliament yesterday afternoon. He was speaking in defence of the bill, "Resolved that Socialism cannot be obtained by present parliamentary means."

Forsaking the characteristic levity of the last few weeks the U.C. Parliament has again occupied itself with matters of grave political significance. The Rt. Hon. Mr. Wayman continued his introductory speech by tracing the history of the Social Democratic party in Germany, their failure to socialize Germany due to the influence of capitalism; and finally their identification with Fascism.

"But if we had enough education and proper propaganda the majority of the people would vote for a government which by an intelligent policy could bring, of its own accord, satisfactory socialism," replied the Hon. W. C. Smith, leader of the opposition.

The question was taken up by both sides of the House with earnest vociferations. Gradually the enthusiasm on the part of the opposition speakers made itself noticed. "Force is necessary to dislodge the capitalists from their vicious control of the state. They are too firmly entrenched . . . their power must be overthrown in being minute detail," elaborated speakers for the government. "Parliamentary system fluctuates, the governments change the systems to protect themselves," were some of the words of Hon. M. Loeb in supporting the government.

Teams Even in Encounters This Season; Both Squads in the Pink

'BREAKS' LIKELY TO DECIDE

With only one game between them and their third consecutive intercollegiate title the Varsity senior squad will clash with the Queen's Ironmen at Varsity Stadium on Saturday in what bids fair to be the most spectacular game of the season. Optimism reigns supreme in the Blue camp despite the fact that the home and home games of the two colleges ended with a win each and a tie in points scored.

A glance at past performances is sufficient to show that, in all probability, breaks will prove the deciding factor in the game. Playing inspired football in their first encounter, the Tricolour, by taking advantage of fumbles, scored a 4-3 win over the Queen City students and accounted for the latter's only defeat of the season. In the return game the Blue and White rosters were treated to a grandstand finish when Bobby Coulter returned a kick in the last seven seconds of play to put the Blues on top 7-6.

Varsity will be at full strength since four of the boys who have been on the injured list are all set and ready to go. Bobby Ibbister, after a two week layoff, will be back in uniform and ready to take up the kicking duties and thereby should give Varsity an edge in this department of the play. The return of Jack Dawson, the flying wing, Ken Harris, middle, and Butch Alison, outside, will be welcome additions to the line.

The rest of the team is in the pink of condition. The half line reads like a coach's dream, being made up of Cam Gray, whose placements and singles, augmented by the odd touch or two have given him the leadership in scoring points in the intercollegiate union; Art Upper, a speedy runner; Bobby Webber, the flashy plunging and running back, and Ibbister, who boots them the proverbial mile.

New Varsity Song To Be Introduced This Saturday

This Saturday at the football classic in the Bloor St. Stadium, a new Varsity song, entitled "Varsity Spirit", will be introduced to Toronto by Captain John Slater and the University band. Dedicated to the Alma Mater, the music of this composition was written by Alex Ross, a graduate of 1933 and the words by Albert Hamby, a graduate of the Ontario College of Art. Copies of the song will be given out at the game.

Refrain—
Get in on your toes,
Now the whistle blows,
Get in there for dear old Varsity,
Each man do his share, win or lose play fair,
That's the Spirit of old Varsity.

Let us give a cheer, for our college dear,
Give a cheer for dear old Varsity;
Victory's in sight, get out there and fight.

For our University.
Interlude—
Let us cheer each Senior and Sophomore,
Grads and Frosh, like we've never cheered before.

Go out and win the game, my boys,
For Alma Mater's fame,
For the fame of Varsity.

Repeat Refrain—
Now the whistle blows—etc.

WE EMBARK

With this issue of The Varsity a new editor takes the helm, in an attempt to steer a clear course between Scylla and Charybdis, the Students' Administrative Council, and the reading public. The responsibility of guiding the destinies of the student paper is not a small one. The passage is often difficult, and while many captains in the past have been lost, the ship has survived the storms, and still retains as its objective the best interests of the student body.

In our editorial policy we will attempt to fulfil our duty to the students by publishing a newspaper which will embrace all matters, whatever they may be, of genuine interest to the students. Our endeavour will be to make our news and editorial columns unbiased and free from influence, with malice toward none.

GOOD LUCK, BLUE TEAM!

Before the sun sets tomorrow fifteen thousand ardent fans will have cheered the Blue and White to victory or defeat. Regardless of the outcome, the spectators will witness yet another exhibition of the dauntless spirit and clean tactics which have featured the efforts of the Varsity team throughout the season. The student body is solidly behind them in their attempt to capture, once again, the coveted Intercollegiate Championship, and while we shall be among the first to say "May the best team win", we venture to hope that Varsity will prove superior.

There is a touch of college spirit at a football game which can never invade the sanctity of the lecture room, and the lessons of courage, loyalty, and manhood displayed on the gridiron can not be found elsewhere. It is true that bitter words are often shouted in the frenzy of excitement, but the friendly rivalry of the day inevitably leads to closer relationship and better understanding afterwards. True sportsmanship and team play stand out above the glamour of the occasion as ideals, and teach a lesson that could scarcely come from professors' lips. Then, there is something about a crisp autumn Saturday afternoon which creates an atmosphere of its own, and an additional something about a championship game on such a day that transforms sour-faced student, corpulent graduate, and staid professor alike into a mob that cheers or groans in keeping with the situation.

The Tricolour, handicapped as they have been by the loss of several of their best players, have proved themselves worthy opponents for the best team which Varsity can put on the field. To Warren Stevens and his players we convey the best wishes of the student body, and join them in saying "Good luck, Blue team, good luck."

COMMENT

Elsewhere in today's issue appear the words of "Varsity Spirit", a new college song written by two graduates of the University, which is to be presented for the first time by Captain Slatter and the Blue and White Band at the Stadium tomorrow. Copies of the song will be distributed at the game, and efforts will be made to test its popularity by mass singing under the direction of the band.

RAILWAY PROGRESS TOPIC OF LECTURE

With Growth of Railway the Importance of Canada Increased

AIDED BY IMMIGRATION

"The physical development of modes of transportation is interwoven with the changing needs of a country." Such was the statement illustrated by Professor G. P. de T. Glazebrook in his lecture in West Hall last evening.

A railway in the period of French domination would have been as absurd as the employment of birch bark canoes for travel today. To link scattered peoples together, to carry supplies from east and west and to facilitate transportation is the aim of a railway and since early Canada had only 280,000 inhabitants, such problems were not dominant.

It was during the industrial revolution that the zeal for expansion and desire for commerce was carried to America and, supplemented by immigration from European countries, voiced itself in the need of a railway. The problems of the Canadian winter with its deep snowfall were overcome after many suggestions, of which one was the construction of rails three feet above the ground, and by 1860 Canada possessed 2065 miles of rails. The main spur to the railway boom which flourished in the last half of the 19th century was the granting of subsidies, instituted by Francis Hincks; (Continued on Page 4)

Eaton Auditorium

Madam Sigrid Onegin, contralto, was the concert artist last night in the Eaton Auditorium Concert Series. The world-wide renown of Sigrid Onegin is easily understood when one has heard the magnificent voice which she possesses. An extraordinary range from deep rich contralto to crystal clear soprano with an ease and smoothness of production that merits deepest respect. The charm and grace of Madam Onegin's personality, and her artless and unaffected manner are captivating indeed. It is well that this is so for the majority of us must look to the artist for the cue, when not more than a few songs are intelligible in their foreign verse. It is inevitable and right that art songs should be sung in the original but a group in English would be deeply appreciated by the less erudite.

Madam Onegin is essentially a dramatic artist. It is this strong and native genius that impresses one rather than a consummate artistry. It is song primarily of the "heart", intuitive rather than studied. The short programme was such as to bear out the above impression. A group of Schubert's more moving lieder and a dashing group of folk songs together with two operatic arias completed the song recital. The not outstanding accompanist contributed a group of lighter piano pieces in the same style as his accompanying. F.B.S.

At the 7 o'clock Choral Evensong the Rector will preach, and the Choir will sing an excerpt from Dr. Moore's cantata, "The Darkest Hour". "God so loved the world", the soprano obligato, will be sung by five boy soloists.

Owing to an unfortunate accident, the I.S.S. peace questionnaire has been confused with the Date Bureau Registration form, owing to certain post-prandial symptoms displayed by The Varsity's night staff. Therefore, we request that nobody send us the answers because we can't be bothered deciphering them. Just send the time to us, and the answers to Col. ### SR. S.P.S. DEFEAT SR. MEDS

In an interfaculty volleyball fixture played yesterday afternoon, Sr. S.P.S. defeated Sr. Meds by the scores of 15-10, 3-11, 11-4. An unusual feature of the game was that only four Medicals opposed the six Schoolmen until after the start of the third game when the former team acquired another man.

After losing the first game, the Doctors rallied, disorganizing their opponents, and took the game to tie the series. However, the Engineers came

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

So far only one game has been played in the interfaculty baseball series. Vic downed St. Mike's in an exciting and fairly close game and showed itself to possess a pitcher and a catcher against whom the other two nines are going to have a pretty tough time. A game was scheduled for last night at 6 p.m. at the Vic gym—the first of the Medley team's home games. The mongrel outfit had to default this match because they were unable to have a full team out. However tonight the Vic team are entertaining for the Medley squad at the Vic gym at 6 o'clock and it is definitely expected that this contest will come off as arranged.

Vic will probably have no trouble carrying off the honours this evening since this is really the initial appearance of the Medley girls as a complete and organized whole. They certainly have had a lot to contend with and deserve a big hand when they take their positions on the field (or rather floor) tonight. Vic turned out well to support their representatives on Monday so we're counting on as much this time. And surely this Medley aggregation has aroused some curiosity!

There is a lull in basketball proceedings until 6 p.m. on Monday, November 19, at which hour St. Hilda's meet the Nurses for a second time. This will doubtless be a fairly easy victory for the Saints, although we are expecting the Public Health sextette to give them a harder battle than before as they have been steadily improving. It is not until Friday, Nov. 23 that there will be a really exciting bout for then Vic Seniors play U.C. Seniors in a return game and it will be a fight to the finish. On it rests the Scarlet and Gold first team's chances to get on the final rung and they are out to do it even though U.C. is equally keen to keep them in the cellar.

Yesterday the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada got under way. Women delegates from the far corners of this vast dominion are congregated in our fair city to make arrangements, plans, etc., for a uniform guidance of women's sports during the coming year. The big discussion yesterday was the old matter of "prep. by pop."—as it were. The Ontario and Quebec Federations have by far the largest enrolments but as things stand their votes are worth no more than the smaller organizations from the other provinces.

WATER POLO SERIES BEGINS TOMORROW

Saturday night will see Varsity's natatorial team go splashing into action in the opening Ontario Amateur Water Polo League game. St. Catharines will be the scene of the first engagement, and will see the Blue team renew their feud with the Flower City swimmers.

The Varsity team has been very impressive in their practices, having won their first start, an exhibition tilt, with Central Y by 7-1. The crew has many new members, but their performances to date have indicated that they are equally as strong as last year's contingent.

Creedy McCatty, Morton Devitt, Alex Culliner, Merv Twibbe and Murphy are some of the newcomers to the ranks. Eric Davey, Earl Bancroft, Winice McCatty and Bruce Hardy complete the line-up.

The team is captained this year by Eric Davey, and coached by Doug Light.

back to display their true form and won the last game by a good margin. By mutual agreement, the last two games were played only to eleven points.

Every man on the Meds' team played an excellent game, while Royle and Demitilly showed fine form with S.P.S.

S.P.S.: Royle, Sweet, Farrar, Demitilly, Goach, Bryce; subs, Brigham, Sidi, Ewens, Ryan.
Meds: Gold, Rosenbaum, Saunders, Scher, Snid.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Tonight the boys from the residences will have another weary vigil in anticipation of the advent of a squad of Queen's supporters, who may or may not attempt to decorate the inevitable goalposts up at Mr. Workman's heath on Bloor Street. The reception that met the last crew of Tricolour artists may somewhat dampen the Queen's enthusiasm, but boys will be boys, and paint will be paint, and perhaps the tonsorial artists from the University Residences will have an opportunity to display their skill by cropping a few Gaelic heads, as heretofore.

Warren Stevens took a chance and put his stalwarts up against the Intermediates, and the result was hardly complimentary to the senior squad. However, it may have the effect of inducing some concerted action in the tussle tomorrow, and the entire resources of the Blue and White crew will be needed if Teddy Reeves and his sixty minute men are to be taken into camp.

Should the senior squad take the cake in the party with Queen's tomorrow they will also take the cup—that is the Yates Cup, emblematic of the senior Intercollegiate Championship. If victorious, this will be the third consecutive year for the Varsity team to capture the title, and a win will permit the cup to take up residence in Hart House. Coach Stevens is having his troubles convincing the boys that they are not sure-fire winners over the Reeve machine, before the said Gaelic battlers do so for him, but after the heavy rehearsal last afternoon the team apparently realizes that he means business.

An intermediate fixture at 12.45 will decide whether Varsity or Bishop's College will reach the finals. Lew Hayman's squad made a good showing against their big brothers, and the Quebec team is reputed to be a tough nut to crack. All this points to the makings of a real tussle in the early afternoon tomorrow.

Trinity, pre-season favourites for the Mulock Cup honours, were swamped yesterday by Junior Meds. The doctors boast a team that should go far towards annexing the Mug, and their display next Tuesday, when they meet the O.A.C. Farmers at the Stadium, should be worth watching.

Amongst the added attractions at the Stadium tomorrow afternoon will be the Blue and White band, not to mention the Tricolour musical aggregation. The Varsity musicians are introducing a new campus song, and following the game will stage the usual grand parade, if Varsity is successful in snaring the title. The Band Boys have had a great season. This will be their last appearance in the Blue and White for this year, and they are determined to exercise their lungs to the best of their ability tomorrow. The parade should be worth remembering, judging from former years.

VIC SOCCER TEAM DEFEAT WYCLIFFE

Both Teams Evenly Matched in Game Which Results in 1-0 Score

FAIRWEATHER INJURED

With a strong northwest wind favouring Victoria in the first half of an interfaculty soccer game, Victoria managed to shut out Wycliffe 1-0. Play throughout the game was ragged due to a slippery field and over-anxious players. Both teams were very evenly matched.

Early in the first period, Taylor punctured the Wycliffe defence with a beautiful shot. Fairweather received a leg injury but gamely continued. Victoria stormed the Theologs' goal but lacked punch in the pinches. Towards the end of the half, Dyke, Victoria goalie, was upset in a Wycliffe attack, but managed to save off a sure score with a neat save.

At the change around, Wycliffe, having the wind at their backs, opened up with a terrific offensive. Victoria stiffened to hold them scoreless. Good soccer was shown by all players. Taylor, Rutherford and Dyke played consistently well for Victoria, while the work of Fairweather, McKibbin and Rich for Wycliffe was impressive.

Victoria: Neeb, Rutherford, Dyke, Taylor, Cochrane, Rowlinson, McDonald, Cryderman, Campbell, Grills, Cooper, Poppleton, Simpson, Scott, Woods-worth.

Wycliffe: Rich, McKibbin, Fairweather, Toone, Phillips, Wood, Cleverdon, Kibblewhite, Crawshaw, Simmonds, Smith, Wenham, Nickle.

PHARMACY DANCE

To the rhythms of Karl Mueller's dance orchestra, the Junior year of Pharmacy last night resumed an ancient custom. For the last three or four years the Junior Pharmacy dance has been conspicuous by its absence. However, with the promise of returning good times, it was decided to revert to the custom of long ago.

Dean Heebner, of Pharmacy, in his welcoming address, expressed great pleasure at the large attendance, and intimated his desire that the Junior Pharmacy dance remain a feature of the social year. A feature of the programme was the novelty dance. Miss Margaret Healy and Ray Wilson were the winners of the prizes.

U.C. DEFEAT DENTS 14-3 IN LACROSSE

Victory Keeps Red and White Team in Running for Group Honours

FULLERTON STARS

U.C. outplayed Dents by a wide margin in an interfaculty lacrosse contest yesterday afternoon, to win by 14-3. The victory kept the Red and White in the running for group honours, but they will have to defeat the leading Trinity team in their next game, or suffer elimination.

U.C. pulled some nice passing plays which had Dents baffled throughout the game. In three of the four periods, Dents were outscored by 4 goals to 1, while in the third period, U.C. scored twice without a reply.

Although he played for only a few minutes, Max Fullerton featured the game with his terrific shooting which netted his team three goals. Bissell, Sharpe, and Smith also played well for the winners.

Dents were handicapped by having only two substitutes, and by the last few minutes they were content to try to keep the score down. The work of Kingsburg in goal was the bright spot in their play as he robbed the U.C. sharpshooters on several occasions.

U.C.: Sharpe, Williams, Harwood, Fullerton, Gallow, Self, Kidd, Bissell, Smith.

Dents: Kingsburg, Pearson, Brown, McHugh, Lankin, W. McCutcheon, D. McCutcheon.

Referee: Don Starr.

CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES HARRASS QUEEN'S MEN

Pajama-clad Queen's men raised a problem for the executive when they removed such art treasures as barber poles, gates, signs, and fences, from Limestone City buildings. One who was especially ambitious, made off with a shirt. As a result, claims for $115 have been received to date. Barber poles were valued at from twelve to twenty-five dollars, while Andrew Orr, who lost his shirt, felt that two dollars was the price of his dignity and garment. The sheriff was given power to act and an effort is being made to locate the light-fingered gentry and make them disgorge.

SECONDS TO PLAY EASTERN CHAMPS

Meet Bishop's College Tomorrow in Prelude to Senior Game

OUTLOOK HOPEFUL

Tomorrow afternoon as a preface to the senior football game, Varsity intermediates will play Bishop's College, the eastern intermediate champions, with the chance to meet the winner of the McMaster-O.A.C. as a reward for victory. This is a rather doubtful privilege, for both McMaster and O.A.C. have teams which will be troublesome to any team wishing to get nearer the Dominion intermediate finals. Bishop's College will field a team tomorrow which is reputed to be very good, but about which little is known at present.

The fact that the Varsity intermediates scored two touchdowns against the seniors in a practice scrimmage last week must be noted as an indication of the sort of treatment Bishop's College may expect tomorrow. Under the coaching of Lew Hayman and Jack Sinclair, the Seconds have been improving all season, until right now they are at the peak of their form. George Powell and Ripley will do the kicking, and may be counted on to hold their own with any kickers out of the east. The forward passing of Whitey Miller, combined with the ability of Jackson, Edwards, Buck and Hicks, to receive the ball on the run, has been a factor in the success of the Blues up to now, and should contribute to a fine display in tomorrow's game. The intermediate line can be counted upon to give the halves all the protection which they may want for the end runs and passes. With such a well-balanced strength, the Blue Seconds should end the game with the better half of the score.

TRINITY GRIDDERS

ed for point four. A feeble kick by Trinity resulted in Meds garnering point five on another Newton hoist. The Medical steam-roller then began to function in a really big way, and yards were made three times in succession. The climax to this sport came when Barron turned on the heat and carried the ball over for a touchdown. The attempted convert failed.

Barron crashed through for yards twice and the Red and Black commenced a daring aerial offensive in a final desperate effort. An A'Court to Young forward resulted in a 30 yard gain and another from A'Court to Ruddock was good for 20 yards. On the third attempt at a forward McKee deflected the pass into Morgan's digits and the Palmerston flash pulled a Frank Merrivell by galloping 60 yards for a touchdown with the pack in full cry. It was a beautiful run but a very fluky play. The attempted convert struck the post. A few minutes later, Newton kicked another point, making the final count 11-5.

Meds thoroughly deserved the victory on the play, as they were definitely superior in every department, and were not as prone to fumble as were their opponents. McKee's phenomenal running, the tank-like plunging of Barker and Barron and Newton's all-around ability were the bright spots in a notable game. Ed Fraser and Ruddock played well for Trinity. Meds meet O.A.C. in the semi-final on Tuesday at 2.30 in the Stadium and the game should be a real thriller.

Trinity: Flying wing, Kirk; halves, A'Court, Owen, Ruddock; quarter, Welch; snap, Stratton; insides, Oler, Hamilton; middles, Lash, E. Fraser; outsides, Scrivener, Young; subs, Morgan, Murrell-Wright, Jeffries, MacMillan, C. Fraser, H. Barker, Reid, Tucker.

Jr. Meds: Flying wing, Spence; halves, Newton, Fleming, McKone; quarter, McKee; snap, Allen; insides, Little, Lauber; middles, Barron, Medlock; outsides, D. Graham, Belton; subs, Sigel, Rice, Howes, A. F. Graham, Ryan.

taken care of by Gus Greco and Grady Laing, whose scintillating work has featured many a game, while the versatile Bobby Coulter will call the huddles and plan his attack. Led by Captain Andy Henderson and Jack Dawson, the tackling corps will be called to clip the Tricolour ball-carriers.

Aside from the significance the game has on the intercollegiate series it also has a sentimental aspect. Many of the men who have helped to bring glory to the University will be playing their last game for their Alma Mater on Saturday. Dawson, Hennessey, Webber, Perry, Warren, Coulter, Keith and Laing are all members of the class of 375.

With so much at stake, Saturday's game will undoubtedly be the football classic of the year in University circles and a packed stand is expected to witness these traditional college rivals battle it out on a frozen gridiron.

and so great was the enthusiasm and speculation that statesmen often played a dual role of directors of companies and granters of charters to those same corporations.

The first international railway known in history was completed under the title of St. Lawrence Atlantic Railway, and served as a means of travel and transportation from Montreal to Portland, Maine.

The Grand Trunk and Great Western also flourished in this era and by the period of confederation the scattered elements of Canada had been linked together.

ETHICAL TRAINING OF CHILD DISCUSSED

contains the statement that "In the old days, ethics were taught in the family circle but that medium has long since disappeared. Still no effort is being made to fill that void by bringing curricula up to date. . . . If the child were taught to understand his own and his neighbour's place by studying ethics before his mind was prejudiced, it would go a long way towards restoring social and economic harmony among men."

Mr. Brett admitted that moral training was somewhat neglected in the modern home, but said that, although teachers might do something toward making up for this defect, their ideas might be flatly contradicted by home practices. This would be disturbing to the child.

"I am not critical of ethical teaching, of course," explained Mr. Brett. "But I dislike the idea of doing it in school by direct methods, since in this you are treating children as if they were capable of understanding ethical principles." Mr. Brett advocated an indirect method, that is, by stories.

Dr. G. F. Kingston, Professor of Ethics at Trinity College, gave his opinion as being that moral training had a place in schools, but that there was no sense in trying to teach children philosophic maxims.

"This training depends not on the curriculum but on the personality of the teacher," was his opinion.

stances so I certainly do not feel that it could ever be justifiable."

The ideas of Joyce Kirk, II Trinity, on this subject, differed from the average viewpoint. She declared that "Life would not be worth living if there were no standards of honour and loyalty. Certainly you should support your country in war as well as peace. Moreover, we would expect Great Britain to come to our aid, why should we not go to hers? We might just as well be animals living without any moral standards whatever, if we lost our ideals of loyalty and patriotism."

Ken Woodsword, III Victoria, declared, "The questionnaire should stimulate much needed thought and discussion among the students." Asked if he would go to war under any circumstances, Mr. Woodsword replied, "I would fight for an international police force, as long as it was directed in the interests of world peace and not for the benefit of a privileged few. I believe the day will come when the world will not be cursed with international wars, there will not be an end to human strife."

Claude de Mestral, Emmanuel College, believed the most conclusive manner of preventing a war would be a general strike. "I would refuse to fight in any war whatsoever, although I do believe there should be an international police force, fulfilling on a larger scale the same functions as our civic forces."

George Proust, chairman of the Anti-war League, expressed dissatisfaction with the questionnaire and believed it inferior to that issued some weeks ago by Kirby Page in The World Tomorrow. "I think there will always be war as long as capitalism exists; under socialism it would become unnecessary and impossible. In no case would I go to war, but I would be willing to render humanitarian service to both sides on the battlefield," he declared. A spokesman for the C.O.T.C. stated that he thought this organization was in favour of such a questionnaire for the purpose of ascertaining student opinion.

opposition, "even to keep capitalism in force. But first let the majority be elected by the Socialists, then let force—if it is necessary—be employed. We should use the easiest means at our disposal and a dictatorship of a small minority is not necessary. Armed forces are a complement not an alternative," he concluded.

The government continued giving numerous examples of failures of socialistic measures to be adopted when merely pacific measures were employed.

On the other hand the opposition gave many examples of countries which had made progress in socialism without employing force. They advocated "not revolution but evolution."

When the resolution was put to a vote the Parliament, true to its habit, overthrew the government by an overwhelming majority.

The Prime Minister in bringing up new business, stated that some thought that the interest in debating could be stimulated by the inclusion of both a brief discussion it was decided that sexes in the Parliament (cheers). After some sort of a debating union should be established which should include both sexes. This matter will be taken up at the next session of parliament. The wording of the resolution will be, "Resolved that this House favours the establishment of a debating union in U.C. composed of persons of both sexes."

soil with hyacinths, but with tulips only the point is necessary. Always leave three parts of an inch not filled with soil, for water. Mr. Moore showed how to pot tulip bulbs, explaining that a pot five inches in diameter would hold about three bulbs. He also advised against trying to make these flowers bloom a second year in containers, but they might be planted again in the border outside.

The showing of slides brought the lecture to a close. One slide stressed the propagation of dahlias. These flowers should always be stored with the tubers upside down. In spring put each of them in a pot and each one will produce a plant.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Geneva—The League of Nations yesterday delivered an ultimatum to Bolivia and Paraguay, principals in the two-year Chaco war, threatening the belligerents with penalties. The combatants were forcibly reminded that under the covenant the League is empowered to have members sever economic, financial and diplomatic relations with the warring nations.

London—It is expected that next month Japan may denounce the Washington treaty of 1922 which established the 5-5-3 naval strength ratio among the United States, Great Britain and Japan respectively. The Nipponese are preparing to ask for naval equality.

New York—Two new instruments have been credited with reviving five hundred "dead" persons in this city and Chicago. The first is a gold electric needle which stimulates heart beats with electrical impulses; the second has been employed with spectacular success in cases of asphyxiation and consists of a pressure apparatus for mechanical breathing which forces oxygen and carbon dioxide into the lungs.

Edmonton—A Communist newspaper man, leader in the Alberta anti-grain delivery strike for higher grading of wheat, was tarred yesterday by a score of unknown assailants.

Tokio—A Japanese police sergeant attempted suicide because his pilot car proceeding that of his Emperor in a procession took the wrong turn and caused a Mayor Stewart-Bessborough mix-up.

Paris—France has given fresh assurances that she will stand by Mussolini in maintaining Austria's independence from Nazi threats of annexation. Premier Flandin returns to a laissez faire economic policy for France in abolishing the fixed minimum price for wheat in his campaign for the return of normal commercial practices.

Rome—The Abyssinian government has received from Italy a vigorous protest to a recent attack on the Italian Consulate at Gondar. It is reported that the military garrisons of the Italian colonies bordering on Abyssinia are being fortified.

NEW SONG FEATURES FIRST OF SONGSTERS

The first of the winter series of Sing Songs was held on Friday afternoon in the east common room at Hart House. Mr. Ross Workman directed and Mr. Ted Livingstone furnished the piano accompaniment. With the room plunged in darkness and the words of the "Road to Mandalay" projected on a screen, the singing got away to a fine and lusty start. Other songs included "In the evening by the moonlight," "Down among the dead men," "What shall we do with the drunken sailor," "Just a song at twilight," "Father O'Flynn," "Fill every glass," and the "Blue and White".

The feature of the afternoon was the presentation for the first time of the new song "Varsity Spirit", which was sung the following day at the Stadium. Alex Ross, the composer, was good enough to play the piano, and copies of The Varsity containing the words were distributed among those present. The song met with a great reception and several stayed behind after the sing song to practice it further.

STEVENS' FINDINGS UNDER FIRE TONIGHT

Victoria Parliament to Debate Proceedings of Commission

OSGOODE WILL ATTEND

"Resolved that the proceedings of the Stevens' Commission are futile", is the subject of this evening's debate to be held by the Vic Debating Parliament at 8.15 in the Alumni Hall. The subject has been worded so that many aspects may be brought into the discussion. All students attending Osgoode Hall have been invited to attend the debate. Messrs. W. Grant and W. Smith of Osgoode will uphold the motion. The negative will be supported by Mr. Ken Woodsworth and Miss Helen Babe of Victoria.

The debate is decidedly not Osgoode versus Victoria. It is thought that the opposition will try to show that even in the Conservative party there is a general conscientious awakening to "Sweat-Shop" wages and unfair business practices. The affirmative, however, will probably bring out that although such material has been selected for the probe and though the committee may show the unfair practices, yet the power of the big businesses will be such that no successful measures will be carried out. It is the custom of the Vic Debating Parliament to limit main speeches to 10 minutes and to encourage speaking from the floor.

STORY WRITING ESSENTIALS GIVEN

Lecturer Views Short Story from Artistic and Commercial Angles

"Short story writing to please oneself is an art—writing to please others can be learned and acquired," said Mrs. S. Creighton, addressing the high school editors on short stories, Saturday morning.

"A short story from an artistic point of view creates a single effect—it is a piece of prose fiction short enough to be read at one sitting, which produces a single impression—a unity of effect. Never read a whole volume of short stories at one time."

Mrs. Creighton went on to say that to write short stories from a commercial point of view, one must know how to create an exotic background with an efficiency of expression.

Mrs. Creighton concluded her address with, "Commercial short stories must have definite plot. It is a very good idea, if in some subtle way you can flatter your reader or give a new twist to an old story."

PILE UP 18-1 SCORE

Varsity Team Will Now Meet McMaster for the Title

By Hal Taylor

In the opening feature of Saturday afternoon's programme at the Varsity Stadium, Lew Hayman's intermediates decisively turned back their rivals from Bishop's College by an 18-1 score and earned the right to meet McMaster University in the intercollegiate intermediate finals. The game was a preliminary to the Queen's-Varsity senior game.

The Lennoxville boys were at no time a threat to the Blues, who were playing superior football in almost every department and who managed to pile up 10 points by the end of the first quarter. The fine kicking by Glass and the numerous fumbles in the backfield kept the seconds periodically on the defensive but only in the third quarter did the victors manage to break into Varsity's lead when they kicked to the deadline for their only point after a fumble on the Blues' 40 yard line.

By this time the Quebec boys were conceding little chance of overcoming the victors' lead, though they tightened up considerably after the first. (Continued from Page 3)

No Sign Seen of Lifting of Restrictions Outside U.C., Trinity

"It is my policy to make no comment," was the reply evoked from Miss McPhail, Dean of Women of Victoria College, when questioned by The Varsity on the subject of women being allowed to smoke there. As the ruling now stands it is prohibited.

Mother St. Margaret, Dean of Loretto College, declined to give her opinion on the subject, as did Sister Mary Augusta, Dean of St. Joseph's College. There seems to be little immediate prospect of the women being allowed to smoke in these colleges, though Trinity has followed University College in permitting the obvious.

Piquant Fairland or Comic Strip Figures Charm Hart House

A GLAMOROUS EVENING

"Colour, a blazing riot of it produced by the bright and vivid hues of a multitude of various costumes, blended with the more regular array of multicolour decorations. Music was everywhere, the rhythm of peppy fox-trots or dreamy waltzes played to perfection. Masqueraders—an immense gay throng decked in every conceivable costume, enjoyed the seventh annual Hart House Masquerade, Friday night and early Saturday morning." The Varsity of November 22, 1926.

"Pierrettes and pirates, duchesses and devils danced together in incongruous hilarity at the Hart House Masquerade on Friday night. Colours brightened and dimmed, orchestras blared and crooned as the costumed throng stepped gallily to the music, like a shattered rainbow in its riot of colour." The Varsity of November 18th, 1929.

"All Hart House was at the disposal of the masqueraders except the chapel and The Varsity office.

"Take a tip and get on the House Committee at the elections next spring. You'll save yourself the trouble of hiring a costume and the purchase of a ticket and besides, possess a greater superiority complex at the dance than you would in an Hawaiian outfit." The Varsity of November 17th, 1930.

MUNRO'S PERFECTLY PLACED KICK IN CLOSING MINUTES OF GAME GIVES TRICOLOUR VICTORY, 8-7

Domination of Intercollegiate Gridiron by University of Toronto Comes to Dramatic End as Tricolour Scores Sensational Victory

By B. J. McGuire

The football war is over today and high in the seat of the conqueror sits Queen's University, challengers to the honours for the past two years. Twelve thousand fans saw Varsity's domination of the intercollegiate gridiron come to a sensational end at the Stadium Saturday as the Tricolour ended their campaign with an 8-7 victory over Warren Stevens' Blue and White champions.

Dramatic indeed was the fall of the champions. The end was in sight and the score tied at 7-all when the break-up came. Queen's were in possession near midfield apparently too far out to be dangerous, when Munro uncorked one of the best kicks of the day. It sailed high in the air, giving the tacklers plenty of time to get down, and dropped in the corner of the field, just behind the goal line. Coulter took the kick, made a desperate effort to battle his way clear but fell, and was pounced on by the eager band of Queen's tacklers, who smothered him for a rouge and the winning point.

It was unfortunate that Coulter should have fallen at that particular time. He was just a few yards from the goal line and might have fought his way clear. It was, however, a perfectly placed kick and gave him only a slight hope of emerging without yielding a point. Coulter was perhaps the only man in the intercollegiate who might have been able to run it clear and to slip at that particular time was unfortunate.

The new champions are without a doubt worthy successors to the fallen Blues. They had a slight edge throughout the contest and were deserving of their single point victory. Most of the battle for the crown was waged between Varsity's 40 yard mark and midfield, which is a good indication of the respective powers of both clubs.

Along the line Queen's were more than slightly superior. In the kicking exchanges, Isbister yielded ground to Munro. Varsity, however, made several good gains running back kicks and in this department Art Upper and Coulter were bordering on the sensational. It was in fact, the work of this pair of fleet footed backs which all through the afternoon kept the struggle out of range of the Varsity goal line.

A slight wind from the south was blowing over the field when the teams kicked off and Varsity were the first to take advantage of it. The Blue team took the lead in this quarter when Isbister got a long kick away from the Queen's fifty which rolled to the deadline. In the next quarter Queen's tied the count on a similar play.

Both squads collected a major in the third session. Varsity first crossed the final white marker when Upper took a pass from Isbister and was nailed seven yards out. On the next play the Blue line opened a hole for Laing, who smashed his way through the secondary defence, falling beyond the goal line. Cam Gray made his initial and final appearance on the field at this stage and kicked the convert.

Varsity's supremacy was, however, short lived. Isbister tossed a forward near midfield which Elliott took, running it to the Varsity 40. Queen's rapped the Varsity line for yards twice although they took three tries each time they moved the sticks. This carried them to the Varsity 15 and on the next play to Munro lateral took the ball over the line for a major. Varsity held to their slim margin by breaking up the convert.

New Numbers for the Social Mind In the Directory You Will Find

By R. G. A.

Coming at you—a wealth of information and entertainment, bound up in the grey covers of the University of Toronto Directory for 1934-35!

Over one thousand (1000) brand new telephone numbers never before collected and classified under a single cover.

That allocation must have come through in good style for there is a whole page more to the Staff section than a year ago. Professor Alford must have arrived just in time to make the deadline, for his number at the Museum is carefully listed with the others. Phone up that Professor NOW and explain why he's still looking for your essay!

"Velut Arbor Aeve" runs the crest on the cover, but she'll never thrive, uh, if this keeps up. Arts registration figures show a drop of 43, to touch a new low of 1005 Frosh. The loss was split between U.C., Vic and Trinity, while St. Mike's raised the ante from last year by six!

As the years roll by they're many shy! The class of 377 at U. of T. now fill the Sophomore berth minus 21 per cent of their original membership, while 376 lost a mere 12 per cent to make the second year exams look easy. 375 took the biggest cut—but the three

PAINLESS CULTURE

One of the most flattering commentaries on the intelligence of the present generation of students was an advertisement in last Thursday's Varsity. The advertisement was paid for by a Yonge Street theatre, and stated that, because of the crowds at previous performances, there would be three showings of French films on Saturday morning, instead of one as had previously been the case. Of the wide variety of interests which are necessarily a part of a large University, it is rare indeed for one which is as educational as the showing of French films to become so outstandingly popular.

Originally introduced to Toronto through the efforts of the French department of University College as a comparatively painless method of instilling some knowledge of French diction into the student mind, the venture seems to have become not only a source of education and culture, but an amusement as well. Due to the fact that the moving picture business is not a large industry in France, and there is a dearth of screen actors and actresses, the films are usually made by finished actors of the legitimate stage, whose diction and technique are excellent. This results in a higher standard of entertainment, from an educational point of view, and provides the English-speaking listener with a greater chance of understanding what is said.

Fortunately for those who see the pictures in Toronto, the Ontario board of censors has accepted the Quebec censorship as final. We shudder to think of the result had the local censors followed their usual custom of deleting the most important sections of film on more or less general principles. As it is now, we get a more complete, as well as more authentic, picture than would be shown had the pictures been made in Hollywood. Contrary to some opinions, the films are quite recent releases, not more than six or eight months old at the most. Those which will be shown before Christmas have been picked out from the stock on hand in Montreal, which is the point of release in Canada. However, if the present series of showings are financially profitable for the theatre which is sponsoring them, the films which will be shown after Christmas will be the most recent releases at that time, and should be interesting as an example of the French interpretation of the most modern entertainment in America today. One of the first will be "La Dame aux Camelias", in which Yvonne Printemps, now playing in New York, will make her screen debut.

Both the theatre which is showing the films, and the French Department at University College, have been agreeably surprised at the success which has greeted their enterprise. It is to be hoped that continued success will greet their efforts, and that students who are studying French will make use of the opportunities which they present. If sufficient support is given them, there is no reason why this should not be the beginning of a successful movement toward more cosmopolitan interests both on the campus, and in Toronto as a whole.

CHAMPIONS

A beautiful sixty-yard kick brought to a close the intercollegiate rugby season on Saturday afternoon, and took the senior championship from the Varsity team. University of Toronto students may have felt badly about having a title taken from their grasp in the last minute of the last game, but they may well feel proud of one senior intercollegiate championship which they were in no danger of losing.

The Blue and White Band, under the direction of Captain Slatter, has by this time earned for itself a niche in the rugby Hall of Fame. Wherever the Varsity team has appeared this season, there also has been the Blue and White Band—always a spot of colour on the playing field, always well up to its full quota of fifty men. We venture to say that no Toronto student has ever seen the band in its blue and white "U. of T." formation, marching across the gridiron in a stadium hundreds of miles from home, without feeling a thrill, and a sense of pride, at the sight.

Champions in sport are always the recipients of many congratulations, while others who play just as faithful and difficult a part are forgotten. To the Blue and White Band, to its officers, and to Captain Slatter—we offer our congratulations, Intercollegiate Champions!

Toronto Conservatory

A house packed to capacity greeted the Conservatory Quartet in their second concert Saturday evening.

The programme was especially interesting in that it consisted completely of works from the pen of Leo Smith, 'celist of the Quartet.

The ability to compose well in three diversified forms is in itself no mean accomplishment. Mr. Smith seems most at home in the string idiom. It is here that he achieves a sense of directness, fluency and conviction. The allegro of the Quartet in D typifies that which is best and finest in Mr. Smith's work. It is inspired, overflowing with beautiful melody and of rich harmonic texture. The 'cello is treated with sympathy and mature understanding. Throughout the Quartet the writing for this instrument is at all times effective.

The seven songs which figured on the programme were lyrics by Swinburne and Blake. Mr. Smith's treatment of these verses was decidedly different and in contrast to his string and pianoforte writing. In trying to convey the spirit and realism of the words, he has written arresting if not always beautiful music.

Schumannesque and Variations on an Old English Tune represented the composer's pianoforte writing. The former was tiresome and uninteresting to this reviewer. The Variations we believe are well worked out but they suffer from great length and they too are not without dull moments.

Within a limited sphere Mr. Smith writes distinctively. His music then is warm and rich in melodic content with a certain kindly grace. Beyond this, it lacks variety and character.

Assisting the Quartet were Myrtle Brown and Reginald Godden. Both gave good account of themselves in a careful and considerate treatment of the composer's music.

Tomorrow evening, Tuesday, 20th, in Massey Hall, the Mendelssohn Choir under the direction of Dr. Fricker, will repeat its eminently successful programme of the Bach B minor Mass. The second organ recital to be held in Convocation Hall this semester is to be played by Mr. Frederick C. Silvester.

Mr. Silvester, as he has been mentioned in this column before, needs no introduction to music fans of Varsity, having been heard many times in Eaton's Auditorium and elsewhere. His programmes in the past have spoken

C-C

A column or so ago we called our shots wrong, when we heralded the passing of the Queen's Park Bandstand in an heroic epic. We read that Premier Hepburn had started a campaign to beautify the Park; we observed his workmen attacking the bandstand; we put two and two together and got four. In attempting to beautify Queen's Park, we figured the first thing anybody would think of was the complete demolition of such an ancient relic, and in deciding to merely renovate instead of abolish, we still think Mr. Hepburn bungled his addition tables and got five.

As work on the bandstand progresses however, we are left in horrible doubt as to what the workmen are actually attempting to do. Maybe the idea is to jack up the shingles and run a new chassis under them.

C-C

We didn't think those ditch diggers working on the road widening job north of the Park would be able to resist the aesthetic and cultural atmosphere of the University very long. We've discovered one chap with a terribly apparent accent, which at first seemed quite beyond identification. Then he pulled out a package of cigarettes. Oxfords.

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Your questionnaire re war in today's Varsity will no doubt cause a great deal of interest. It is a question which should have been answered long ago; and it should be answered by the whole world and answered at once.

First of all the League of Nations in my simple opinion is one of the greatest "hoax". There are today several dangerous issues with which the League cannot cope, for the simple reason "that the members of the League do not have the full support of their respective nations". It is true that the nations send their representatives with instructions which are the general ideas of the people but were the League to require an army to back their ruling I doubt whether they could raise even one country to arms.

What we need and need badly is an international police force or army whereby each nation contributes soldiers according to its population and whereby each nation is ready to contribute more soldiers whenever necessary for the development of peace or to carry out the ruling of an international court. But this force must be a standing force and not a promissory force. If a nation, who promised a force, were called upon in time of

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

St. Mike's baseball nine easily outplayed the Medley team on Friday, making it quite evident that St. Mike's and Vic will be the contenders for the title—just as we had thought. Vic now holds the upper berth in the league, having won two games, whereas St. Mike's lost to Vic at their first meeting. St. Mike's still have a chance, however, as they put up quite a fair fight against the Scarlet and Gold outfit.

The Medley team has had no practices or coaching. So one can well realize that they made many costly errors which their opponents capitalized on, scoring several runs. However, they do deserve a big hand for rooting out a team despite numerous trials and vicissitudes.

St. Mike's fielding was especially fine and they made very few errors. Justine McMartin pitched good ball but she was only able to stay for half the game. Neither team had any particularly outstanding players and the game was rather complicated by the fact that neither faculty had a full team for the entire match.

Throughout the game St. Mike's were in no danger of losing the contest. That is more than can be said for the onlookers, who were in decided danger of losing an eye—or something. Balls flew about hit or miss; luckily it was always miss, but our reporter at several points expected to emerge with a colourful "shiner". It takes real courage to get the story of such a bout.

At six o'clock this evening St. Hilda's meet the Nurses in what will doubtless be a very one-sided basketball game. The Public Health outfit is steadily improving, however and they may surprise us yet.

And then at 7 o'clock the Victoria Juniors and U.C. Freshies will take the floor. This should be a better game than the St. Hilda's-Nurses contest—at least it will probably be much closer.

U.C. are getting started at badminton right away. On Tuesday at 1.30 at the Women's Union there is to be a meet-

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Queen's are today enjoying that pleasant feeling which results from having won a title. And for this we congratulate them. Not for enjoying the pleasant feeling but rather for having won the intercollegiate football championship. The Kingston gridders are worthy successors to the Blues, who toppled Saturday from their pinnacle as champions for the past two years. Injuries, fraternities and Varsity all united in an effort to keep Teddy Reeve and his Tricolour team from the title, but each were in turn overcome, with Varsity succumbing in the last three minutes of the game Saturday.

The kick which Munro uncoiled to score the winning point was one of the features of a sensational game. He appeared to be out too far to be dangerous but the old leather lemon sailed down to the goal line, coming to rest in Bobby Coulter's arms in the corner of the field behind the line. Coulter had only a ghost of a chance of fighting his way clear but this slim hope vanished when he slipped on the spongy turf, to be pounced on by a host of Queen's tacklers. It was a great conclusion to what had been one of the best ball games of the season. It was regrettable, of course, that it was not Varsity that scored that last point, but only one team can win any contest.

Why Queen's had to pick Saturday to score the only touchdown they have earned all season is one of the mysteries which will worry Warren Stevens and Company for some time. It is interesting to note that all three of the Queen's-Varsity encounters were won by a single point.

One title at least is showing some inclination toward taking up residence at Varsity. That is the intermediate crown which is now midway between Varsity and McMaster. The Blue Seconds were impressive in the victory over Bishop's College in the Eastern Canada semi-finals here Saturday and will meet McMaster here next week. McMaster have a real kicker in Cleary Palmer and are reported as being heavy and strong along the line. The failure of O.A.C. Saturday let's them out of the finals for the first time in three years. Last season they stopped the Varsity squad in their drive for a Dominion title. McMaster will have their chance to do likewise next Saturday, but for our choice we call the Hayman-coached Blues to come through with a win.

Hamilton Tigers were another squad to pass from the picture Saturday. The Big Four winners fell before the attack of the Sarnia Oilers. They were in fact no more impressive against the Sarnia squad than were the St. Michael's College team who were dropped from the race in the league eliminations. Sarnia will be battling it out with the Regina Roughriders here next week and should be favourites to annex the Dominion title.

ing of all U.C. women who are even vaguely interested in this sport. A large attendance at this meeting is urgently requested because a lot depends on a good start-off.

Don't forget the baseball game tonight. Vic is playing the Medley team at 6 p.m. at the Vic gym.

IRISH TAKE BALL GAME FROM MEDLEY SQUAD 26-6

St. Mike's downed the Medley team to the tune of 26-8 in Friday night's baseball game. The game was one-sided; St. Mike's took the lead in the first inning, and easily retained it all through the game.

The Medley team made many costly errors which resulted in runs for their opponents.

STRANGE COUNTRY LECTURE THEME

Then Dr. Mercer touched on the history of Ethiopia, starting with the kings of Cush in 3000 B.C. and pointing out the close link which existed with the neighbouring king of Egypt. Ethiopia was first province and then ruler of Egypt, but managed to maintain its independence during the Persian and Roman invasions of Egypt, merely moving its capital further south

VARSITY POLOISTS DEFEAT ST. KITTS

Blues Get Edge in Close Struggle; Great Game by Murphy

On Saturday evening Varsity water polo team defeated St. Catharines "Y" in the Garden City pool. The score was 6-4 which clearly indicates the closeness of the struggle. It was a battle all the way, with Murphy playing a stellar game to rob St. Catharines of many certain looking goals. The large crowd present thoroughly enjoyed the torrid going and almost cracked the marble walls with their cheers.

To pick stars for either team would be an injustice to the other players, for both teams played polo which consistently bordered on the sensational. Cressy McCatty, although he scored no goals, played a great game and handed out many passes to his other mates on the forward line. The defence duo of Devitt and Twibbell played a stellar game and were in a big way responsible for keeping St. Catharines on the low end of the score sheet.

Varsity: Goal, Murphy; defence, Devitt, Twibbell; half, Bancroft; centre, C. McCatty; forwards, Davey, W. McCatty.

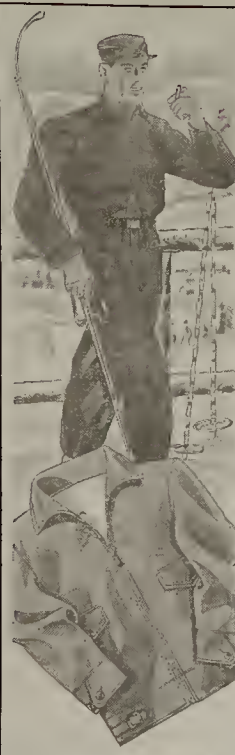

St. Catharines: Goal, Eacott; defence, Clarke, Payne; half, Priddy; centre, McGarrigle; forwards, Lorenzen, Swan.

VIC TRIM SCHOOL IN LACROSSE 13-9

In a fast exhibition of lacrosse in the gym on Saturday, Victoria defeated St. S.P.S. 13-9. Play was very even but Vic were more consistent around the nets. Jacobs was the whole show for the School team, caging the ball no less than eight times. Hamilton was the only other man to whiz one past Dickie. For Vic the fast shot of Dyke had too much sizzle for Martin to handle effectively and he was credited with five goals. Clipperton with three, Young and Burgess with two each, and Wilkinson with one were the other scorers.

Victoria: Dickie, Dyke, Young, Clipperton, Wilkinson; subs, Bently, McClelland, Burgess, Thompson.

SECONDS DEFEAT BISHOP'S COLLEGE

period in which their showing was rather unfavourable. In this quarter Varsity recovered a fumble in Bishop's territory and Syd Jackson, who was the standout of the game, went over for a converted major after a plunge for yards by Thomas. A few minutes later the Blues turned on the steam and after making yards three times in a row put the ball on the losers' 20-yard line by a forward, Gray to Buck. From here Gray's placement brought the total to 10 points, Powell having added one on a long hoist to the dead-line.

With the opening of the second quarter Bishop's started a keen offensive, taking advantage of the wind at their backs but a bad snap and a fumble by Carson in their backfield gave Varsity the ball on their opponents' 15-yard line, from where Gray's placement went wild for a single point.

In the last half the struggle seemed around midfield except when Jackson once again broke away in the third for a series of long plunges, finally going over for his second touch, which Gray converted.

For the Blues, Miller, Edwards and Powell worked nicely in the backfield, with Thomas, Gray and Taft turning in a good exhibition as well. Carson and Glass were the pick of the losers, among whom the work of Hutchison and Dunsmore was also quite effective.

Bishop's College: Flying wing, Olmstead; halves, Glass, Carson, Hutchison; quarter, Dunsmore; snap, Whally; insides, Rolitt, Brooks; middles, Pibus, Cooper; outsides, Royal, Johnson; subs, Bassett, Lamb, Symington, Wigle, Knox, Powell, McMahon, Purdy.

Varsity Seconds: Flying wing, MacPherson; halves, Jackson, Powell, Edwards; quarter, Miller; snap, Williams; insides, Gibson, Kuntz; middles, Thomas, Willoughby; outsides, Buck, Gray; subs, Jacobs, Ripley, Lynch, McBride, McBean, Hicks, Taft.

Officials: Pendragast, Mungovan, Kress.

COLLEGE TITLE GOES TO QUEEN'S

In the final period the Tricolour line smothered every attack which Varsity sent at it while they themselves slowly advanced up the field. The tying point came when Isbister, kicking from behind his own goal line, hoisted one to the 35 mark and the ball bounced back ten yards nearer the Blue line. Munro kicked for the seventh point on the first down.

Greco and Upper tried valiantly to get the play out of the danger zone, but although partially successful, they were unable to stop the Queen's advance. With three minutes of play left, Queen's got possession at midfield and Munro uncoiled a beautiful punt which resulted in a rouge and a championship for Queen's and Teddy Reeve.

For the Kingston team the work of every man on the squad was good. They were not sensational but consistently good. Varsity, on the other hand, were at times sensational and at others mediocre. Upper, Coulter, Laing, Hennessey and Greco all turned in good efforts. An injury to Williams early in the game forced Hennessey to take over the snap position and he was anything but a weak spot at this position.

Varsity: Flying wing, Dawson; halves, Upper, Fenner, Isbister; quarter, Coulter; snap, Williams; insides, Warren, Perry; middles, Laing, Greco; outsides, Allison, Henderson; subs, Holden, Jordi, Keith, Hennessey, Harris, Brebner, Webster, Gray, Taylor.

Queen's: Flying wing, Sonshine; halves, Barnabe, Munro, Young; quarter, Krug; snap, Barker; insides, Kostnik, Waugh; middles, Zvonkin, Kirkland; outsides, Wynn, Elliott; subs, Jones, Beves, Weir, Lewis, Thompson, McManus, McMahon, Scott.

Officials: Referee: Fred Bartlett; umpire: Tom Barton; head lineman, Ike Sutton.

MEDS, TRINITY IN SOCCER DRAW

A mediocre interfaculty soccer game between Meds and Trinity which was played on the front campus on Friday afternoon ended in a scoreless draw. As both teams had already been eliminated from the playoffs there was little at stake, and thus, although neither team was a sensational one, every man tried hard, and in the ten minutes' overtime both squads travelled at a great rate.

crisis, they would very easily find excuses. Take for example the trouble between Japan and China some time ago. There were several murmurs of protest from conservative nations but that was all. The reason why we had only protests is, as far as I can see, because the Chinese are the yellow race of people. But if an international court had given Japan 12 hours to get out of China and if the court was ready to back its ultimatum with an army supplied by the whole world, I believe that Japan would have made a hasty and quiet retreat.

So here's for a strong international court and for a world that sees that happiness lies in peace and fairness to everyone.

Yours sincerely,
P. Levine.

ing of an automobile ride through the desert, a well planned composition of pictures taken from the car, looking first at the road ahead, then behind, and now and then a shot of the car itself. At the end of the ride there is a fade in of the destination, a castle, which grows into the picture, gradually blotting out the road. Although the ride took up several minutes, it was interesting all the way. The music was worked in very artistically, sometimes focussing the whole attention, and sometimes merely as a background.

Next week comes Le Gendre de studied in their French Authors in understanding the picture. Well, we shall see, and perhaps we shall hear these.

Therefore, gentlemen, there are more than five hundred new feminine telephone numbers for your personal perusal this social season. Of course some are the old favourites,—KJ. 3828, KJ. 3266 and KJ. 1946,—but a request to speak to the new names at the old numbers will bring results. Naturally many a good name last year listed in the Fourth Year section has now been scratched, but if you still have interests there,—hang on to your old Directory!
It has no turn in value, anyway.

The Director of the Date Bureau that this flood of Directories into the hands of lonely students may have upon

Gas-bag Expert Guest Speaker At Gastronomic School Affair

Professor Egelbert Smoozlepooks, who thrilled the world no less than forty-five times last year with his daring flights into the stratosphere, will be one of a host of important digni-taries at the School Dinner tomorrow night.

Our reporter, on asking the Professor why his wife accompanied him on each of his trips into the stratosphere, was informed that she was so "gol-darned" homely that he would rather take her along than kiss her good-bye.
At which juncture Mrs. Smoozlepooks muttered something of an uncomplimentary nature but as that lady was not wearing her teeth at the time it was lost on our reporter.

Professor Smoozlepooks, remarking on existing conditions in Smoozlepook-iana, stated that things were as well as might be expected in this day of 5 cent cigars. More and more applications were being made out for marriage certificates and from what the Professor could gather about 50 per cent of the people getting married were men.
Which proves that the men are at least holding their own in a few lines.

PROF. SMOOZLEPOOKS

Asking the Professor to leave a few words of advice for the girls and boys on the campus he warned us to keep out of the paths of onrushing trains, to refrain from giving small children loaded shot guns and a host of others pols of wisdom too too numerous to mention.

Sunday Evening Concert

The Great Hall at Hart House was once again crowded to capacity during the regular Sunday evening concert.
The guest artist being Mr. Alberto
Guerrero, noted Toronto pianist.

Mr. Guerrero played a long and comprehensive programme. Beginning his recital with two selections of Haydn's—Andante and Variations, and Sonata in E flat, Mr. Guerrero impressed his audience in this initial group with his commanding technique and interpretation of these beautiful old classic masterpieces.

The most interesting part of the programme were, however, the group of moderns by Debussy and Ravel, "Jardins sous la pluie", by the former,
and "Jeux d'eau" by the latter.

As was characteristically stated by an observer, "one can readily appreciate the source of Mr. Gershwin's material that went to make up the famous 'Rhapsody in Blue' on hearing the above mentioned numbers". However, Mr. Guerrero did very successfully bring out the overtone masterpieces to full advantage. These numbers proved doubly interesting in view of the fact that they have been quite recently heard by that outstanding artist, Mr. Reginald Stewart.

BRITISH PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYMENT THEME OF SPEECH

Problem of Relief Came into Existence in 1921, Says
Hetherington

DIFFICULT PROBLEM

Completely New National Service to be Introduced Next Year

The unemployment situation in Great Britain, and the system that has been developed in the mother country since the problem of relief came into being in 1921, was the subject of an address given by Dr. J. H. W. Hetherington, principal of the University of Liverpool, to a large capacity crowd in the Great Hall of the Economics Building on Monday afternoon.

"It is a question that will engage most nations for many years to come, and about which the majority of nations have much to learn," the speaker stated.

Dr. Hetherington recalled the fact that between 1921 and 1933, there have always been between one and three millions unemployed in the British Isles. It was pointed out, however, that, taking any one year, the number unemployed for the entire year would not be any higher than 150,000. For the purpose of providing work for these short-term unemployed an unemployment relief scheme was devised. But it was soon found impossible to deal with prolonged unemployment cases in this way," the speaker continued, "and when these longer terms of unemployment became more frequent, it was seen that a supplementary scheme would have to be devised." The last two years have been spent largely in

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Ottawa—Until the Ontario government signs the relief agreement sent to Premier Hepburn on October 20, Minister of Labour Gordon will not deal further with Hon. Peter Heenan's proposed $16,000,000 road building programme.

Asuncion, Paraguay—A bold plan for "an invasion into Bolivian territory" was formulated by the Paraguayan high command last night, elated by victory in the Gran Chaco border war.

Paris—France was warned sharply yesterday that Germany is building up a mighty military machine, and could, by next year, throw 5,500,000 men into action within a few days.

Representatives from all the Protestant churches in Canada will present a united front with the Roman Catholic Church in its drive against immoral motion pictures, it was officially learned yesterday.

Abolition of Section 98 of the Criminal Code is assured, if the Liberal party under Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King is elected to power at the next federal election. Hon. Harry C. Nixon, provincial secretary in the Hepburn administration, declared yesterday.

MEETING POSTPONED

Owing to the illness of Hon. Paul Leduc, the meeting of the Liberal Club which was to be held at the Women's Union on Thursday evening, November 22, has been postponed indefinitely.

Christmas Literary Issue

The annual Christmas literary issue of The Varsity will be published Friday, December 14. All manuscripts and art work for competition must be submitted by December 11. Prizes for the best work in the various departments will be announced later.

The literary issue last year was cancelled due to lack of sufficient material of a high enough standard. Students are asked to make an effort to get their short stories, articles, or drawings in soon, in order that the work of the judges may be facilitated. Further details will be furnished in a later issue.

SAYS ART BEGAN 40,000 YEARS AGO

Development of Landscape Painting Follows Growth of Science

"Art had its beginning some 40,000 years ago, when early man drew on the cave walls, pictures of animals," declared Dr. Currelly in a lecture at the Museum on Friday afternoon.

"At the same time, sympathetic magic or the idea that if one has a picture of a thing one has control of it was in full swing. Because a more accurate representation of the thing gave one better control and because man's livelihood as a hunter depended on his keen observation the pictures in Paleolithic times were extremely accurate," Dr. Currelly said, adding that it was regrettable that this accuracy of vision had been lost in the course of time.

"Agriculture, at a later stage, led to the tribe with one man in authority, the chief. When he died many of his servants were killed in order that he would have someone to look after him in the next world. But this led to the wholesale slaughter of the tribe, so that it was very useful when they got the idea that the image of the servant would do. This image-painting led to the tradition in art that the representation of the person should not be ephemeral but serious, and should show no motion but character. Certain conventions were necessary for the characters depicted in low relief, as all the necessary parts of man had to be depicted in order that the servant would be of any use in the next world."

"The third stage in the development of art came with the evolution of religion," Dr. Currelly said. "The vil-

Dominant Factor in Style of Chair Popular in Elizabethan Period

MISS HOME LECTURES

"The fact that Queen Elizabeth wished to emphasize her low slender waist with extremely wide skirts, was a dominant factor in the style of chair popular during her period and for some time after," declared Miss Ruth Home, M.A., in a lecture on period furniture at the Museum yesterday. "The solid arms of the chairs were cut out to accommodate the billowing skirts, thus causing a departure from the more solid chairs of Henry VIII."

Furniture as a whole in England after 1550, began to be dominated by Flemish ideas. Architectural designs in book form were imported from Flanders with the result that the Italian influence waned rapidly and Flemish details became popular. These were strap work, bulky caryatids, architectural effects, cartouche motif, rounded arching and a quaintness and sturdiness which completely destroyed the Gothic tradition.

CONTROL BY STATE MARKS SOCIALISM

"Ham Sandwich" Debating Club Debates Suitability of Socialism

COMMITTEE APPOINTED

"Socialism is not the giving up of personal belongings, but state control of the sources of production," said Mr. Proust, the affirmative leader, who opened the novel debate held in Victoria College Men's Common Room, by introducing the chairman, Professor Havlock. In order to allow Mr. Proust to be the first speaker, Professor Havlock agreed to change the topic of the debate to "Resolved that Socialism is compatible with the alleged Western mind" instead of "Resolved that Socialism is incompatible with the alleged Western mind", as was printed in yesterday's Varsity.

Mr. Proust began speaking to the assembled diners on Socialism in Scandinavia, China and Russia, while he was munching away at a ham sandwich. The chairman politely informed him that he was the only one allowed to speak while eating or smoking. The honorable member from Oram stated that Socialism as found in the East would never be practicable in the Western world where the people have a higher mind and are more individualistic. He also declared that capitalism, not socialism, is needed where capital is necessary to open the new sources of production in a country such as Canada where the government is unable to do it.

The debate was such a success that it was decided to hold another in the

School Dinner Held To-night

This evening the annual School Dinner is being celebrated in Hart House, with the Hon. Vincent Massey as the chief guest speaker. About seven hundred members of the Faculty of Applied Science are expected to be present, and this is the forty-fifth consecutive year that the School Dinner has been held since its inception.

St. Mike's Parliament in Session Thinks Discovery No Indiscretion

In a spirited session in the dormitory of the college, St. Michael's Student Parliament discussed the momentous question, "Resolved that the discovery of America was not an indiscretion." After a worthy battle of great length the vote of the House sustained the government by a vote of 85 to 45.

Premier J. C. Doyle was the first speaker. The characteristic note of the debate was struck immediately when A. Harris, leader of the opposition, hotly contested the Rt. Hon. Mr. Doyle's assertion that America was discovered by Columbus in 1492. However, with the greatest astuteness the two sides of the House finally decided that America had by some manner or means, person or persons, been actually discovered, settled and exploited. With

Proposal to Create a Smoking

Comment

"I don't smoke because the habit doesn't interest me in the least. I derive absolutely no pleasure from it," said Millie Pect, III St. Michael's, and so expressed the opinion of a great many girls at her college when questioned yesterday by The Varsity for their views of smoking in the colleges. The girls questioned at both St. Mike's and Victoria felt that it was unnecessary.

Muriel Salkild, III Vic, said, "With Diana's so near why smoke in the college? Besides, as we have no common room, there is no place for it."

Chris Kennedy of St. Mike's was of the same opinion. "If there were a smoking room the girls would smoke too much. I would hate the restrictions of such a room. The present practice of going to a restaurant gives exercise and limits the cigarettes to a few a day."

Of course, there are those who disapprove of smoking on any grounds.

"I don't think smoking should be allowed in any college," said Bessie Carr, II Vic. "It takes from the fineness and goodness of a woman—is incompatible with her nature in general." And Betty Grobba, IV St. Mike's, "Our girls are good healthy types, not with the nervous habit that makes some smoke in locker rooms. It's a fact that the modern girls only smoke because they don't know what to do

Soph-Junior Party To-morrow Night

One of the biggest year parties of the season looms for tomorrow night when the four year presidents of University College will present the U.C. Soph-Junior party at the Women's Union. A special and novel feature of the evening will be a preview of the U.C. Follies, which will be put on as a floor show under the direction of Saul Rae and Madge Shaw. Two good orchestras will be there and plenty of dancing partners of the opposite sex are promised. The party is being presented by the presidents of the four years in U.C., Don Stewart, Freddie Chapman, Marjorie Carter and Les Rowntree.

admirable aplomb Mr. Doyle dismissed the aggravating subject by asserting that Columbus was a member of a very large family and thus excluded from his parental hearth had in his wanderings discovered or rediscovered America.

Mr. Doyle based his argument on the need for an outlet for Europe's surplus population. He cited the potato famine in Ireland as sufficient reason for large scale immigration, the absorption of which justifies America's existence. He said, "The more Irish that are scattered throughout the countries of the world the better for them." (Loud cries of Erin go bragh.) Continuing he drew a touching picture of the peoples of Western Europe con-

MASTHEAD MEETING

There will be a meeting of the masthead of The Varsity in the women's office today at five o'clock. All members of the masthead are asked to attend.

In Memoriam

At a late and darkish hour last evening two furtive figures were observed slinking towards the front line trenches north of Queen's Park, where road widening activities had ceased for the day. The red lamps on sentinel duty cast a crimson glow on the Committee of Two as they went into a huddle at a certain point along the strip of freshly laid concrete. Then as one stood guard the other pulled back the protecting tarpaulins and went to work with a stout stick. No more than a minute later,—the canvas restored to its place, the scouts had disappeared into the gloom. In the fast hardening sidewalk, however, they had left an inscription for posterity to read:

IN MEMORIAM
To Fallen Trees
—A.S.G.A.—

The lone watcher might have reported the raid to the careless enemy outposts (the city's night watchman was on duty near his Charles Street shack) but being a War Correspondent, he reported it to "The Varsity".

STEVENS UPHELD IN PROCEEDINGS

Proceedings of Stevens Committee not Futile, Say
Debaters

MOTION DEFEATED 60-25

In the debate at Victoria College last evening, "Resolved that the Proceedings of the Stevens Committee are Futile", the motion was decisively defeated by 60-25.

In speaking for the affirmative, Mr. Bill Grant pointed out that far greater success would result from individuals in a party, rather than individuals by themselves. "One may," he said, "expect more measures from the Conservative party than from the Stevens' Commission," and strengthened his argument by pointing out the fact that "Mr. Bennett has a backbone."

Mr. Ken Woodworth in attempting to defeat the motion got down to facts. He pointed out the discoveries which the commission has made, the fact that the T. Eaton Company bought dresses at $12.50 a dozen and that the selling price was 71 per cent higher, and went on to give examples of the same thing going on in Quebec. He gave the further cases of the Woolworth and the Imperial Tobacco company, and informed the House of the unfortunate conditions of the farmer. Mr. Woodworth then stated the results of the Stevens' investigation on each of the offending companies, and spoke of the wages raised in each case.

The next upholder of the motion,

Views on National Policy Are

WAS SENT TO BEAVERBROOK

Reason Asked for Failure to Support Agreement
Against War

Roused into action by the belligerent attitude of William Randolph Hearst, noted publisher of the United States, the American Association of College Editors have sent him a questionnaire in which they ask him to express more fully his views on national policy. The questionnaire was published last Tuesday in The Carnegie Tartan, student organ of the Carnegie Technological Institute. The questionnaire is the same one which Sir Norman Angell sent to Lord Beaverbrook on the same issue, and which the latter refused to answer. It is now contained in Beverly Nichols' best seller, "Cry Havoc", and was reproduced in the Tartan by permission of the publishers of that book.

In the questionnaire, Mr. Hearst, who is recognized as the United States' counterpart of Lord Beaverbrook, is asked among other things to explain why he declines to support an international agreement to prevent war; how he can believe that one nation can possibly arm itself up to the point where it is superior to another country, as the competitive system of armaments now exists, while another country is trying equally hard to do the same thing; how he can advocate the policy of America's staying out of

ANTIPATHY TO WAR IS GENERAL HERE

Opinions Differ Greatly, However, Regarding Means of Prevention

LEAGUE UPHELD

Student opinion on the campus concerning yesterday's correspondence column in The Varsity, varies greatly. Considerable interest has been aroused by both the questionnaire and the correspondence, although some students considered any discussion of the matter quite useless.

John Chene, III U.C., is of the opinion that a world police force will be organized eventually but, "It will take decades to improve the organization and it will have the same problems on a larger scale that a municipal organization has to cope with now, such as graft, patronage, etc. Therefore, we must not expect it to bring about a utopia in world affairs."

Mr. Tim Begora personally approves of the establishment of a world police force, but stated that "Although I am entirely opposed to war I can't help feeling that wars will exist as in the past."

Mr. Charles Galloway, III U.C., "There will be great difficulty in reaching such a situation, but if such could be accomplished it would be a valuable step towards world peace."

Mr. Laurence Carr, III Meds, approves of the idea. "Inasmuch as it promotes international goodwill. On the other hand, it will be difficult to establish equality of representation."

Mr. Evans, II U.C., agrees with Levine in part, "In that the League of Nations has its shortcomings but where smaller nations are concerned it has the ability to terminate hostilities. As far as the setting up of a world police force is concerned, it will be hard to

A SUCCESSION

One of the most general failings at the University of Toronto is the inability of undergraduates to express themselves in the English language. This was pointed out by Mr. Gilbert Jackson, professor of the Economics department, at the first lecture we remember attending back in our early youth, and is just as true today as it was then. The truth of this statement was borne out by the fact that the annual Christmas literary issue which The Varsity had been accustomed to printing was cancelled last year. The judges stated that there was no work of a standard which was worthy of a prize, and very little worthy of being put into print.

The sad part of it all is the apparent indifference of the faculty to this deficiency. The curricula offered by the various colleges affiliated with the University afford the student an opportunity to obtain a knowledge of every profession except that of writing. There is no course which will provide him with any training in expressing his thoughts in words. English essays, for instance, are rarely marked as samples of good English, but for the amount of knowledge which can be shown in the stipulated number of words.

It is not merely a coincidence that the University of Toronto has given to the world famous names in every sphere except that of literary accomplishment. A name such as that of Merrill Dennison stands unique in the annals of our graduates. While it is admittedly impossible to train writers according to a specified formula in the wholesale manner that doctors and engineers are created, some steps at least should be taken to provide general literary training. In the Pass course, the most popular English course, no attempt is made to study contemporary writers, while hours are spent analyzing Milton's emotions in any given situation, trying to decide whether he really meant the Areopagitica or just wrote it in fun. A student attempting to find a lecture in English which would aid him in becoming a fluent, interesting, and forceful writer, would be faced with an impossible task.

The department of University Extension offers courses in journalism which are generally conceded to be useless. The Varsity attempts to provide a practical course in news-writing, but is necessarily limited in scope, and does not pretend to contain literary or creative work to any great extent. Undergraduate societies attempting to produce magazines are forced to publish immature trash. There is no lack of students who want to write, and think they can write. What can be done to help them?

For our part, we pledge The Varsity to publish such literary work as we receive from time to time, provided that it is of a reasonably high calibre. Perhaps a separate department of the paper can be created to foster such efforts. Beyond this, we can only suggest that present courses be amended to provide some help for the student who would express himself, but cannot.

CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE NATIVE TO MAN'S NATURE

"The True Nature of Religious Experience" is Subject of Dr. John Line

"Christian experience is an experience native to human nature," were the words with which Dr. John Line introduced the first of a series of lectures yesterday afternoon to the S.C.M. of Victoria College on the subject of social relations. Dr. Line spoke on "The True Nature of Religious Experience." "The factors in religious that beget the church carry consequences for the whole social relationship and every individual within it," he said.

An abstract religious man has been devised who can be saved when everyone is lost and be religiously minded in an ethical vacuum. He is a personage analogous to the economic man. "Pre-

European affairs, especially today when it is the greatest creditor nation on earth; and how he can oppose the pooling of national power to support the observance of a common rule of international life like the arbitration of disputes. The editors end by stressing the importance of the issue, and the necessity of an immediate answer.

"The significance, the importance of those questions is increased because there are TWO powerful men in TWO powerful countries to whom these questions may be put as to ONE man. Particularly for that reason, they must have an answer... not for the readers of the newspapers of either Lord Beaverbrook or William Randolph Hearst, but for US, the generation of young Americans who might have to fight another war if Lord Beaverbrook and William Randolph Hearst happen to be wrong, if PREPAREDNESS does not preserve peace."

Royal Alexandra

Max Gordon's production of "Roberta," designed as stunning and melodic entertainment for the eye and ear respectively, opened in Toronto last night. Mr. Gordon has seen fit to mount his show on the most sumptuous scale conceivable and has apparently spared no expense in his effort to dazzle the spectator.

Often when confronted with embellishments of such excellence we are suspicious of the merit of the actual show itself. Analysis of the production of "Roberta" occasionally reveals some weakness in its fundamental structure. Certainly not in the plot, for the book is based on Alice Duer Miller's novel "Gowns by Roberta." Definitely not in Jerome Kern's haunting music, which is the highlight of the show, an unending feast. Nor are the principals in any way inferior to their lush surroundings. Tamara is every inch a princess and her grace of movement is second only to her brooding, velvety voice. Odette Myrtil, suffering from eye strain and compelled to wear smoked glasses last night, puts on a grand show as the hoyden Scharwenka, and no review can go to press without high tribute to the veteran Fay Templeton, who carries her sympathetic role with majestic ease. No, it would seem that something anticipated just didn't quite come out of the bag of tricks. For one thing, the dancing is sketchy and instead of serving as a boon to the hit songs, it seems to be dragged in by way of a duty. One chorus number, one bizarre interlude in the fashion show and a typical vaudeville dance constitute the terpsichore for the evening.

Also, although the large audience lapped up the spicy lines delivered by the Messrs. Jarvis and Mar, the fact remains that their particular brash brand of comedy is reminiscent of Minsky's burlesque and second-rate vaudeville.

In the face of so gorgeous a production, however, it would indeed be a capricious critic who did not recommend Roberta for the tuneless evening it fills and for the fulfillment of a part of that old theatrical glamour which has been lost to our city this great while.

Imperial

Fred Astaire of the dancing Astaires steps into the limelight in the Gay Divorcee at the Imperial this week. Aided by Ginger Rogers, who boasts the slimmest waist in Hollywood, Mr. Astaire gives a new meaning to the value of a "continental".

In the company of Edward Everett Horton, who sports a wig to prove that he is a barrister, the dance master becomes involved in the tangles of English divorce law. The marriage of the gay divorcee, Miss Rogers, to a geologist went on the rocks and Edward is called in to negotiate a divorce. Miss Rogers is in the company of Alice Brady and the denouement finds Miss Brady and Mr. Horton married and Miss Rogers and Mr. Astaire on the way to the preacher.

With the exception of the "continental" sequence, which drags a little the picture makes one wish that he had seen the stage presentation of the show.

Fratellanza Hear Reverend Father McCorkell in Travelogue

Sunday afternoon the Fratellanza of the University of Toronto was privileged to hear an interesting discourse delivered by the Reverend Father McCorkell, superior of St. Michael's College. In inaugurating the first of a series of talks on Italy, as to its contribution to the world in art and culture, which will be given at various times during the scholastic year by members of the University staff, the reverend father very appropriately gave his talk on a voyage to Italy.

Beginning from the southern part of Italy, in a brilliant sequence of word pictures, Father McCorkell traced his route through Naples, to Rome. Quite contrary to belief that poppies are to be found in Flanders field the reverend father stated that poppies are found in profusion in the wheat fields of Campania. He went further and described the intriguing scenes to be viewed from Monte Cassino. He pointed—

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

Still the St. Hilda's basketball squad is undefeated. They took the Nurses for quite a ride last night when they beat them by a score of 61-2. As yet the Saints have had no competition to speak of. To get a real game before the finals they are going to play a team of their own grade on Thursday, November 29. But more of this later!

The ball was down at the Nurses' end for most of the game. Isabel Wallbridge played a steady game and fed the ball to the two starring forwards, Mary Carre and Marg McDonald. Mary scored high but was occasionally slow on her passes. Marg McDonald played a beautiful game. Edie Ardagh was only on for the last five minutes of the play. If she had been on the floor for the entire game the Saints might have mounted up an embarrassing score.

The Nurses fought hard and rather too wildly as the number of personal fouls called on Jean Chrysler and Marion Tressider indicates. The petite Nurses' forwards did their best but they didn't have a chance against the tall Blue and Grey defence. Anna Soper and Dorothy Clark did stellar work but were unable to score a basket. They made their two points on free throws.

Speedy floor play characterized the basketball game between the Vic Jrs. and U.C. Freshies last night. Both sides shot rather wildly, but in spite of that it was a good game to watch. The Freshies were greatly improved for Vic beat them by a 27-12 score at their first meeting.

Betty Jenkinson, a member of the Vic outfit, is a very versatile player and showed up well on both the forward and defence lines. Dot Henderson played well on the Scarlet and Gold forward line, but had hard luck with her shooting. Muriel Beaton turned in a stellar defence game.

Doris Johnson was responsible for most of U.C.'s score and was playing real basketball. Marg Taylor was outstanding on the defence line. We like the casual way Miriam Kronick plays. "Come here, I'm waiting for a pass!"

The Vic baseball nine brought in another win last night when they downed the Medley team 30-5. Vic played excellent ball. They have a real catcher and pitcher, Gretta Maxwell and Jean Blundell respectively.

The Medley outfit showed a decided improvement over their Friday's performance, although they were on the tail end of the score for the whole game. Toby Duke was the best player on this losing squad.

Again may we remind all the U.C. women who are badminton fans that there is a meeting scheduled for you at 1.30 today at the Women's Union. Everyone is cordially invited and humbly requested to put in an appearance.

Tonight at 7.30 the U.C. Seniors meet Meds in a basketball game at the O.C.E. gym. U.C. is putting up a good fight for the group title and Meds deserve a lot of credit for getting up their team. So the game should bring loyal supporters for both sides.

VICTORIA DEFEATED 3-2 IN SOCCER GAME BY U.C.

University College won the first playoff game when they defeated Victoria 3-2 in a close soccer match on the front campus yesterday afternoon. The winners will play S.P.S. for the Arts Faculty Cup, emblematic of interfaculty soccer supremacy. The second game has been arranged for Wednesday afternoon.

U.C. held the upper hand for the first half of the initial period with

SEMI-FINAL TILT IS PLAYED TODAY

O.A.C. and Junior Meds Meet This Afternoon in Mulock Cup Series

WINNERS MEET DENTS

This afternoon at 2.30 the Bloor St. Stadium will be the scene of still another rugby classic when O.A.C. and Jr. Meds meet in the Mulock Cup semi-final. The winner of the tilt will meet Dents to decide who will hold the historic mug.

The Aggies are a typical Guelph team inasmuch as they depend on a heavy charging line for their offensive. Meds, on the other hand, look to their fleet backfield to garner the yards. The outcome of the game will probably rest on whether or not the Meds' line can afford their halves protection from the O.A.C. huskies.

Both teams won their group via the spectacular finish route. It was not until the final games in each group that they were certain of entering the playdowns. O.A.C. dropped the first game to U.C. but completed their schedule with a clean slate. Meds tied two games with Trinity but won the replay of one of the games decisively.

Both teams on their efforts to date deserve to be in the finals. Both of them will be in there today fighting for the chance to meet the Dentists, whichever team wins, it will be hard to stop them from taking the Mulock Cup.

LISTS OPEN WEDNESDAY FOR ATHLETIC AT-HOME

Lists for the Athletic At-Home, which will be held in Hart House on December 7, will be opened in the Athletic Office on Wednesday, it was announced yesterday. The Athletic At-Home will be, as in previous years, one of the outstanding events of the year. Dancing will take place in the gymnasium to the music of Leo Romanelli and his orchestra, beneath a sky of blue and white. A sit-down supper will be served in the Great Hall during the course of the evening.

The guests of honour will be the first "T" holders of the current year, and a special attempt is being made by the committee to see that all interfaculty athletes and those interested in interfaculty sport will be present. The lists will be open for only a few days, during which time students who wish to must sign. The attendance will be limited to 400 couples.

Among those who will be present will be Mrs. H. J. Cody, Mrs. D. Bruce Macdonald, Mrs. Vincent Massey, Mrs. J. G. Fitzgerald, Mrs. C. H. Mitchell, Mrs. T. A. Russell, Mrs. M. W. Wallace, Mrs. Wallace Seecombe, Mrs. N. A. MacKenzie, Mrs. J. F. Macdonald, Mrs. G. D. Porter, Mrs. J. A. McCallum, Mrs. T. A. Reed, Mrs. W. Easton Brown and Mrs. Warren Stevens.

McPherson scoring two beautiful goals on passes from Goulding and Errington. Victoria came back strong and tied it up before the rest period with Cochrane flicking in a long hoist from in front of the goal mouth. Rollaston tied the score for the Scarlet and Gold when he beat Bridgen on a penalty shot, after the latter had been knocked over and Rod Jack, in endeavouring to stop the ball, touched it with his hand. Play ranged fairly even in the final period with McPherson scoring the only goal. The losers forced the play during the dying minutes of the game, but the defence of the Red and White remained impregnable.

Victoria: Dyke, Pratt, Scott, Woodsworth, Simpson, Cooper, Cochrane, Rollaston, Grimes, Rutherford, Taylor, McDonald, Criderman, Neeb, Campbell.

Referee: D. Rowland.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Tomorrow the list for the Athletic At-Home opens. This is the one occasion of the year when the sporting fraternity climb into boiled shirts and hold a party for the active young men of the University who have been successful in winning a first "T". The date of the party is Dec. 7th, when some four hundred couples are expected to dance and dine in honour of the above-mentioned athletes. This is the one and only time of the season when the T holders get public recognition and such a cause will be likely to attract more than the quota of sport loving individuals who also like to dance. The list opens tomorrow and closes when they have their four hundred signatures. It would be advisable for all who are interested to sign the list as soon as possible.

With the Yates Cup all wrapped up, ready for delivery to Kingston, the Varsity intermediates are now alone in the field to carry on the fight for further honours for the U. of T. The intermediates will clash with McMaster here Saturday in the curtain-raiser to the Sarnia-Regina game. One of the most outstanding performers on the Seconds' lineup is Sid Jackson. The blonde halfback, Saturday pulled a Frank Merriwell when he carried the ball in three plays from his own forty mark, to a touchdown. The first run he made was good for 35 yards and when tackled it took several minutes to revive him. He went right back for another 15-yard run and then on the third play went through centre for the major.

Tomorrow the semi-finalists in the Mulock Cup series will go to war at Varsity Stadium to see who will meet Dents for the title. The Dentists drew the bye into the finals and as a result Junior Meds and O.A.C. will clash in the preliminary. Early in the season the above three teams were only considered to have an outside chance of being in the final round but all three dark horses came through. Tomorrow will probably see one of the toughest battles to be witnessed this year. They never get very affectionate in these Mulock Cup games and this battle will probably be no exception. The winners of the series will meet Dents at Varsity Stadium Friday.

Hockey will this week make its bow, and as for the past several years Varsity will play their opening game in Hamilton. Playing an opening game in Hamilton is never a very attractive proposition and this season will be no exception. In the practices to date several new faces have been prominent but the veterans of last year still look like the cream of the crop. Varsity's assignment in taking on the Tigers is all the tougher when it is realized that the Blue squad is still in the preliminary stages of training while the Tigers have been going for some time. Several of their members tried their hands at professional hockey and although they failed to make the grade they certainly worked up some condition.

Varsity's basketball squad was last night augmented by the appearance of several men from St. Mike's. Meagher, Crowley and Connelly were in uniform last night and Hughie Marks is expected to put in an appearance in the near future. These men, plus the formidable squad of last season, should give Varsity a team which will be heard from in both the local and intercollegiate leagues.

Senior football is now being played in the locker room where it has taken the form of post mortems. Most of the oratorical football now being produced gets officially under way when someone signifies his intention of contributing to the conversation by commencing with the word "if". It seems that Varsity were sure fire winners "if" innumerable things had not occurred. Locker room football is always interesting, but that does not exclude the fact that Queen's are champions of the league, despite the fact that Varsity finished the regular schedule in front.

O.C.E. TAKE FORESTRY IN LACROSSE TUSSLE

O.C.E. won a hard fought lacrosse game from Forestry in the big gym of Hart House yesterday afternoon by the score of 6-3.

The game was spotty with occasional flashes of good lacrosse at intermittent intervals. Douglas and Lindsay were the best for the Teachers, getting two goals each, while Monday and Haggie scored Forestry's two tallies.

O.C.E.: English, Colmer, McKenna, Douglas, King, Lindsay, Grant, Henderson, Sheehan.

Forestry: McCoolle, Greer, Monday, Larsen, Haggie, Crossley, Johnson, Carrique, Cowan.

U.C. DEFEATS VICTORIA TO ELIMINATE CHAMPIONS

A new champion will be crowned in the Interfaculty Volleyball League this year. This became certain yesterday afternoon when Junior Vic, last season's titleholders, bowed before Jr. U.C. in three games, by scores of 7-15, 15-9, 15-9. The defeat puts Junior Vic definitely out of the running, while the undefeated U.C. squad are now sure of first place in their group.

The ability of the U.C. players to handle the terrific drives of the Vic spikers was responsible for their victory. This superior steadiness got Vic badly disorganized at times, and even the sensational net play of Hamilton and Cronin could not make up for the occasional lapses.

Jr. Vic: Hamilton, Lang, Cronin, Tiller, Hilliard, Fallis, Marlette, Welsh. Jr. U.C.: Zaldin, Gardstein, Kelter, Beatty, Bunt, David, Savlov, Applebaum, Shortt.

MEDLEY TEAM LOSES IN BASEBALL GAME

The Vic nine defeated the Medley squad in their own gym last night by the score of 30-5 in a women's interfaculty baseball game. The winners played heads-up ball throughout the game, making very few errors and hitting heavily to all corners of the field. Gretta Maxwell and Jean Blundell, battery for Vic, were the most outstanding players on their team, and were given excellent support by their team-mates.

Although the score would appear rather one-sided, the game was an exciting one from start to finish. The Medley team, although making several costly errors, showed themselves to be a much improved team, Toby Duke, pitcher, being their best player.

Vic: Gretta Maxwell, Jean Blundell, Jean Randle, Ruby Townsmd, Muriel Eastwood, Ruth Cook, Eleanor Hart, Marian Pixley.

Medley: Melba Grier, Toby Duke, Christine McArthur, Thelma Liberty, Jean Davey, Jean Laird, Jessie Hart, Geraldine Farrar.

ST. HILDA'S CAGERS DEFEAT NURSES 61-2

Last night St. Hilda's completely floored Nurses in a 61-2 victory, at O.C.E. gym in the interfaculty basketball series. Despite the overwhelming score against them Nurses put up a valiant counter attack. During the first half the play was wild, and the personal fouls mounted up. Nurses put up a brave united front with Anna Soper and Dorothy Clarke starring. Dorothy Clark was the only scorer.

Mary Louise Carr, and Margaret MacDonald piled up basket after basket for St. Hilda's in the second half.

Each makes the other doubly delicious

Play was sloppy on the part of both teams, and St. Hilda's shot wildly. Enid Palmer and Kay Grubbe of the winning team effectively stopped any chances for Nurses to score.

VIC JUNIORS TAKE U.C. BY CLOSE 21-20 SCORE

Vic Juniors defeated U.C. Freshies by 21-20 in a basketball game last night in O.C.E. gym. It was a very close and exciting game, and play passed quickly from one end of the floor to the other. U.C. led at half time by 8-7.

Vic Jrs.: Marian Best (3), Muriel Beaton (5), Betty Jenkinson (3), Mildred Sedgewick, Eleanor McIntosh, Ruth Young, Sheila Brown, Alice Kipper, Dorothy Henderson.

U.C. Freshies: Doris Johnson (14), Joyce Tenenbaum (4), Aileen O'Brien (2), Miriam Kronick, Margaret Taylor, Jean Meiers, Rita Clarke, Edith McGruder.

OPINION VARIES ABOUT SMOKING

with their hands."

Smoking among the ladies is, however, pretty general. "I'd love to smoke in my own room," sighed Agnes Garner. Several suggested that the two colleges, St. Michael's and Victoria, which do not sanction women smoking, might let the students vote on the question. Gertrude Harcourt and Jean Harfield put it bluntly. "The girls smoke, the sisters know it, and it would be preferable to draw the weed on 'hallowed precincts' rather than on the street corner."

The men's opinions were influenced by their pecuniary interests. "Sure," said Gordon Roberts, II U.C., "let 'em smoke as long as they aren't my cigarettes. I only know one girl who has the good taste to use a pipe."

Frank Jones, I Vic, thinks girls are more companionable if they smoke.
"Being a heavy smoker myself, I'd rather have a girl sit and smoke than just sit. That, of course, depends on the circumstances."

And, of course, smoking is an art.
Said W. J. Dunlop, I U.C., "I approve of girls smoking provided they have their own cigarettes. A girl must know how to smoke—she might learn at home behind the barn during the holidays."

lagers wanted a patron god, and in order to have control of it they had an image made. The image had to be housed in the best building the people of the time could provide, and this led to the development of architecture."

The degeneracy of art started according to Dr. Currelly, when the peasants also wanted things, and therefore drew pictures of their gods on their bowls. Each new generation tended to copy and simplify the pictures of their parents, and they ultimately developed in purely geometric designs.

To illustrate the fact that painting is affected by the trend in the world in general, Dr. Currelly said that the development of natural landscape painting in the nineteenth century was parallel with the development of natural science.

The shape of the furniture remained almost the same. Besides the open sides to allow for the farthingale chairs were characterized by low set stretchers to keep the heels raised off the damp and often dirty floor of the time. The backs were still solid but appeared to be thinner and not as bold in their carving.

Beds were very monumental with architectural pillars and ornately carved backrests and canopies, often inlaid in colours or richly painted and gilded. Another type of bed common to every home of the wealthier class was known as the Mourning Bed, similar to the ordinary bed in design but used only by a widow for receiving sympathetic visitors after the death of her husband.
These were draped in black and heavily ornamented.

Chests were still popular but the treatment of the front was now Flemish. Tables were characterized particularly by melon-bulb legs and in their structure show the beginning of the family table, with an under section that Compared to the furniture of the earlier English Renaissance, it is evident that the furniture of Elizabeth's time lacks piquancy and fineness. The work is more crudely done, due per-it was done, does not lend itself to carving and design to the same extent as the softer walnuts used by the Italians.

discussing what kind of system would be instituted for this purpose.

Dr. Hetherington described the system which the government has decided to adopt, and which will go into force some time next year. A completely new national service will be introduced, and will also provide for the rehabilitation of the present unemployment insurance scheme. A commission of six or seven persons is to be appointed who will be responsible for establishing offices all over the country.

"Just how the system will work, I cannot say," said Dr. Hetherington,
"but undoubtedly it will have a profound effect on the entire administrative system in communities all over England. We are on the verge of an extremely interesting transformation."

The speaker went on to discuss the various steps that have been, and will be, taken to prevent moral decay among the unemployed, especially the younger generation. Training camps have been established, and already about 80,000 boys have been taken from the poorer districts, and given training that has enabled them to take jobs in the more prosperous industries of the country.

"Few people realize it, but the new Unemployment Act will give the Minister of Education power to enforce unemployed youths under the age of eighteen to attend school, which they can now leave at the distressfully low age of fourteen," stated Dr. Hetherington.

Toronto—After a special meeting of the Ontario cabinet last night the Hon. Peter Heenan announced that work on the final two links in the Ontario portion of the Trans-Canada highway would start soon.

London, Eng.—Japanese delegates to the tri-power naval discussions yesterday threatened to decline entering any pact to ensure peace in the Pacific.

Toronto—At a special session of the Synod of Ontario Archdeacon Beverly of Barrie was elected suffragan bishop for the diocese.

Toronto—The Royal Winter Fair will open today with a record number of entries.

Toronto—Charges made by M. A. Sorsolci, Deputy Minister of Welfare in Ontario that vice was rampant among school children were being discussed by leading educationists.

London, Eng.—The House of Parliament opened yesterday with a speech from the throne emphasizing the necessity of maintaining peace.

TIME OF CONFUCIUS TOPIC OF LECTURE

Professor White, Former Bishop of Honan, is the Speaker

"Due to the peculiar Chinese custom of burying household articles with the dead, we are now able to understand the arts and crafts of the time of Confucius, from remains which have been excavated from a group of tombs near the Yellow River," stated Professor W. C. White, former Bishop of Honan, in his lecture at the Royal Ontario Museum yesterday on the subject of "The arts and crafts of the time of Confucius."

"Although the coffins had already been looted many objects remained to give evidence that the Chow Dynasty which was in full swing about 550 B.C., was one of the most interesting periods of art in B.C. China."

The excavation of this group of tombs was no easy matter but the results proved to be worth the effort. On either side of the main tomb which contained the coffin were two horse pits which held the skeletons of some seventy horses and the remains of chariots and a few war-like weapons such as swords and knives. One unusual implement which Dr. White described as a "palm duster," was apparently the forerunner of the "knuckle duster," and was used on the inside of the hand to slap the enemy in the face.

The mechanical devices used in the building of the chariots were intricate in their construction and modern in their design. In the central tomb there was a conglomeration of articles, none of them complete as the Chinese law forbade the burying of perfect implements. Many of the urns were corroded and fell to pieces, the rest had to be broken to enable their removal. Bronze articles inlaid with gold, silver and jade; and objects of inlaid glass showed the art had been in existence and improving for many years. The beads when analysed were found to be identical with those made near the Mediterranean in the 6th century, which showed early communication with the

SPIRIT OF INTERNATIONALISM MUST BE GAINED IN CANADA

Callous Officials Destroy Epitaph

Yesterday saw the unveiling of a concrete tablet to the glorious memory of fallen trees. The day was scarcely yet half spent, however, before the noble work had been entirely destroyed, when workmen on Queen's Park Crescent relaid the strip of sidewalk which had been so fondly inscribed.

Once again official callousness causes organized government to ride roughshod over the spirit of the people. To the injury of the stolen forests, is added this further insult. Somebody ought to rise up in protest. But if you don't mind, the War Correspondent will remain in his dugout.

DEBATING UNION FOR BOTH SEXES

To be Discussed by the U. C. Parliamentary Club on Thursday

ACADEMIC DISCUSSION

The U.C. Parliamentary Club will hold its seventh meeting of this year on Thursday, Nov. 22nd, at 4 p.m., in the Junior Common Room of University College. The question before the House at this time will be: "Resolved that this House favours the formation in University College of a Debating Union of both sexes", and a large turn-out is expected. Rt. Hon. M. Wayman will be the Prime Minister and will be opposed by Hon. W. C. Smith as leader of the opposition. The Rt. Hon. N. M. Pinwick will hold the position of speaker of the House and Hart Buck that of Clerk of the House.

The debate will be purely an academic discussion, and if the motion carries, as it probably will, it does not mean that a debating union for both men and women will be formed since the Parliamentary Club is sponsored by the U.C. Literary and Athletic Club which is an organization of men, run by men, for men. The opinion expressed in the Junior Common Room today was to the effect that the women could debate just as capably as the men, but that their introduction into the Parliamentary Club would turn it into a pink tea party.

RENAISSANCE PERIOD SUBJECT FOR ADDRESS

Adamson Reviews Architectural Styles in Different Countries

"Renaissance architecture is marked by beauty of design rather than structural simplicity," said Mr. Gordon Adamson, B.Arch., in his lecture on renaissance architecture at the Museum yesterday afternoon. Due to the teaching and writing of Dante, Boccaccio, Erasmus, the invention of printing and the discovery of the new world, new developments took place in architecture. The invention of gunpowder made heavy fortifications unnecessary and men felt that beautification was more important. There was a return to the classic designs of Greece and Rome.

The movement was felt first in Italy. There most of the architects developed an individual style. Their work was finer because they were also accomplished sculptors, painters and goldsmiths. The most illustrious architect of the period was Palladio, who made use of the square headed arch. This

Cody, Hetherington, Mitchell Also Give Addresses to Engineers

"We Canadians must be internationalists," the Hon. Vincent Massey told Schoolmen assembled at the forty-fifth annual School dinner in Hart House last night. Mr. Massey's speech dealt with the international situation in relation to what Canadians and particularly to what engineers can do towards the solving of the world's problems.

Canada has passed through one period of her growth. She has acquired a national consciousness; she has become a nation. The next task, according to the speaker, will be to gain a sense of internationalism.

"We are today cruelly exposed to the backwash of the world situation," Mr. Massey stated. "We produce three hundred million bushels of wheat that we cannot consume ourselves. Europe as a result of military fears is now producing wheat to such an extent as to curtail our exports. With the advances in aviation we can no longer be called isolated. Self-sufficiency is

Co-eds Not in Desperation Husbands Last Consideration

Are our University women busy preparing themselves for marriage and happy homes? Believe it or not—many of the young ladies who seem to be striving for first class honours with minds wholly occupied by higher studies, have as yet no idea of what they'll do when the degree is finally conferred. Aside from the Household Science and Economics students, most of the ladies questioned yesterday by TheVarsity felt that preparation for wedlock was unnecessary.

Eleanor Coudry of the Physiotherapy course expressed the general opinion. "There's nothing helpful in our course and I think I learn enough at home to enable me to manage a house. At present I'm too busy having a good time. A man prefers a pal to a cook and that is where I fit in. If I like marriage I'll improve the cooking to suit my husband."

"While the University finds enough to fill a four year course, the matters studied are very simple," says Nell Magner, of History. "The less Household Science the better. It is impossible to attend to both housework and abstract subjects. Besides, given five min-

Armament Problem Reflects Accurately European Situation

The disarmament problem, which has recently aroused so much interest in University circles, was the main subject of Dr. Riddell's address in the Economics Building yesterday afternoon. Dr. Riddell is a Canadian representative to the League of Nations and permanently resides at Geneva.

"Europe's disarmament problem," stated Dr. Riddell, "reflects accurately the whole European situation." He described the Disarmament Conference of 1932 as the most important conference since that held in Paris in 1919, and great was the tragedy when in July, 1934, it reached an unbreakable deadlock. The main purpose of the conference was to lay down definite ratios for each country as to the amount of armaments which they might possess, and to include Germany, which had been effectively disarmed by the Versailles Treaty, in this agreement. Two great stumbling blocks immediately arose, the desire of France for security and Germany's demand for equality of armaments. Canada came to the conference determined to support anything that would bring about effective dis-

MEDICAL PROFESSOR GOES TO ENGLAND

Dr. E. J. King Awarded Readership in British Graduate Medical School

PROMINENT HERE

Dr. E. J. King, assistant professor in medical research here, has been appointed to the Readership in Pathological Chemistry in the British Postgraduate Medical School in Hammersmith, an appointment equivalent to the position of Associate Professor and the blue ribbon honour in that field. Dr. King will work under Dr. E. H. Kettle, the famous pathologist of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, who has been appointed to the headship of Pathology in the Postgraduate School.

After graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1923 and Master of Arts in 1924 from McMaster University, Dr. King spent two years at the University of Toronto studying chemistry under Dr. F. B. Allan. He obtained the Ph.D. degree here in 1926 and worked for a time under the direction of Dr. Banting and the late Professor Harding.

After doing work at the Lister Institute in London and the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Munich, Dr. King returned to the University of Toronto and has been on the staff of the chair of Banting Medical Research for the past six years.

ENGLISH COURSE PROVIDES MODELS

Student Should be Stimulated by Study of Famous Authors

NOT A MATTER OF ESSAYS

"A professor pays more attention to the style of an essay than to the amount of knowledge shown," declared Prof. R. J. Pratt of Victoria College in an interview yesterday concerning the editorial in yesterday's Varsity. The editorial deplored the fact that no course in the University was teaching students how to write well, and that English essays were marked for the amount of knowledge contained in them and not for their style.

"The way things are said in an essay is to my mind more important than what is said," Dr. Pratt continued. "Some articles can put one to sleep, while others containing the same information, keep one on his toes. The desire of the professor is to get the student to excel in expression which is shape and construction. An informative essay to my mind is very poor, unless some life is put into the information. I would prefer an essay full of fabrication and lies, as long as it showed sparks of vitality. Facts can always be got, as wood for a fire, but they are useless unless burning."

When asked if the course in English gives any aid to writing, he replied: "The English course is not a

Superior Plunging Ability Gives Doctors 7-0 Victory

MEOLOCK A STANOUT

Winners Will Meet Dents in Finals for Historic Trophy

A plunging Jr. Medical squad won the right to enter the finals for the Mulock Cup when they defeated the O.A.C. gridgers by a 7-0 score in the semi-final played at the Stadium yesterday afternoon. By virtue of their win the Medicals will meet Dents in the final for the cup.

O.A.C.'s much reputed backfield did not predominate, and the Meds' line maintained its high reputation. The doctors owe their win to their superior plunging ability.

A feature of the game was the unusual number of penalties, for offside and no yards, which were fairly evenly distributed.

Both sides played cautiously, attempting few forwards, and completing only one, this by O.A.C. in the last quarter. With a few exceptions, both sides showed timidity in running back kicks, and the tackling was, on the whole, rather weak.

There was no scoring in the first half, and the play was fairly even. Errors by the Meds' backfield in receiving kicks balanced their edge on the line due to the plunging of Medlock and McKone. A fumble by Meds gave O.A.C. the ball near Meds' 20 yard line, but the Doctors broke through to block an attempted place kick. The Aggies nearly scored again in the second quarter, when a long kick by Theale nearly reached the deadline. McKee made the best run of the game to sneak through a line of Aggies over his line to avoid a rouge.

In the third quarter, a bad snap by O.A.C. gave Meds the ball near the Aggies' 20 yard line, and after a succession of heavy plunges and fumbles, McKone carried the ball over the line for a major count which was not converted.

Meds protected their lead by playing aggressively, and before the end of the quarter, a long kick by Newton resulted in a rouge, adding one point to their score.

In the fourth quarter, O.A.C. played desperately, but to no avail. They plunged well and completed the only forward of the game but Meds outplayed them from all angles, and worked the ball close enough for Newton to kick another point.

Medlock of Meds was a standout.

THE GOLDEN EGG

A large percentage of the students enrolled at the University come from homes outside the city. During their stay in Toronto, which in many courses is a prolonged one, they spend, both individually and through their societies, large sums of money on the numerous requirements that make up college life—clothing, accommodation, books, amusement, and a host of others. It has been estimated that the University of Toronto is worth something like five million dollars a year to the City of Toronto, and there is no doubt that a large sum of this is contributed in the form of direct payments from students and student organizations to the merchants and businesses of the city.

Thus apart from all other advantages accruing to the city of Toronto from the situation of the University, it becomes apparent that the financial advantage is tremendous, and that students represent an important buying and consuming public. As such, they should command a certain amount of respect and courtesy from both commercial houses, and other branches of the civic population.

Unfortunately, this is not always the case. The downtown press have long considered the University as their own particular hunting ground, and startling and lurid stories have found their way into the papers, which grossly exaggerate and misrepresent University life.

Business houses are not slow to realize the importance of student trade, but too often their transactions, particularly with inexperienced executives of organizations from the campus, are flavoured with the spirit "Get all you can while you can". Students, unlearned in the intricacies of the business world, and possessing a small appreciation of relative values, are oftentimes "fleeced" for their very ignorance. When the gods throw a "student" into their hands, many firms are prepared to take full advantage of the gift.

Recently, coercive methods were employed to force University organizations to purchase musical entertainment at prices they could ill afford, on the basis of "Moral and Ethical Reasons". Then, the stalwart upholders of the law condescendingly make allowances for the extravagant indulgences of irresponsible persons, on the grounds that they are just "Students", and are not expected to possess the mentality of a normal individual.

To Toronto, the University is undoubtedly a goose that lays the ever recurring golden egg. While citizens are only too quick to realize the value of the egg, they are seldom too hurried in their enquiries about, and their assistance to, the welfare of the goose that lays it. A healthy and contented goose may even be persuaded to lay bigger and finer eggs, but a maltreated and discontented one often languishes, much to the disadvantage of its owners.

STAGE TECHNIQUE SUBJECT OF INFORMAL TALK

said Mr. Hemingway. "Its primary purpose is to show up the actors, not the set. At least half the light should be in the acting area. Changes of light should be gradual and strong shadows should be avoided, especially in the back-drop. Sunlight and moonlight should come from natural sources."

"The object and aim of make-up is to make an actor look like the character he is portraying on the stage. A smooth blending of the effects we are striving for is essential. Care must be taken with the eyes, for too much dark gives a bulging effect. Individual features may be predominated or decreased by clever use of shade and light.

"Amateurs need careful instruction in acting," declared Mr. Hemingway. "Their tendency to diffuseness and uncertainty is difficult to overcome. Each actor must be alive and interested in his fellow actors' speeches if he will maintain the audience's interest. A scene is built up or torn down by the people who are in it. Since an actor knows what is coming, he must avoid anticipating the scene and spoiling the atmosphere. The correct use of hands can be tremendously effective, but improper use destroys completely the characterization.

"The voice should be projected at such a pitch that it can always go up or down, in order to reach emotional climaxes. Careful stage setting is extremely important to the success of a play. The director should not show an actor how a part should be played, but stimulate his own interpretation of it."

Art Gallery

This year's Royal Academy show is not at all better than other years and not much worse. It will please, I am sure, that vast body of people who prefer to have their Academy continue an untroubled drift and not have an annual storm. The show is interesting if not exciting and it leaves one with a nice well-fed feeling.

The most interesting work at this show has been contributed by outsiders. Mr. Holgate's "Landscape with two nudes" is certainly the picture of the year. It is a fine, almost perfect, composition and is beautifully painted. L. A. C. Panton's strangely personal and very earthy painting would surely rank second as a "picture of the year".

There are a great many contributions by younger painters but none of them would make one proclaim a new power in Canadian art. We regret very much the omission of work by Schaeffer. Comfort and Ogilvie, whom we believe to be the most progressive of Canada's young artists.

There are lots of fine Academic portraits by our more famous practitioners and one very vital portrait by Lillias Newton. Best of all, however, are the superb black and white portraits by Louis Muhlstock and F. H. Varley. The one worth while thing in a meagre sculpture group is Cleeve Horne's portrait of Boris Hambourg.

One can not say very much about this show. It has introduced no new faces nor no new ideas. It gives one the feeling of an Old Home Week—it is nice to see the old faces again as long as one does not have to live with them. A.H.J.

Organ Recital

Hats off to Mr. Frederick C. Silvester! Not content with being just an outstanding organist of intrinsic merit, Mr. Silvester chose, for his small but appreciative audience in Convocation Hall last night, a delicious palate, glittering with spicy variety.

The grand opening of the "Concert Overture in C minor" by Alfred Hollins, contemporary composer, ushered in the programme, with its beautiful expressive melody and dynamic utterances. Yet the individual voices in both the forte and piano passages were brought out with subtle effect. This concert overture is one of the finest works of the composer who, incidentally, is blind, and has been so from birth. One of Frederick Delius' most popular works, "On hearing the first Cuckoo in Spring", though played with all due regard for the nuances, seems to lack the charm and colour that the orchestra gives it, and for which it was originally adapted. Following this, Mr. Silvester presented works by Bach, Karg-Elert, Hanff, Hollins, and the beautiful "Prelude in E minor" by Gustav Samazeuilh.

A highlight of the programme was the performance of the "Introduction, Passacaglia and Fugue in E flat minor" by Dr. Healy Willan, distinguished

I.S.S. QUESTIONNAIRE

To the Editor of The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

As long as there is human nature there will necessarily be wars. Under no condition will I serve for any war, but under certain conditions, I would serve.

The League of Nations, as far as I can see, is nothing but a farce. It hasn't the full support of the countries of the world, and besides doesn't represent the world.

When the U.S.A. is invaded, it is a distinct threat against Canada. Therefore every Canadian would be bound to protect this sacred soil. Under no circumstances would I help the United States in any war she would care to declare.

If a war were declared by Canada it would be better to serve when conscripted, although circumstances would maybe lead me to serve only when the alternative is imprisonment.

My belief is that the only way to oppose the continuation of war is by a general strike. Such a thing is hard to organize but it is the most effective. Many people do not like war and would be inclined to support this view.

Japan has thumbed her nose at the World Court, and the League of Nations, and nothing has been done to strengthen the position of these, so I feel that it is useless to endorse them as a means toward peace.

An international police force is a good object and I would endorse this as a measure to win peace for the world. This could only happen though if there were an international language and if the more powerful nations of the world were in accord.

Misunderstanding between nations is the cause of war. If this misunderstanding were lessened, then the chances of war would be lessened.

Glamorous war pictures should be abolished. They make the younger generation think that a uniform is wonderful. It is too—on parade, but when it has gone through the slime and mud of "no man's land" it loses its glamor.

(Editor's Note:—A new and particularly insidious evil is at present creeping into the life of the University, which, if left unchecked, is likely to wreak scores of havoc among the more impressionable youngsters. The best method of checking it is to drag it out of its dank corners, and flaunt this vicious debauchery from the very roof-tops. We therefore print the following scabrous fragments of verse with the hope that the rot has not penetrated to the core.)

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

U.C. Seniors took Meds last night in a very one-sided game. Meds suffered almost as humiliating a defeat as the Nurses did on Monday night for they were beaten by a 49-3 score. This was Meds' last game, and they worked hard but all to no avail. Jean Lang, Joan Kelly and Elsie Halnan showed up quite well, although they were decidedly outclassed by the stellar Senior players.

U.C. set a speedy pace and kept the ball at the Meds' end for the bulk of the game. Kay Brown, as usual, was the star on the floor and chalked up 21 of U.C.'s total score of 49. Pat Pethick ran her quite a close second in scoring and general floor work. Jennie St. Aubin on the forward line and Billy McGarry on the defence also helped their team on to victory.

On Thursday, November 29, a game is scheduled between the present St. Hilda's team and an outfit recruited from past stars who were available. In their group games the Saints have really had no adequate competition and felt that they did not want to enter the semi-finals without some stiff competition. And they will get it for the grand team will be excellent. Sally Ballard, Ruth Harrison Little, Alice Butler, Marg Rose, Marg Lambie and Fran Crooks Westman have definitely promised to play. They also hope to get hold of Bea Symons Nunns, Margot Thompson and Isabel Wright. This will be a real tussle and should draw a large crowd—at least from Trinity.

The U.C. badminton meeting yesterday was very successful and evidently there are a great number of enthusiasts, all of which is very encouraging. The faculty tournament will not be played until after Christmas, but practices are getting under way immediately in order to make the play-off really good. The first practice is scheduled for 3 p.m. on Friday at the York Club. The big feature of the day is to be a Round Robin and it is hoped that it will be possible to make it a weekly event.

U.C. is very keen to arouse enough enthusiasm to get up an intercollegiate team. Queen's are going to McGill this year and Varsity would like to go to Queen's. Of course, this is still very much in the air, but it is an interesting project to keep in mind.

SENIOR U.C. VICTORS OVER SENIOR VICTORIA

Senior U.C. defeated Senior Vic in a close and fast intercollegiate volleyball game in the upper gym yesterday afternoon by the score of 15-5, 12-15, 15-12. By virtue of their win Senior U.C. are tied with Vic for the leadership of the group.

In the first game U.C. swamped Vic but the Victoria boys came back strong in the second to win. Victoria led most of the way in the deciding encounter but were unable to stand off the final rally of U.C. The game was well played and each team had to fight for every point that they won. Chang and Himel were the standout players for the U.C. cause, while Bodrug and Vanderlick were the pick of the Vic team.

U.C.: Murphy, Himel, Chang, Laskin, Goulding, Dansky; subs, Cullner, Haig, Krieger and Lipman.
Sr. Vic: Bodrug, Devitt, Vanderlick, Kearns, Neeh, Dingman; sub, Irwin.
Referee: Lancaster.

PHARMACY DEFEAT OENTS IN LISTLESS GAME

In a very loosely contested lacrosse game yesterday Pharmacy piled up fourteen goals against two for Dents. As both teams were definitely out of the running for the Dr. W. A. Dafee trophy, it was rather a dull exhibition. Pharmacy scored three goals in each of the first and third periods and four goals in the second and fourth periods. The boys from the Dental College tallied once in each of the last two periods.

The only bright spot of the game was Armour, with his superb stick-handling, accounting for eight Pharmacy goals. Prongor and Poole also played well for Pharmacy while McCutcheon stood out for the Dents. Referee Starr meted out four penalties three against Pharmacy and the other against Dents.

Pharmacy: Ford, Jackson, Prongor, Armour, Poole, Langdon, McIntyre, Ellinghausen.

Dents: McCutcheon, Brown, McCutcheon, Lankin.
Referee: Don Starr.

U.C. SENIORS VICTORIOUS OVER MEDICAL WOMEN

Last night in O.C.E. gym the U.C. Seniors chalked up another victory, defeating Meds 49-3. Meds were forced to play a purely defensive game as U.C. pushed hard in both periods. U.C. played very smoothly and set a fast pace. Kay Brown played her usual sterling game and was high scorer once more with 21 points. Pat Pethick looked very good too and chalked up 16 points. Jean Lang, Joan Kelly and Elsie Halnan worked hard for Meds. Meds' 3 points were scored in the first half and though they did their utmost they were unable to get any more baskets.

Meds: Jean Lang, Joan Kelly (3), Bessie Stern, Marg Pirt, Maria Campbell, Elsie Halnan, Mary Albertson, Charlotte Horner, Isabel Wright.

SENIOR FIXTURE BEGINS BASKETBALL SEASON

Varsity Seniors to Meet Hamilton Club This Saturday Night

This Saturday night will see the opening of the basketball season for the Varsity senior entry when the Fiat Club of Hamilton are the visitors. Seymour Wilson, Canadian all-star football player with Hamilton Tigers, is a regular guard with the Mountain City team. The Flats boast the tallest player in Canada on their team as the centre is seven foot three inches tall and should be a hard man to stop under the basket.

The Varsity team will try out about fifteen players in an effort to pick a squad for the season. The showing of

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crochower

With indoor sports rapidly gaining the interest of Blue athletes and coaches, the football season will finally be terminated this Saturday. Jack Sinclair and Lew Hayman will send their exceptionally strong intermediate squad against a McMaster crew on Saturday and here's hoping there'll be no need for Monday-morning quarterbacking around Hart House because of the result of the contest. The game will start at 12.30 p.m. and will thus be a preliminary for the Sarnia-Regina game. Students will be admitted by season ticket plus the sum of twenty-five cents. Football fans around the campus would be foolish to pass up this double bill of sure-fire entertainment.

Yesterday's Mulock Cup semi-final sent a disappointed crew back to Guelph as Jr. Meds whitewashed O.A.C. 7-0. The Medicals came through in gallant fashion to hold their opponents in the first half and forge ahead in the second. The young Doctors had the better of the play throughout the entire game but were handicapped by very poor kicking in the first half. As a result the gains which were won by good plunging were eradicated in every exchange of kicks. However, Newton, the Meds kicker, came through in the second half and the embryo Does went ahead in handy fashion. On yesterday's performance Jr. Meds will rate as favourites when they meet Dents in the finals for the Cup. The final will probably be played at the Stadium on Friday. Incidentally, yesterday's win put a Medical team in the finals for the Mulock Cup for the first time in the last fifteen years.

On Friday night Warren Stevens' hockey squad are scheduled to help the Hamilton Tigers start the O.H.A. ball rolling. The Blue squad has agreed to play a double schedule in the O.H.A. senior series. Inasmuch as Stevens has been putting his crew through their paces for only a short time Friday night's engagement is going to be a tough one for the Blues. Last year's regular forward line is back in action. McPherson will be at centre with Hendry and McClelland on the wings. The defence will probably be Rey and Campbell with Fullerton as the probable choice for the third position. Due to the short time of practice the team is an unknown quantity and hockey fans will have to wait until Friday night to learn just how good the present squad is.

This year's senior basketball edition which is being put through their paces by Lew Hayman is no doubt going to be the strongest Blue cage group in years. Hayman has a large squad of far better-than-average players from which to choose a senior squad and if he can't juggle a champion out of the collection we'll be very much surprised. The arrival of the St. Michael's basketball team will no doubt make the fight for positions keener. This year's team will be far superior to its recent predecessors.

While on the subject of basketball we might mention the exhibition game between the Hamilton Flat Club and the senior crew which will be played at Hart House on Saturday. The game is scheduled to start at 8.30 p.m. Since this will unofficially open the basketball season at Hart House all men trying out for the various positions will be given a trial and Blue cage fans will be able to form their own opinion about Hayman's squad. Incidentally, those of you who missed the circus which visited Toronto recently will be given another chance of seeing a freak. The Hamilton cagers are going to send a seven foot three centre on to the floor and this should be worth the trouble of a visit to Hart House on Saturday night. Seymour Wilson, of Hamilton Tiger football fame, holds down one of the guard berths.

Tonight Bill Winterburn's senior and junior water polo squads play hosts to members of the Canadian Swimming Club. The fight for the group title is said to be between the Blue squad and the C.S.C. poloists and a win tonight will put the Blues in the lead by a good margin. The games are scheduled to start at 8 and 9 p.m. with the junior game coming off first.

It seems as though Frankie Genovese, the local pro boxer, is not to help coach the Blue leather swingers this winter. Genovese delayed showing up and was probably given the count of ten and out. At any rate Frank Brown, and not Genovese, will assist Dr. Les Black by letting a bunch of hopefuls throw leather at him.

The men in this game will have a great deal to do with their place on this year's team. The addition of Marks and Connolly as well as several others from St. Michael's, has made the fight for every position wide open. Mennell and Costigan are the new forwards while Levy, Newman and Gordon are trying out from last year's team. Five centres will probably see action, Vanderlick and Willis of last year's team, Meagher and Crowley of St. Mike's, and Alec Munroe of Olympic high jumping fame.

Gold, Bodrug, Caplan and Himel of last year's team will be out for guard duty. Fitton, from McMaster, and Marks and Connolly of St. Mike's are the new guards.

The game should be chuck full of interest from every angle. The visitors with their seven foot three centre will be worth seeing. It has been many years since Varsity has had a large number of players of the calibre of this year's prospects. A fight for positions will make an interesting evening. The game starts at 8.30.

At a meeting of the Tennis Club held yesterday in Hart House the following members were elected to office for the coming year: President, A. H. Crowson, IV Dents; Vice-President, A. Y. Eaton, II Trinity; Secretary, R. E. Young II S.P.S.

U.C. FRENCH CLUB PRESENT PLAY AND HOLD SING-SONG

A French comedy, Un Bureau de Telegraphie, was the main attraction at the meeting of the U.C. French Club, held in the Women's Union on Tuesday evening. The play was very well presented by an able cast under the direction of Mr. Charles Carrington and Mr. Stan Aquarone. The cast included two middle aged and rather gay old maids, Lucie, played by Connie Lailey, and Martine by Myrtle Hillier, and the Employe de le Bureau, taken by Mr. Earl Hampel.

Following this presentation, the president, Mr. Eric Medcalf, led the club in a French sing-song.

armament and also an advocate of the "security" policy. She also welcomed proposals for the abolition of private manufacture of armaments. Canada stood out at the conference as a peace-loving nation and the headlines in a Geneva newspaper, "Canada, a nation which wants peace" is a tribute to the stand taken by the Canadian delegation.

"Now the world knows how to disarm if it wants to disarm," said Dr. Riddell. "The difficulties which remain are political, not technical. If half a dozen of the great nations of the world had the will to disarm, disarmament could be accomplished in three months." The statement of Europe are desirous of powerful armies as "bargaining power" rather than for actual use in warfare. None of them really want war and Dr. Riddell believes that "international co-operation as exemplified by the League will smash disarmaments, not disarmaments the League."

ENGLISH COURSE PROVIDES MODELS

matter of essays. The study of famous authors ought in itself to be an incentive to style. A model should stimulate the student to write well. He has to be brought into the presence of a master before he can learn the art. If the student does not improve by being acquainted with specimens of great literature, the fault lies in himself. The function of the professor is to stimulate and excite the imagination and reason of the student.

"The Varsity says that few undergraduates can express themselves in the English language. I am only too sorry that such a situation exists," he concluded.

"The question as to whether Milton wrote the Areopagitica in fun or in earnest has been decided for a good many years," remarked Mr. A. E. Barker, Fellow in English at Trinity College, as he smilingly scanned the editorial. "The writer apparently does not realize that contemporary novels and plays are studied in the first year of the Pass course, and twentieth century poetry in the third year."

"It is impossible to study the great English writers in the proper way without being aware of the problems of style," he continued. "Style is something that develops. The time to begin is in the preparatory schools and not in the University. The editorial pointed to something that is important but its criticisms were not well founded."

CORRESPONDENCE

I was young when the last war was waged but I have seen some terrible sights as a result of it. I haven't tasted war itself, but I was in the Halifax explosion, which took place in December 1917. That is the closest I have come to actually being under fire, and it was too close for me. I was injured in that catastrophe, and that injury today keeps me from doing many things I would like to do.

I don't agree with the professor who said that the attitude of the students today will not be their attitude tomorrow. For myself and for others with whom I have spoken, war holds nothing. We have resolved to stay away from it as long as we possibly can and if necessary to fight in wars which we believe to be justifiable.

Very truly yours,

James B. Colborne,
St. Michael's College.

INTERNATIONAL AMITY

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:
"Why was 'fraternizing' with the enemy so strictly prohibited in the army?" This question was put to a high school class by a former teacher of mine. His answer was, in substance,—"You won't want to kill a person if you know him." If each young man or woman could spend even a few months in each of the principal cities and countries of the world before settling to the business of earning a living, and could find out for himself that among all peoples some are good and some are bad, but that the majority are just honest, decent folk like himself, how little he would want to blow up Harry, or August, or Gustaf!—especially with nothing more to be gained than a few hundred war-millions for his country. Machines are decreasing the need for actual physical labour—why should we not enjoy our leisure profitably? It is possible under a socialist regime!

E. G. Rosengren.

45th ANNUAL SCHOOL DINNER

beyond our wildest dreams. What then are we to do?" asked the guest of the evening.

Mr. Massey referred to the statement made by Lord Lytton to a high Japanese official to the effect that the one lesson learned by the world through the bitter experience of the war was that all nations must be collectively responsible for the maintenance of peace. He then made a vigorous plea for the support of the League of Nations.

The engineers in particular, Mr. Massey believes, will be able to do a great deal towards solving the problems of Canada and the world. "The engineering profession is international in its scope. Engineers are citizens of the world," he declared.

Other features of the evening were the speeches of President Cody, who replied to the toast to the University, and Dean Mitchell, who made the reply to the toast to the faculty. Vice-Chancellor Hetherington of Liverpool University conveyed the greetings of British engineers to their Canadian fellows.

HON. H. H. STEVENS

TO BE AT DEBATE

Mr. S. F. Rae of University College, will uphold the motion, and Mr. J. S. Woods of Trinity will oppose it. The "Sweet Shop" practices and unfair competition of Big Business interests will probably form the basic materials from which the affirmative will draw their main arguments, particularly those brought forward to public notice by the recent probes in which the Hon. H. H. Stevens has been interested. On the other hand the line that the negative will take should be that these probes have investigated only a small fraction of the total Big Business interests in the country and that there are many other institutions such as the chartered banks, the big insurance companies and so on that are vital to the capitalist state of today, and that are really doing considerable good, more than balancing the ills of the minor chain store systems and tobacco com-type of design is still used in modern houses. The Graphic Arts Building in Toronto is copied from Palladia's work.

Houses had a wide cornice which kept out the sun. They were decorated by arches, columnading, pediments and classical motifs similar to that used in Roman work.

In Spain the classical character of the ornament was overdone, ornate and Moorish.

In France the influence of the Renaissance was slower in making itself felt. For a long time there was a mixture of Gothic mediaeval architecture and the return to classicism.

The Petit Trianon erected in this period by King Louis XVI for Marie Antoinette, is one of the best things ever built. It is completely symmetrical and balanced. The detail is splendid.

In England Inigo Jones and Sir Christopher Wren carried out the French and Italian ideas. Inigo Jones studied under Palladia, while Sir Christopher Wren was influenced by the French. In that country early Renaissance work is very solid compared with later. The principle of working from a heavy foundation to a light top developed. In this way a feeling of security was obtained.

organist composer and lecturer in the Faculty of Music. It is a remarkable work, full of expressive melody and lacking the cut and dried contrapuntal devices which one frequently must tolerate.

The "Fanfare" by Percy Whitlock, a work of immense vigour and rhythm, brought the programme to a close.

Massey Hall

"The B minor mass is of no ceremonial use to any church. It is just the finest architectural expression of Bach's genius; and all its moods are human from the first Kyrie to the Dona Nobis which clearly expresses the idea that peace can only be won by those who are prepared to insist upon it. There is no passive pacifism in the music of Bach." Thus writes R. Boughton of the Monumental Mass in B minor.

It seems to be fairly certain that Bach composed and assembled the Mass not primarily as the result of an "urgent emotional impulse" such as inspired the St. Matthew Passion, but as an example of his craftsmanship. He wished to attract the attention of King Augustus who was of the Roman faith. "The frailty of the mass lies in its architectonic proportions and in the consummate skill with which Bach marshalled every musical detail. The religious and sincere background of Bach's life is responsible for the deep emotional values in a work created to develop his mastery to its highest technical point. Whatever of vital force the Mass possesses derives from a depth beyond personal understanding."

The theory which Mr. Boughton propounds will not be accepted without question by every person. Some will prefer to believe that once at work, Bach became so absorbed in the creation of a religious masterpiece that he spirit led him to pinnacles of inspiration. This may be true if Bach hid his own personal interpretation of the Mass. Ordinarily he was only inspired when the truth in the libretto was apparent to him, and we must remember that much of the B minor Mass was a revision of other compositions already written.

To produce the B minor Mass moderately well would be an achievement. Dr. Fricker has twice conducted brilliant performances of this work. So far as the Chorus is concerned the quality of the artistry was high. Some of the soloists were decidedly more satisfying than others. The orchestra was not all that could be desired. Still these are but minor flaws and we justly appreciate the fine work of the Mendelssohn organization. Dr. Fricker deserves more commendation than he sometimes receives: to him be all the glory.

Taking his cue from the Romantic Drama as exemplified in the work of Victor Hugo, Ashley Dukes propounds the breath taking theory in "The Man with a Load of Mischief" that beneath the heart of the lucky there lurks the soul of a nobleman, whereas beneath the soul of the nobility there is oftentimes a shoddy interior. This rather overworked theme can nevertheless be made most absorbing by a skilful dramatist, and it is not the wish of this department to belittle Mr. Dukes' shrewdness in the matters of which he has chosen to investigate. Yet his play lacks an intrinsic warmth which one is pleased to associate with the Romantic Drama.

selves felt in England, this piece presents a group of six rather unsympathetic characters who talk a little too incessantly on their inconsequential and trivial "affairs de coeur". True, the discursive dialogue is occasionally enlivened by the acid philosophy of the man Charles, played by J. K. Thomas, whose sentiments reflect the prevailing unrest of the day. Confronted with lines which tend to impede a facile delivery, Mr. Thomas barely gives a rote-like exposition. Archibald Swan was convincingly shallow as the "reGENCY rake" whose he depicted. George Patton's "Landlord", reminiscent of Shakespeare's Porter in Macbeth, with his wife, played by Peggy Tyler, provided the only honest humour in the play.

Although a clever actress, Kathleen Caprell marred her performance by mincing movements on the stage. It should be noted, however, that her fineness of gesture was an admirable complement to the finished grace of Mr. Swan. In this connection Rupert Harvey should be lauded for his extremely intelligent direction throughout. Jean Renaud charmingly played the maid, Louise, although definitely lacking in the bawdiness which one in her position, in such a locale, would most probably assume.

STUDENTS BURN EFFIGY OF UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT

Special to the Varsity
New York—After engaging in fist-cuffs with police, more than 500 striking City College students today burned the figure of President Frederick B. Robinson in effigy at the base of the campus flagpole.

The cardboard effigy represented Dr. Robinson, who is ill in Mount Sinai Hospital, with a second head—that of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy.

The strike broke out after smouldering resentment among certain campus liberal and radical groups in connection with the expulsion a month ago of 21 undergraduates for staging an anti-Fascist demonstration during a visit of Italian students.

SPEAKMAN ADDRESSES TRINITY SCIENTISTS

The attitude of the western world to science, judged from present day thought, is changing in cycles. Today our attitude is not far from that of a hundred years ago. Only thirty years ago the conception of the universe as a scientific entity was unchallenged; but today even our most prominent scientists such as Jeans and Eddington are questioning man's place in the realm of exact scientific reasoning.

Such were some of the highly entertaining pieces of information presented to the Trinity Science Club by Dr. H. B. Speakman of the Ontario Research Foundation Tuesday night. Dr. Speakman gave an opportunity for much discussion on his topic "The Implications of Scientific Research."

Professor Ashley suggested the possible validity of a universe other than scientific, for instance, a universe based on beauty and art in which a thing may be artistically correct but not scientifically true. The meeting ended with the consideration of the possible uniting of the scientist, artist and philosopher, to such a common ideal.

Christmas Literary Issue

The annual Christmas literary issue of The Varsity will be published Friday, December 14. All manuscripts and art work for competition must be submitted by December 11. Prizes for the best work in the various departments will be announced later.

The literary issue last year was cancelled due to lack of sufficient material of a high enough standard. Students are asked to make an effort to get their short stories, articles, or drawings in soon, in order that the work of the judges may be facilitated. Further details will be furnished in a later issue.

NURSES MAKE SICK CALLS

"The public health courses in Spain are quite satisfactory," agreed Misses San Juan and Gutierrez, who are enrolled in the Public Health Nursing Course here. "We have come to Canada merely to obtain the viewpoints of others on this vital question." They have already spent a year studying in New York, New Haven, and have had a two months' mental course at Providence, R.I.

They received their first training at the Provincial Institute at Caceres, the public health centre in Spain, which presupposes some medical knowledge. The Spanish course, however, lasts only three months as compared with our ten months' course.

Spain has primary and secondary centres which are quite distinct. The primary centres resemble our rural hospitals in some respects. An important difference, though, is that their nurses make sick calls when the doctors are away. There is always one nurse stationed at a secondary centre, and the nurses rotate from one centre to another at fifteen-day intervals. During the Revolution these nurses acted as "social companions" to be-reaved families.

Miss P. Mavridou explained that in Greece there are two types of training for public nursing—the Red Cross (Continued on Page 4)

BALLET DANCERS

"Earl Carroll's Vanities will look like amateur night at the Roxy compared to the U.C. Follies," said Saul Rae, director in charge, when interviewed on Wednesday concerning the coming attraction. "It will be gigantic, stupendous, colossal and cataclysmic," he added, explaining that even this description was a modest one, and limited by want of expression rather than by want of sincerity. He particularly emphasized the fact that this year the Follies would be a finished musical show, a polished production, that would far outrank the feeble attempts of earlier years.

The show will open with the first genuine female chorus in the history of the Follies, a ballet of bouncing babies, a bevy of the most beautiful pantries in U.C., who will contribute three numbers, with extravagant costumes, lighting and stage effects. The talent is absolutely the cream of U.C., with outstanding numbers by Hart Buck and Bud Barry, a dance by the Minsky twins, Jackie Rae singing and conducting (Continued on Page 4)

First Term Fees Must Be Paid

The attention of all students is drawn to the following general University regulation:

"Students must have paid the fees due in the first term before proceeding with the work of the second term."

It is the intention of the University authorities to enforce this regulation in all faculties. Students should, therefore, make the necessary arrangements for the payment of all fees for the first term before the opening of the second term on January 3rd, 1935, in order that they may be eligible to continue their registration for the second term.

WATER POLO TEAM AGAIN TRIUMPHS

Games

MCCATTY BROTHERS STAR

The Varsity water polo teams won two games from their arch rivals, the Canadian Swimming Club last evening in the Hart House pool. The Juniors started off the eventful evening when they came out on the long end of a 6-2 score. The seniors then took the pond and proceeded to submerge the opposition by a 5-4 count. Both games were productive of the close, hard-checking type of polo.

The juniors were all over their rivals with the result that the game was slowed up quite noticeably, and the Canadians lost many opportunities to get close. "Red" Worsley was very fast and easily outswam Hooper. Red cut the water at a merry clip and scored both goals. Varsity led at half time by 4-1, on goals by Schipper, Walker and Hooper, the latter pushing the twine twice. Beatty opened the scoring in the final half, when his long shot slipped by the goalie. The Canadians put on a vigorous offensive which was finally rewarded when Worsley got his second goal of the evening. The Blue team hit right back and Hooper looped one past Fitchman for the final tally. Burrows played a (Continued on Page 3)

CLASSICAL ASSOCIATION

The Classical Association met last night at the home of Miss Needler, the honorary president.

The subject of the two papers read at the meeting was "The Exemplars of the Classical Tradition." Miss Richie read the first paper and the president, Bob Sinclair, gave the second paper. Mr. Sinclair pointed out that many of the classical scholars were infant prodigies, who, unlike most of their kind did not fade out at an early age. After the papers everyone took part in a general discussion of them.

The members all took part in an amusing charade in four parts at the close of the meeting.

"The fundamental task of the church is to proclaim the evils of our society," stated Professor Walter T. Brown, Principal of Victoria College, in an address at Hart House yesterday on "The application of Christian principles to the present economic order."

He began by saying that there were many things we as Christians would not want to advocate, but we would not want to advocate them as part of a Christian creed. For that reason we have both capitalists and socialists in the church, sharing together some part of the Christian life. But they must face the facts, the evils of our society.

"Let me make a short statement of some of the evils as found by the commission. This body found a number of evils to be put in three classes. The first class are those evils affecting the social welfare of our civilization, that is, the question of unemployment, one of the greatest questions of our present day. Absence of work is resulting in a degradation of people. Nor is this question one that is peculiar to the present time.

Varsity men go far in the world.

Unique among the experiences of graduates of the class of '34 is that of an ex-member of The Varsity staff, one Charlie Woodley, who mysteriously dropped from sight immediately after the final examinations last May. His whereabouts remained something of a mystery to those who knew him until yesterday.

A member of the Masthead of The Varsity found a letter awaiting him in the office last night covered with some seventy Bulgarian stamps. On being opened it was ascertained that the wandering Varsity correspondent was somewhere on the Black Sea. The seventy stamps (which covered both sides of the envelope) were explained by the fact that the envelopes having travelled all the way from Toronto were rather unframed. Hence by buying eight and three-quarter cents worth of postage stamps, the resourceful correspondent succeeded in covering up the dirt and giving the post office

"Fine art is concerned with the representation of something as distinct from the utilitarian or decorative arts such as architecture. It is not an added decoration, although it may be one," said Professor Alford at the opening of the first of a series of four informal talks on fine art, in the Sketch Room last night. These talks will be conducted in an extremely informal manner and are designed to provoke comment and discussion. This, the first of the series, was on "What is the artist's point of view?" and was an endeavour to look at works of art from a creative point of view rather than from that of the general public. Medium is important to an artist because of the limitations it imposes on (Continued on Page 2)

GIFT OF J. W. GEDDES

Three winners of the interfaculty track meet held last month will be the recipients of handsome prizes, it was learned yesterday. The donor is Mr. J. W. Geddes, at present an art dealer on Spadina Ave. Mr. Geddes officiated for 40 years as a judge in Varsity interfaculty meets and for twenty years donated a gold medal as a prize for various sports events on the campus. The winners of the interfaculty meet so honoured this year will receive prizes of mahogany tea trays, decorated with the names of their faculties and the faculty colours. The first of these goes to Mr. Munroe of the Ontario College of Education, who won three events in the meet; the others will go to Mr. Cooper of Victoria, Mr. Caldwell of S.P.S., each of whom won two events.

The annual finance campaign of the Student Christian Movement among the women students of the University is being conducted during the week of November 19th. The Movement is self-supporting, and depends for its maintenance on contributions from students and interested senior friends.

These days one approaches the subject of money with a great deal more thought than was the case five or six years ago. To many students, expenditures which used to be taken for granted now come in for careful scanning and consideration. Perhaps it is (Continued on Page 3)

THE VALUE OF THE LEAGUE

The political atmosphere seems to be heavily charged these days with gloomy predictions as to the future of the European concert; and of all the potentially serious factors, that of the Saar Valley is perhaps the most ominous.

In view of the general pessimism it is reassuring to hear the considered opinion of an outstanding Canadian diplomat, Dr. W. A. Riddell. Dr. Riddell, since 1920, has been at the centre of affairs in Geneva, first, as representative of the Canadian government, and now as Permanent Advisory Officer to the Canadian delegation. Dr. Riddell, in a recent address, stated his belief that the nations that are piling up armaments are doing so for the purposes of bargaining, and that within three months, if there were any will to disarm among the nations, a satisfactory convention could be achieved.

Dr. Riddell is a man who, by virtue of his sane, practical cast of mind and his extensive acquaintance with the various League officials, must be regarded as an authority on such matters.

Even more reassuring, however, is the fact that the League of Nations is more active than it has ever been in the past. A report of the fifteenth ordinary session of the League Assembly, including the work of the League committees, shows an extraordinary range of interest in matters of international import. And to the layman who scoffs at the value of the League's works, such a report ought to be a revelation.

Legal, political, and administrative questions are, of course, to the fore. At the opening of the Assembly, M. Benes, the President in Office of the Council, referred to the following encouraging factors: the fact that the United States of America had undoubtedly drawn nearer to the Geneva organizations; the efforts to bring the Soviet Union into the League, the settlement of the Leticia dispute, and the signature of a number of pacts of friendship, of special co-operation and non-aggression.

The work of the various technical organizations, and the various committees on social and humanitarian questions, is equally encouraging. The League, for example, shows its practical concern in the opium traffic by dealing with such problems as the use of forged import certificates and the spread of drug addiction.

We can do no better, in conclusion, than quote M. Benes, "There are doubtless many destructive forces now at work in the public life of the world," he says, "and they are acting with extraordinary violence and energy. They are, however, being opposed and neutralized by positive and beneficent forces and tendencies which are no less energetic and effective. The first and most important of these vital forces is the League of Nations itself, the efforts it is making, and the ties it has established between nations—ties which cannot be destroyed outright. The League remains an indestructible force and an insurmountable barrier to the powers of darkness."

IMPORTANCE OF MEDIUM DISCUSSED BY ALFORD

him. Tools are important, too, since some things can be done better with one tool than with another. The tool also influences what can be seen, for if we use line we tend to see line rather than tone and if we use a brush which makes a splotch, differences in light and dark are made, that is, differences in tone. To illustrate the influence of the tool, Professor Alford showed two paleolithic examples, one done by an engraving tool and showing the line type of work, the other showing the use of tone.

Taking next a slide made from one of Rembrandt's most famous engravings, he pointed out how the effect of tone was produced by the use of innumerable lines. He showed, too, how these had been a process of selection to emphasize the dramatic starkness of the central group of trees. He deplored the tendency to photographic exactitude in detail which tended to confuse and noted with satisfaction that there was a tendency away from it to the impressionistic school. The retinal reproduction point of view began with Raphael and Leonardo and reached its culmination in the last century. He illustrated the two schools by two works of Constable, one of which was done in the impressionistic manner and the other in a more detailed manner.

"BONG!" . . . .
"You shouldn't strike so loudly at one o'clock in the morning," exclaimed the Head Gargoyle on the Bank of Commerce building. "There are people sleeping in Toronto."

The Clock on the City Hall tower gazed sleepily up at his lofty neighbour. "Walt Winchell said that Toronto has one night club and no chorus girls," exclaimed the Clock sarcastically. "He should have said 'one skyscraper and no takers!'"

"You tell Winchell we've got more offices rented than they have in the Empire State building."

"The way I feel," whispered the Clock, "I couldn't speak loud enough for the Star to quote me."

"Ha! The City Council must have had another meeting."

"They're always meeting, and after every meeting I feel like my roof would blow off. The other day Alderman Beamish got boasting that he had once called Controller McBride a liar, and gotten away with it. So McBride jumped up and yelled 'You did not or I'd have slapped you in the mouth!'"

"I told you you were lying," the Alderman taunted gleefully.

"You wouldn't have called me a liar and gotten away with it," cried McBride, getting red in the face, said the Clock.

"And then what happened?" asked the Gargoyle in mock amazement.

"And then," continued the Clock, "Mr. Beamish started to dance around the room, and yelled, 'I'll say you're a liar, now!'"

"Did Sam take a poke at him?" asked the Gargoyle hopefully.

"No—he just roared something about Beamish being lucky he was so far away,—right across the room."

"Was that all?"

"Yes, thank goodness," sighed the Clock.

"Why,—I didn't think you were up high enough to see that far," exclaimed the Gargoyle.

"See how far?"

"As far as the Kindergarten room in the Vocational School on Jarvis St."

"I told you this all occurred in the City Council meeting," roared the Clock; then he saw that the Gargoyle was laughing. "Oh,—you're trying to be funny, eh? Say, let me tell you . . ."

But the Gargoyle had closed his eyes and was asleep. The City Hall Clock muttered under his breath. "What a night lifer he turned out to be!" Then he subsided into the silence of his lonely vigil.

A moment later he, too, began to nod, and caught himself just in time.

His hands were edging around the dial towards 1.14 a.m. and in a minute he'd have to chime the quarter hour.

U.C. SOPH-JUNIORS HAVE MERRY EVENING

Hart Buck and Martin Loeb Were Among the Performers

A floor show that according to Saul Rae, director, was not a preview of the U.C. Follies, but was characterized by the same type of humour and excellence, formed a precedent, for this form of entertainment, at a dance in the Women's Union, at the University College Soph-Junior dance last evening.

The Mirsky twins convulsed the audience with their impersonation of a couple of girls from Buffalo, as they tap danced to the close harmony of a male trio.

Hart Buck and Martin Loeb convinced the audience that they have got to learn the "Hot Cha Cha," with refrain from the audience.

Two orchestras were required to accommodate the dancers. The party was run under the direction of the patrons, Miss M. Ferguson, Dean of Women of University College, and Professor and Mrs. Cochrane, and the year presidents, Don Stewart, Freddie Chapman, Marjorie Carter and Les Rowntree.

ANOTHER BOOST FOR THE BAND

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:
It was with gratification that I read your editorial entitled "Champions" in Monday's issue of The Varsity.

This season I feel that the Blue and White band has made progress over previous years and that they should know the general student opinion as to their work. They do not need any gushing plavacy; just a word of appreciation, encouragement or constructive criticism for their efforts will do. The men themselves wonder if they are pleasing the public and are glad to aid any campus activities that they can.

This is my graduating year. Since I was a freshman I have been a bandsman. In my second and third years I was an officer of the band and as a "hope to be" graduate I wish to see the Blue and White band achieve great heights.

The present status of this organization is due largely to four well known men. Dr. Cody has always given his support and has been an inspiration to the men themselves. Lieut-Colonel Cockburn, O.C. of the C.O.T.C., who has provided the majority of the instruments and engaged our instructor, Mr. E. A. Macdonald of the Men's S.A.C., who has had the difficult part of finding finances to equip the men with uniforms and pay for travelling expenses. That man besides being a Scotsman, is a genius. Last but not least, our instructor "Capt. John". He is the only man I know or have read about who can drill and get into shape new men in so short a period.

Each year about the middle of February the band plays a concert in Convocation Hall. The men are now rehearsing for the next one. If you, the readers of The Varsity, think that your Blue and White band have aided the spirit of this University in any way, I ask you to attend this performance. Even if I appear egotistical I state that the past concerts have been of the first order in quality and the one next semester will be the same.

Thanking you, I remain,

Past Pres. B.W.B.

FRENCH PLAY PRODUCED

The second meeting of the French Society of University College was held at the Women's Union last night. In opening the meeting, Eric Medcalf, the president, again pointed out for the benefit of those who were not present at the last meeting, that the purpose of the society is to give the members an opportunity of hearing, appreciating and speaking the French language.

A short one-act play "Un Bureau de Telegraphie", was then presented by Myrtle Hillyer, Connie Lailey, and Earle Hampel, under the direction of Charlie Carrington and Stan Aquarone and called forth loud applause from the entire audience. The meeting then joined in several French songs and games, which were also very well received. After refreshments and dancing, which provided a delightful medium for conversation, the meeting was adjourned.

STUDENTS FROM MCGILL WILL PRESENT PLAY

A group of students from the Department of Germanics at McGill University will journey here from Montreal next weekend to present a German play in Hart House Theatre on Monday evening. The production is the comedy "Die Deutschen Kleinstädter", by Kotzchue, and has a cast of over twenty players.

The play will be presented under the auspices of the German Club of this University. It was the policy of the club, until two years ago, to produce an annual play in German themselves, but due to a lack of talent no play at all was staged last year. This season the Montreal group, who have had previous success with the same piece, were invited to bring their production here, and it is hoped that the local club will be able to return the visit in 1935.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

Last night quite a novel basketball game was played at the O.C.E. gym when the Y team clashed with a sextet recruited at the eleventh hour from O.C.E. Lack of practice didn't affect the embryo-teachers at all, and they came off on the top end of a 43-30 tally. Varsity, Queen's and Western graduates all took positions on the winning team. They had never played together as a team before, but made a showing which would have been very creditable to a well trained group.

Bea Longley, stellar forward on last year's championship Varsity squad, was up to her old form and chalked up 28 of O.C.E.'s total points. Al Butler is as able a defense player as ever and was largely responsible for keeping the Y.W. forwards from running wild to secure a win. Pat Palmer, who played on the championship Vic team in '33, was a third Toronto University grad on the O.C.E. lineup. The losers put up a good fight but lacked the material necessary to defeat such players as they encountered. They were astounded to learn, after the game, that the O.C.E. squad had never before had a practice.

O.C.E. is keen to play on. It is too bad such enthusiasm did not inspire them earlier in the season for they would have been a valuable addition to the interfaculty games and might easily have caused quite a startling upset. Perhaps they can entice St. Hilda's to meet them; they would definitely provide that competition the Blue and Grey team are craving before they enter the playoffs.

Tonight the Medley team meet the St. Mike's nine at 6 p.m. at the Vic gym. Doubtless the Saints will take this game and will be all primed to meet Vic tomorrow. This Friday game will be the final event in the regular series and will not decide anything very vital as it is quite evident that these two teams will be the contenders in the playoffs. These finals consist of the best two out of three games and each game will be a tussle.

U.C. Jrs. play the Nurses in basketball at 6 o'clock this evening. It is the Nurses' final appearance, so how about giving them some real support? On Friday the Senior outfits from Vic and U.C. clash at 6 p.m. and this will be a real battle well worth watching.

MCGILL DEAN APPOINTED

Special to The Varsity

Montreal—Dr. W. D. Woodhead has been appointed dean of the faculty of arts and science, McGill University, it was announced yesterday. He succeeds Dean Ira A. McKay, who died during the summer.

Dr. Woodhead came to McGill in 1923 from University College, Toronto, to become chairman of the department of classics. He is a graduate of Oxford University, a master of arts of University of Alberta, and a doctor of philosophy of University of Chicago.

If people will stop at the first tense of the verb "aimer", they must not be surprised if one finishes the conjugation with somebody else.—McGill Daily.

Finland claims to have the cheapest railroad in Europe. Proof of this is said to be that a 1,000 mile journey on the Finnish State Railroads costs $3.75 second class and only $5.75 third class.

MAXIE FULLERTON

Stellar defence man, who will see plenty of action when the hockey team journey to Hamilton on Friday night.

ELECTRICAL PROBLEMS SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION

Mr. J. F. Nield Will Address Toronto Electrical Engineers

"Some Electrical Problems of the Toronto Transportation Commission" is the subject arranged for the next meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Toronto section. The speaker, Mr. J. F. Nield, has been the electrical engineer for the Commission since 1921. Previous to that time he had been engaged in street railway work both in Europe and with the Toronto Street Railway. The meeting will be held at 8.15 p.m. Friday, Nov. 23 in Room 23 of the Electrical Building.

The main portion of Mr. Nield's address will deal with the influence of street congestion, weather, crowding, etc., on peak loads and power supply for local street railway transportation. He will also consider the electric heating of street cars and similar problems, including new developments which may be expected to produce a radically improved public transportation vehicle.

S.C.M. CORNER

not altogether a deplorable thing that we are being forced today to look at this thing called money squarely, and to revalue it. For the true value of transient: the matter of a few minutes' or a few hours' satisfaction. We are money is in terms of what it will yield in exchange. Many of the things for which we are willing to pay money are constantly weighing possible satisfactions, and choosing between them. A fifty-cent movie—or a new book? Five dollars more for a coat—or a new pair of shoes?

It is easy to form the habit of giving casually to many things in which we are not really interested, just to save our faces, or to soothe our consciences. Today when we are asked to give our support to a cause or a movement, we are more apt to consider what value we place on that cause, and to give little or much accordingly. And rightly so. Many students feel that the financial campaign of the S.C.M. gives an opportunity to return something for the value which they have received from it, and in order that it may continue to be of value to other students.

The S.C.M. divides its budget into three sections; for local expenses, the maintenance of its programme on the local campus; for the S.C.M. of Canada, the maintenance of national work in the universities throughout Canada; and for the World's Student Christian Federation, which is the co-ordinating centre for movements throughout the world, and through membership in which we become in a real sense members of a world community of students.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Ken Burn

While the rugby season will officially end on Saturday we have a premonition that they still will be discussing it in Hamilton until the pigskins start to fly next fall. Sarnia will meet Regina here on Saturday for the non-residential championship of the U.S.A. A few of the Sarnia team, notably Patterson, Brown and Kennedy, will be familiar to the intercollegiate fans as they received their early training with Western.

As a curtain raiser to the Dominion finals, Varsity Seconds will meet McMaster in the intermediate intercollegiate final. While the game starts at 12.30 it is expected that a fair number of rooters will be on hand as high hopes are being entertained for Varsity to down the Baptists.

Victoria soccer team earned the right to meet S.P.S. in the finals by virtue of a two goal win over U.C. last night. Despite the efforts of Jimmy McPherson, who led the U.C. attack, Vic were able to hold their lead after being presented with a gift goal in the early stages of the game.

Last night the water polo team reaffirmed the opinion that they will prove stout opposition to McGill, when they won out in a close battle with Canadian Swimming Club. The juniors, not to be outdone, also turned in an impressive victory.

The hockey team wound up their pre-season training last night by holding a practise scrimmage with Cities Service. While the coaches were merely juggling their squads to judge the relative strength of the players, Varsity spasmodically played brilliant hockey that should give Hamilton something to worry about on Friday night. The front line of Seagram, McConvey and McClelland, with Fullerton coming to their aid from the defence, scored two well earned goals in three minutes.

At least on some corners of the campus the Dominion final has faded to insignificance, as Friday has been definitely set as the day for the Mulock Cup finals. The place—the Stadium; the time—2.30, and we'll predict the result on Saturday morning.

KNOX TAKES WIN WYCLIFFE HUMBLED

Mediocre Volleyball Games Show Superiority of Knox

JAMIESON LOOKS GOOD

Knox outplayed Wycliffe 15-4, 15-13 in a volleyball contest in Hart House upper gym yesterday afternoon. Neither side played scientifically, and Wycliffe were beaten more by their own hesitations in going after the ball than by Knox's superior ability.

The first game was a rather mediocre exhibition with little combination or spiking, degenerating at times into an "anti-over" contest with a lot of one-handed stabbing. The one bright spot was some tricky serving by Jamieson of Knox. Timid playing by Wycliffe allowed the Presbyterians to run up the score.

The second game was well contested, the issue being in doubt until the very end. The play dragged at first, until Knox put on the pressure and ran up a lead of several points. Wycliffe's cause was apparently lost, but they staged a rally and came up even with their opponents, taking six points in a row with Emmet serving. The play went from side to side, until Knox put on a final spurt to win the game.

Jamieson and Sinclair played well for Knox. Newton-Smith and Ruch were best for the losers.

Knox: Jamieson, Sinclair, Mackay, Campbell, Weir, Taylor. Wycliffe: Fairweather, Newton-Smith, Simmons, Emmet, Ruch, Morissey, Patterson, Reglar.

Referee: Vanderleek.

WATER POLO PLAYERS AGAIN TAKE TRIUMPH

smart game throughout and although his efforts were unrewarded from a scoring standpoint, he was responsible for many goals which were not tallied by the opposition.

The senior game was much closer and produced better water polo. The Canadians got away to a flying start when they scored two goals, Vic Lansie and Rosen being responsible for the tallies. The Varsity forwards got really organized then and in quick succession Wins McCarty passed two nice ones to his brother Cren, who made no mistake with them. Before the period ended Wins himself grabbed off a goal by some very fast swimming. He had his check dizzy trying to even keep near him.

Shortly after the last session started Bancroft took Davey's rebound off the goal post and lodged the globe in the corner.

The senior edition of the Canadians came back strongly to tie the score, with T. Lansie and Rosen being the marksmen. Play became very fast as both teams strove desperately to score the winning counter. Cren, McCarty heaved a nice pass to Davey, who made the final and winning tally of the hard-fought contest. The "fairly" was long overdue to score as his shooting usually ended up somewhere far remote from the net. The Whole Varsity team played good polo all the way. The Canadians had no one who could cope with the speedy McCarty brothers. The defence pair of Culiner and Devitt gave fine protection to Murphy, who had a fairly quiet evening. Bancroft and Davey also played good polo and proved particularly adept at breaking up plays before they really got started.

LIGHTING IMPORTANT WHEN DECORATING

Primitive man showed his appreciation by worshipping sun and moon as gods. This may be considered the first step. The production of small oil lamps made out of stone marks the second step. The Greeks and Romans and early Chinese used these as a form of lighting. The third step was the introduction of candles and elaborate forms of candelabra. At the early part of the 19th century gas became widely used and then in 1879 the incandescent lamp was invented and until the present time we have been outgrowing the candle era.

Lighting should be regarded from two angles, the utilitarian and the decorative and these overlap to a great extent. Modern science shows the relation between artificial light and health. There are two factors which need to be considered—wattage and colour. Another factor which is closely connected is absence of glare. This question brings in that of shading. No light should be left without a shade deep enough to avoid seeing the naked bulb. Many modern lamps are designed especially to take care of this factor. The second angle under consideration is the one of decorativeness. Good light is desirable but there is also beauty in shadows to give illusion of romance and charm. A medium must be struck between utility lighting system and decoration.

GREAT TASK OF CHURCH TO DEFINE MODERN EVILS

"There is secondly the fear of insecurity, poor housing, great differences of wealth and poverty. This flaunting of wealth creates a feeling of unrest which is likely to work to the detriment of our social welfare."

"We are living in a world in which there is a great amount of practical materialism. The third type of evil is the greed and selfishness of business. Is it possible to carry on business without letting in greed and selfishness?"

"In the face of these evils," he asked, "what is the task of the church? In this I think there is a great resemblance of the church and the university. The one method to which both are restricted all through the ages is that of persuasion. We can never cure the social order by any use of force. We can only by the intelligence of our arguments arouse men to the evils of the world. The task is to awaken the conscience and it is being done by two types of people. One is a profoundly Christian person and the other a follower rather of St. John the Baptist. The latter uses denunciation, whereas the Christian gospel demands that you see the evils in the love of God and change the man who is doing wrong to do right."

VICTORIA WINNERS ON SLIPPERY FIELD

The game, played on a rather slippery field, was keenly contested. Victoria scored both their goals in the first half when they dominated the play with brilliant rushes and superb kicking by Pratt and Scott.

The first goal was of the sloppy variety. Rod Jack, U.C. fullback, in attempting to clear the ball, knocked it into his own goal, giving Bryden no chance to save. This put the teams on an even footing and Victoria worked hard for the winning counter. It came near the end of the half when the two teams were scrambling for possession. Taylor, Vic wingman, got a clear shot and made no mistake.

MacPherson, flashy U.C. centre-man, star of many a soccer and hockey game, led all the dangerous rushes, only to have Dyke, Vic's lanky goal guardian, use his speed and height to advantage and block everything that came his way.

During the last half most of the play centred in Victoria territory, with U.C. playing every man up in an effort to tie the score. Victoria, playing a strictly defensive game, held on tenaciously and when the final whistle blew were nursing a one goal lead and the right to meet S.P.S. in the finals.

For U.C. MacPherson, Jack and MacKay were standouts. The former was the spearhead of every attack while Jack's kicking saved his team on many occasions.

Dyke, in goal for Vic, played a very steady game, and was well supported in front by Pratt, Simpson and Woods-worth, although the whole team turned in a smart performance.

Victoria: Dyke, Scott, Pratt, Woods-worth, Simpson, Cooper, Taylor, Grills, Rutherford, Rawlinson, Cochrane; subs, Poppleton, Campbell.

U.C.: Bryden, Jack, MacKay, Toy, Self, Johnston, Goulding, Daly, MacPherson, Rae, Errington, L. Mackay, MacIntyre.

Referee: Dave Rowland.

INCONSEQUENCE

GENESIS OR EVOLUTION?

There are still many people who look askance on evolution. They, perhaps through no fault of their own, have not learned to think for themselves and to interpret the phenomena going on around them. "One is not surprised to find this attitude in the unenlightened general public," to borrow the words of One of the Unintelligent, "but it is most depressing to find students after several years at college" writing letters, such as that by the same Unintelligent One, "without any original thinking on their part."

Anyone who denies evolution denies life. Things alive do not stand still; they either progress or regress. History tells us that the human race is progressing. Any biologist can point out to us various stages in physical and mental evolution which exist all around us, and what sane thinker will question the fact that the Neos of the most recent Hart House debate have evolved farther mentally, morally, and spiritually than the Ayes. What would you call the rising tide of people who are not so mediaeval minded as to think it is smart to drink alcohol in one form or another, if not another manifestation of evolution.

Many people say: "Evolution is an interesting theory, but—", showing their complete ignorance of the subject. Anyone who has read Darwin (and who was there more deeply religious than he), studied anthropology, embryology, and history, will know that evolution in the complete sense (i.e., the ascension of all life from unicellular forms), is a fact established as far as it can ever be.

Wilfred Smith, U.C. I, wrote a very fine letter on the subject but I beg to disagree with him on one point. Spiritually he is very right, but he overlooked the fact that science is another term for knowledge. It is correct that true science and true religions cannot conflict but the reason that they are so absolutely interdependent as to be almost the same thing. The true scientist is in a position to understand God far better than the average man. Sir James Jeans in his "The Mysterious Universe" takes us much closer to God, showing us in part our relation to Him, and awakens us to the fallacy of Van Loon's pure materialism.

Evolution in the individual life is another proof of evolution of life in general. Who would have any interest in life if there were nothing a little farther on for which to strive.

Could we love and worship a god who set us here like robots, no past, no development, no future. Fear, yes, but love and worship, no. The God I love and worship is the Father of a growing child, mankind. We are slowly evolving to His state, and He aids us when we seek His help, and gives us aspirations.

Genesis gives us a very beautiful picture of evolution as its writer and those of his day understood it. In my opinion it does in no way conflict with modern knowledge. The Bible, being the Book of God, has a far greater depth of meaning than the human words of the printed page might lead us to suspect. It challenges our profoundest thoughts.

L. G. Cook, in calling himself a "fool scientist", in his recent letter, showed a deep knowledge of himself. He seems to be as purely materialistic as One of the Unintelligent is the opposite, and disagreeing with Wilfred Smith's fine letter on the whole, he agrees with its one error.

To sum up may I render superfluous all the other points in favour of evolution. Almost two thousand years ago Jesus Christ, to whose state, mental, moral and spiritual at least, we are aspiring, was here amongst us. His coming has speeded up evolution in man so that now the change is quite apparent from one generation to the next, and the world is relatively rapidly becoming a better place in which to live.

F. L. Lawson,

ing a large band and the Marx brothers present in person. Several original songs have been written by Saul Rae, including one based on the inscription around the Great Hall, another called "We're Juniors Now, and 'Louie the Roue', an apache dance which he guaranteed would "knock 'em in the aisles." "There will be four murders at the Vanities," he said, "besides what goes on behind the scenes, which is nobody's business. But it will be a clean show, for Hart Buck will take his first bath there, in goat's milk!"

Considerable talent has been turned away as not being of sufficiently high standard. In addition to the actual performers, there is a corps of scene shifters, writers, musicians, ham actors and other assistants. He even intimated that Earl Carroll and George White had been competing to sign up the show for an extended tour, but said that further information would not be available until a later date.

Hospital and the government establishments. The Red Cross is chiefly practical work, while the government training is theoretical. The course here is considered a completion and addition to the training in Greece.

"Every hospital is supervised by the government," said Miss J. Kaniewski, who is Toronto's Polish representative in the Public Health Course. The hospitals include every branch of nursing. The first American instruction took place in Poland after the Great War. Today Polish instruction is based chiefly on American lines. "We regard our experience in foreign countries as broadening and helpful."

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE PREPARES MAGAZINE

Prizes Offered for Work, Whether Story, Poem or Essay

STANOARO TO BE HIGH

"This year we are going to portray the literary and artistic life of University College in a way that previous issues have too often neglected," stated Mr. Gerald Levenston, editor-in-chief of U.C.'s annual magazine, The Undergraduate. Prizes are to be given for the best work, whether story, poem, or essay, provided they are of a sufficiently high standard. Thus far contributions have been slow in coming in, and U.C. men—and women—are urged to rally round and devote some of their spare talent to the college magazine.

Mr. Levenston expressed dissatisfaction with the literary life of University College and the University in general. "While there are many fine men in its halls," he explained, "brilliant men, with imposing futures, their abilities are chiefly devoted to executive duties and forensic orations. All too few of them tread the paths of the Muses for the sheer delight of creative expression. In this respect we contrast rather unfavourably with certain American colleges such as Harvard and Ann Arbor."

Nevertheless, he is optimistic about The Undergraduate. It is to be slightly enlarged this year, and the stories are to be chosen selectively, longer stories will probably decrease in number.

Appointments Made By Board of Regents

The Board of Regents of Victoria College elected J. R. L. Starr, K.C., to succeed the late A. E. Ames, as chairman at their meeting yesterday. Mr. Starr has had a continued connection with the Board of Regents as a member since he was first elected in 1902.

A number of new members were introduced at the meeting. They were Mrs. F. N. G. Starr, representing the United Church of Canada; Clark E. Locke, representing the Alumni of Victoria College; Morley Smith and Morden Neilson.

Parliamentary Club Declines

Women

W. SMITH NEW PREMIER

Very Small Majority Defeated
Wayman Government
Yesterday

The men of University College do not want women at their debates. At a meeting of the Parliamentary Club yesterday afternoon the Wayman government resigned after losing by one vote the motion: "Resolved that this House favours the formation in University College of a Debating Union of both sexes."

The Rt. Hon. the Prime Minister, Mr. Maurice Wayman, declared in moving the question that the establishment of such a Union would not mean that the Men's Parliamentary Club would be abolished. He further stated that the very large attendance at the Hart House debate on Pacifism last week was due to the presence of women in the gallery; and he said that their presence not only stimulates interest in debating but also raises the morality of the debates; in fact, the women would revive the club and put it on a new and better basis.

The motion was opposed by the Hon. Mr. Wilfred Smith, leader of the Opposition, who asserted that the interests of the two sexes differed, and (Continued on Page 3)

FEDERAL POWER STRONG IN CANADA

Danger of Annexation by the United States Forced the Union

CONFEDERATION DISCUSSED

"The Federal powers in Canada are phenomenally strong, in comparison with those of Australia, or Brazil," stated Professor Chester Martin, head of the department of History, in an address at University College yesterday afternoon on "The Confederation and Expansion of Canada." He went on to say that unions were usually the result of pressure and crisis and invariably a stable political compound may be the result. Various causes combined to impress on Canadian statesmen the necessity of uniting the colonies of British North America into one political compound before they were disintegrated into the then more powerful union of the United States. The immediate effect of the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854 was also to draw the British provinces into a closer union. 1867 saw the older provinces, Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick united under the Act of Confederation.

The completion of the Intercolonial Railway formed a material bond of union between these older provinces of Canada and the Maritimes. Finally, in 1872 the whole of British North America was organized into a united political confederacy under the name of the Dominion of Canada.

MUST JUSTIFY WAR DEMANDS M'GILL

Student Opinion Supports the League of Nations and World Court

"WAR NOT INEVITABLE"

"Justify war—then only will we fight," is the general answer of the McGill undergraduates to the question of supporting Canada in case of conflict. The questionnaire recently published in Canadian University journals, represents part of an international effort being made by the W.S.C.F. at Geneva, to determine student opinion throughout the world on the question of war.

At McGill, 497 undergraduates, about thirteen per cent, responded. Of those answering, 402 were men and 95 women; while 463 were Canadians and 34 of other nationalities.

Twenty-five per cent of those answering definitely will not support the Canadian government in any war which it may declare; while fifty per cent will only lend support if they feel the war is a justifiable one.

War is not inevitable in the belief of 241 students and 331 deemed it justifiable for Canada, in case of an invasion.

Among organizations endorsed for fostering peace, the League of Nations proves popular, receiving the approval of 266 voters. A World Court was favoured by 244, while about seventy-five per cent were for all movements (Continued on Page 4)

GERMAN STUDENTS ARE UNAFFECTED BY HITLER DECREE

ATTEMPT TO CONTROL MARK

Measure Purely Economic, Necessary as Part of Reconstruction

"There is no danger whatsoever of exchange students in Canada or the United States having to return to Germany," replied Fritz Winter, German exchange student this year to the University of Toronto, when questioned about the decree issued yesterday by the German government, ordering the cessation of foreign exchange payments to students in foreign countries. "All exchange students are protected by the Deutsche Akademische Austauschdienst, the German Academic Exchange Service, an organization affiliated with the Institute of International Education, which sends 25 or 30 German scholarship students to this continent each year. The reason for the decree is purely economic and in no way political, since it is economically necessary that Germany allow as few marks as possible to escape her borders. The German Academic Exchange Service does not interfere with this policy of (Continued on Page 4)

FORCE OF ENVIRONMENT STRESSED BY LECTURER

E. C. Conklin Will Lecture on Cellular Basis of Heredity

The much discussed theory of evolution will be the subject of the Saturday night lecture at Convocation Hall. This week the guest speaker of the Royal Canadian Institute will be E. C. Conklin, Ph.D., LL.D., of Princeton University, who will speak on the theory of Evolution and Heredity.

Mr. Conklin is not a follower of the Darwinian school of thought, and treats the subject in a thoroughly scientific manner. The Varsity was informed yesterday. His own opinion is that characteristics are shaped by environment rather than heredity, but, as a biologist, he considers the matter from all angles when on the platform. The lecture commences at 8.15, and will deal specifically with the Cellular basis of heredity, and the development of evolution. Students are especially invited.

Hairy, Hirsute Contest Stage Garb Their Chins With Foliage

Shades of the Smith Brothers! The Hair-raising Hooligans from the south end of the campus are at it again, and this time literally. The engineers, or at least the sophomore class of them, are off in a genuine, dyed in the wool, beard growing contest that is guaranteed to put more razor factories out of business than the depression, and consumes more hair tonic than a pack of thirsty cowboys.

Having wracked their brains for a real publicity gag to advertise their dance on December 18, the second year have decided to forego the pleasure of shaving, and copying the contests held with considerable success at the University of British Columbia, and University of Southern California, have decided to imitate the House of David, fling their chin scrapers to the breeze, and let nature take its course.

Everyone entering the contest is being assessed the sum of one dime, the estimated saving on soap and blades. The person whose hirsute adornments on December 18th beat all others on the basis of length, general appearance, shagginess, area covered, colour, sex appeal, and fire resistance, will be awarded the sum of four dollars and will lose his amateur standing. Runners up will receive two dollars and one dollar respectively, with a couple of additional prizes tossed in to boot—provided that there are at least six contestants still in the running.

The second year boasts one young lady, who of course is excluded by nature from participating in the contest, but, according to rumour, will act as the final judge. When questioned by The Varsity, Miss Sheppard refused to confirm or deny the rumour for publication, but silence may be conceived as intimating the affirmative.

SEASON TICKETS

Students' Season Ticket Coupon plus 25c will admit to the usual Students' Section for Saturday's rugby game. The entrance will be the south door of the Arena.

ANTI-WAR SOCIETY DEMANDS ACTION

Society Has Hopes of Sending Delegate to Geneva
Congress

PLANS MAOE FOR APPEAL

"The I.S.S. questionnaire must be followed up by action," was the statement made by Mr. A. Stein at a meeting of the Anti-War Society on Thursday evening. His opinion was endorsed by the decision of the society to call upon the student organizations to assist them in sending a delegate to the World Congress of Students Against War.

This international congress to be held at Geneva at the end of December, will draw up an anti-war programme for the students of the various countries represented there.

Recognizing the general antipathy of Toronto students to war, as shown by their interest in the I.S.S. questionnaire, the Anti-War Society feels that the University will support this move to send a delegate.

"I feel that it is essential for a University such as Toronto to have a representative at this conference," said Mr. K. C. Woodsworth. He advanced the belief that only by a strong international movement could we prevent the recurrence of another World War. The society made definite plans for sending out an appeal to all other student organizations to assist them in their project, and the new executive, elected last night, were enthusiastic in their belief that the Toronto students would respond to this challenge.

ROMANELLI'S ORCHESTRA FOR ATHLETIC AT-HOME

Lists Remain Open Until the Beginning of Next Week

Lists for the Athletic At-Home will remain open over the week-end, it was learned yesterday. It is hoped that by the beginning of the week all those who are interested in this annual event will have signed.

Luigi Romanelli, the well-known dance maestro from the King Edward Hotel, will supply the music for the dance festival, and a particularly delicious supper will be served in the Great Hall. The Athletic At-Home was cancelled last year, following the sudden death of J. C. Copp, the popular athlete, and the committee in charge of this year's At-Home is attempting to make up for last year's absence.

The gymnasium will be decorated with blue and white streamers, and it is hoped that the guests, who will be limited to 400 couples, will enjoy a dance which will go down in their memories for many years. The purpose of the Athletic At-Home is to provide a function particularly for athletes, both intercollegiate and interfaculty, but other students may secure tickets.

Varsity, McMASTER MEET AT STADIUM SEEK RUGBY TITLE

Game Precedes Saturday's Contest for Dominion Duties

Varsity's Last Hope

Powell and Edwards Are Due to Share the Kicking
Honours

With a string of sparkling victories behind them, the Varsity intermediate football team, sole upholders of the University's hopes for a football championship, await the chance tomorrow afternoon to send McMaster back to Hamilton empty-handed.

They play the intermediate finalists from McMaster in a game at the Stadium previous to the Canadian championship match between Sarnia and Regina.

Jack Sinclair and Lew Hayman have been putting the finishing touches to the B line style of attack during this past week of practice, with the emphasis on careful ball-handling and fast passing. George Powell and Ivan Edwards are the two halves who will do the kicking tomorrow. The success of Syd Jackson in running the ball back from kicks has been of note during the previous games, and he may be counted on to gain plenty of ground against McMaster.

Whitey Miller will once more be at his quarterback position, where he has started many fine forward passes to the hands of Edwards, Buck and Tafts in the last few games. There are no weak spots in the entire make-up (Continued on Page 3)

MEDS AND DENTS BATTLE FOR TITLE

Newton and Rollaston Are Slated to Share the Honours

JR. MEDS' HEAVY LINE

A new champion will be crowned in the interfaculty rugby world when the final whistle blows in this afternoon's match between Jr. Meds and Dents, who fight it out for the Mulock Cup at Varsity Stadium. The Meds won the historic mug for the first time way back in 1914, and repeated the feat in 1919, while the Ontario Dental College can only boast of coming out on top on one occasion and that in 1918.

The battle this afternoon appears to be between a team with an excellent backfield and one with an exceedingly strong line. The kicking honours will probably be fairly evenly distributed between Newton and Rollaston, with the latter expected to have a slight edge.

Dents are the team with the clever and fast backfield, and with Dore at quarter the Meds will have their hands full. The Dentists are also pinning their hopes on the forward pass, and from past experience it looks like the Dore-Spears combination is the most formidable one along this line in interfaculty rugby.

Jr. Meds, however, boast of a very heavy line, backed up by effective plungers, and speedy wings. It must not be forgotten that they handed Trinity a severe drubbing when re-playing a tie game, and the latter were the pre-season favourites. Medlock and Carvelth, McKone, Spence and McKee, are all players worthy of note, and when these two teams meet, the fur promises to fly.

FOR GUIDED EDUCATION

Much publicity has been given in the last few months to Dr. C. C. Goldring's proposed changes in the high-school curriculum. The subjects now taught may be of high educational value, but the practical value, especially in their connection with future life and work has been questioned. Following that investigation, or better still directly fitting in with it, is the consideration of advice or assistance to the high-school student as to what direction he will give to his future learning.

Pupils headed for the Normal School have their curriculum mapped out from the first to the last year. They know exactly what subjects to take and what to omit. What about the others—those who are in the collegiates because they know only that junior and senior matriculation is the ultimate goal for the next few years? A number of them are definitely going on to the university, and others would like to, but are aware of financial obstacles. The trouble arises in the home and not in the school. Those parents who are themselves University graduates can competently give their children the necessary direction. But the vast majority of children have not a background of such education in their homes. Their parents are from the industrial and not the professional class—many of these parents have not even the equivalent of high school education. They do not know what is being taught in the high-schools, nor are they in the position to advise their children on which subjects to concentrate, as leading on to further education and training. And there are, of course, always children whose parents take no interest in what is going on—they figure that once the child is in high-school, those responsible for his education will tell him what to do next.

The situation at present, is unsystematic, anarchic, and expensive. The student where he gets no intelligent control from his family, is left largely to his own devices. If he has a liking for history, he will take a course at the University that concentrates on history; if he prefers English, that; if science, one of the courses offered there. But, he is not mature enough to consider the question as a whole: what will he do with his course after he graduates? Does he want to teach in a high-school? does he want to do research? does he want to practice medicine? does he want to do social work? The University is filled with students in their second and third years who feel that something is wrong, that the course they are taking is not what they want. But they have either gone too far to make a change (financial reasons and the loss of several years may control their decisions), or they optimistically hope for the best. And these are the ones who will increase the ranks of educated misfits already so numerous.

We meet our graduate friends and ask what they are doing—nothing! why, what about their degrees? Pooh! that! why it's of no use. Of course, the unemployment situation is responsible for a great deal of trouble. But even under ordinary circumstances, it is not made plain what are the possibilities and limitations of a University education. In the post graduate courses the incongruity of undergraduate training is even more apparent. One young man in the Social Science course has a B.A. in Mathematics. It is no way fits in with the course he is taking now, nor the work he is intending to do—unless he is to be accountant for some social agency! What is to be done to prevent this condition from continuing indefinitely?

It will immediately be pointed out that there are several young women in the Registrar's office, ready and eager to offer their assistance. But of just how much use can they be? A prospective University student tells them his worries and his hopes, which subjects he excels in and what he likes; and the adviser from the student's estimate of himself offers her advice. Does she know the student, his possibilities and capabilities, except superficially from his own description and his matriculation results? And is this sufficient to work on? We think not. At any rate, it hasn't been successful so far.

A workable and far more reliable system—a system not a situation—would be to have connected with every high-school a man or woman specially trained (i.e., from the educational and psychological standpoint) to act as consultant to all fourth and fifth year students (those years particularly, though other years need not be barred). The adviser would have to know each student, keep in contact with him through regular consultation, know his school record, the conditions in his home (superficially), his financial possibilities. He would have to give each student personally an idea where the various courses at the University lead, and to learn the student's ambitions and aims in life—and where none seem present, to try to "educate" them. The adviser's job would be a more responsible one than that of any teacher in the school—but he could do more to eliminate the evils and costliness of present conditions than any good individual teacher.

This plan leaves itself open to objections—any new idea does that! Why should the Board of Education increase its staff when it is doing all it can to cut it? Wouldn't the adviser be meddling too much in the private lives of the students by taking on himself all the enumerated duties? Is the whole question worth any thought—after all, if a student can not look out for himself, he is not worth looking after. Etc., etc. But they are obviously not serious objections, and could all be answered or modified on further discussion.

Since the question raised is of equal importance to the faculty of the University, they are invited to contribute their opinions to the Correspondence column of The Varsity.

LOVE

Love is a difficult subject to discuss, because of the division that is made between Romantic Love, which is the sweetest thing, and Sex, which makes the world go round.

For the sake of convenience, they will from now on be considered one and almost the same thing. Because they have been found impractical on account of the highest cost of wedding rings, the subject will be immediately dropped and we shall discuss the alternative.

SUBLIMATION
This is a substitute, but is a good thing all the same. There are several methods.

(1) Unrestraint. Self expression through strenuous and frantic effort. Many take to the Rugby Field, and do or die for Alma, (mater understood). Those who find that this is carrying things too far can instead practice the second method, namely,

(2) Restraint. Subdue all emotion, and reverently apply your energies to something fine and noble such as

(a) Music. Restraint produces our best music. Beethoven is said to have rushed home and dashed off the Ninth Symphony in a fit of passion, and never regretted it. (Only advised for those with musical ability.)

(b) Any kind of handicraft, such as carving woodcuts or repairing watches or writing letters on the back of postage stamps, where you ruin it if you lose your temper. (For people with low blood pressure only.)

(c) Fanny-work. Knitting or crocheting where you can occasionally lose your temper. Spinners can sew frantically at lace dollies and old bachelors can landscape garden with a

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

The barrier will go up for the last time this season in senior football Saturday when Lew Hayman, Jack Sinclair and Co. send their intermediates out at Varsity Stadium, to return with the Intercollegiate title or the title of Runners Up. This contest will be followed by the Dominion finals, in which Sarnia Imperials and Regina Roughriders will be the actors. We still feel safe in giving Sarnia the leading role and expect them to be doing just that when the final whistle blows.

The intermediates will be facing one of the best clubs ever to be produced by McMaster, who incidentally have only been producing teams for a relatively short period of time. The visitors are fresh from a win over O.A.C. and the Aggies won the Dominion title for the past two years. This would indicate that the Hamilton team must be good. They have a good kicker, but reports have it that in the last contest, that in which they defeated the Aggies, they were more than a little lucky. Varsity, although they have been playing good ball consistently, have not been displaying what one would expect in a Dominion championship team. However, they have never had to battle very hard for victory and it is likely they will be ready for their blue ribbon game when they face the Macs here Saturday.

In the second game of the afternoon, "the best team ever to come out of the west" will be facing the winners of the O.R.F.U. crown. The Oilers have been knocking at the door of a Dominion title for several years past and it looks like their year to win. However, the west may happen to be as good as they are reported. Reports from reliable sources would brand them as the most proficient team with the forward pass in Canadian football. It will also be recalled that St. Mike's, with their forward passing attack, had the Oilers on the run in a game at the Maple Leaf Stadium, and had they been the recipients of as much luck as was Sarnia, they would probably have won. At that they scored more points against Sarnia than any other team, including Hamilton, has been able to do this year. All of which indicates that if the Westerners have the passing attack down as well as reported, they will be certain to cause the O.R.F.U. champs more than a little grief.

The Blue and White puckchasers will make their first appearance at Hamilton this evening. Making an appearance in Hamilton at any time has its drawbacks but to have to play their opening game in the Tiger Town is sad. Not that we are predicting defeat for the local boys in the game tonight. In fact, we would not be surprised if they went out and won the game. What would surprise us would be to see them win the fight. Of course there may not be a fight, in fact, it is very unlikely, but the Tigers never did let anyone down easy in any contest and the students, somewhat short in the matter of practice, and still shorter in the matter of competition this season, will find it uphill going all the way.

Saturday night should see a rather interesting encounter in the big gym. On that occasion the Varsity cagers will play hosts to the Hamilton Fiat Club in an exhibition basketball fixture. The Fiats have a team ranging in height from Harry Shelton, who looks down from a distance of 7'-3" with a displacement of 225 lbs., to Jim Wilson, 5'-3", who coaches the team. This is a variety not usually found on a floor. For Varsity there will be most of last year's stars, several new men and a host of brilliant players from St. Mike's, all battling for places. The price is one dime and will probably admit you to one of the best battles of the year.

BLUES VS. BENGALS TO OPEN SEASON

Both Teams Are Prepared Through Pre-Season
Games

SENIORS MEET SAILORS

The second game, between the Vic team and the Vic Grads, kept the spectators guessing for a while, but the Grads came out on top with a score of 19-12. Billie Fowler, pitching for the Grads, was right on her toes and sent down some sizzling balls. Jean Blundell turned in a nice effort for the Regulars and Greta Maxwell, as her catching mate, made some very pretty plays.

U.C. Juniors took the Nurses for a ride last night, despite the valiant attempts of the latter to keep up their end of the score. Had their shooting been less wild they might have given U.C. more competition. Ruth Thomas showed up well for U.C., scoring 17 points out of the 31 scored by her team while Dorothy Clark was high scorer for the losers.

An apology is due to Doreen Kenny. It was she, and not Bea Longley, as we said in Wednesday's Varsity, who scored the 28 points for the O.C.E. team in the basketball game between O.C.E. and the Y.W. on Tuesday night. Sorry Doreen!

Tonight at 6.30 in St. Alban's Church gym Vic and St. Mike's clash in the last game of the regular baseball series. This ought to be a good game as both teams are in top form. Vic have met defeat only once and that by their grads last night, and the Saints know how to go.

U.C. Seniors play Vic Seniors in basketball at 6 o'clock this evening. This will be a real battle, so everybody out.

All U.C. women interested in badminton are invited to the Round Robin at the York Club at 3 o'clock this afternoon. If you have played before or want to play, come along. Everybody welcome.

Interfaculty Swimming—Meet will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 29. Last year's intercollegiate will not be allowed to compete. All entrants get in touch with interfaculty manager.

Stadium Ushers

Stadium ushers are requested to report at the Stadium on Saturday, November 24, 1934, for the C.R.U. Eastern final game, at 1 p.m. A full attendance is requested.

BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS

Fiat Club and Varsity Seniors
Clash in Exhibition Game

The big gym, Hart House, will once more be the scene on Saturday night of rushing rubber-shod athletes as Lew Hayman's senior Blues unofficially open the 1934-35 basketball season in an exhibition tilt with the Fiat Club of Hamilton. The contest will furnish cage fans around the campus with an excellent opportunity of viewing the collection which Hayman is tutoring this year, as every senior basketball player will be given a chance to show his best.

The Purple and Gold aggregation are reputed to be the standout team in their league in Hamilton and as a result should furnish excellent opposition and entertainment. In addition to being a strong club the Tigertown crew boast of a few added attractions in the matter of personnel. Seymour Wilson of Eastern Canadian All-Star football fame, holds down one of the defence positions, while brother Jim coaches the team. Little Harry Shelton, a seven foot three centre, tips the scales at 225 pounds, just 25 pounds ahead of Coach New, a mere six foot two playmate.

Coach Lew Hayman intends to floor a squad of about fifteen men, giving each man an opportunity of making a final bid for a regular berth. As a result Blue and White cage enthusiasts will be able to see last year's men and the new additions at their best. The arrival of the St. Michael's basketballers has heightened the fight for positions and the fans will reap the benefits of this increased effort.

INTERMEDIATE RUGBY

up of the team. The defence is almost impossible to penetrate by forward passing and the plunging will be just as difficult. Lew Hayman has taught the boys the knack of scoring, and with a multitude of varied plays, has given them an offensive power, which when added to their strength of defence, has made of them a real football team.

CORRESPONDENCE

played in this connection is positively a joke. The verb "to serve" means "to be useful to". Just to what or whom is one useful, who, after he is transported to another country, does his best to blow to pieces or destroy by other foul means, as many of the enemy's citizens as possible—and then is, perhaps, himself shattered to atoms? Where is the service?

To my way of thinking, the only way in which this word might apply, can best be shown by an analogy. The human body is utilized, for war purposes, in much the same manner as a crystal of potassium chromate, which, dissolved in sulphuric acid, produces a potent mixture capable of much destruction. In the reaction, the crystal loses its identity as an individual, and so with the human in war. How can

Women Should be Seen Not Heard And not Obscene--It's Quite Absurd

"Many a man would be lost without a wife to tell him to put on his rubbers."

"A boy's best friend is his mother!"

Such vehement ejaculations as these featured the successful attack on the motion, "Resolved that women should be seen and not heard," during yesterday's session of the Sandwich Parliament at Victoria College. In his opening remarks, Speaker of the House H. M. Beer, was careful to set the members at rights on the exact wording of the question before them.

"Contrary to popular opinion," explained the Speaker, "the motion is not 'Resolved that women should be obscene and not absurd.'"

The actual motion was defeated only in spite of superhuman support given by the affirmative speakers.

The Hon. Member from Peart pointed out that Greta Garbo, the Queen of Moviedom, is famous for her reticence.

"Of course, echo answers that Miss Garbo has one particular phrase that she does use constantly,—"I tank echo home."

"Woman is definitely an ornamental figure," continued the same member. "Cause why?—Cosmetics!"

"Unrestricted speech among women had ruined their voices and given them raucous tones, and 'the hand that rocks the cradle rules the home!'"

Also for the motion, the Hon. Member from Curry: "Women must go back to their kitchens, take up their dustpans, and dust."

Voice: "We all return to dust..."

Second speaker for the opposition, the Hon. Member from Priest returned the very arguments given for the motion to attack it:

"The faces of our women can no longer be looked upon,—as the Hon. Member from Peart has said himself,—all one can see is cosmetics. Women will never be able to disguise their voices behind a coat of paint,—therefore I declare that contrary to the motion, women should be heard and not seen!"

Suggestions offered at the end of the ballot ranged all the way from socialism to applied Christianity. Illuminating examples are "Down with Hitler, Mussolini and the Union House Committee." "Read 'Cry Havoc' and abolish the C.O.T.C. and all cadet corps."

It is noteworthy that the suggestions fail to imply a means of development.

her government, since the German scholars in Canada are financed from a Canadian fund and in return, the Canadian exchange scholars in Germany are financed from a German fund. By this means students can study abroad without taking marks out of Germany."

"It is unlikely that the students will be seriously handicapped," remarked Dr. Victor Lange of the U.C. German department, when told of the decree.

"In most cases they are sent abroad by different organizations, who solve this problem by co-operating with similar institutions in the foreign countries which send students to Germany."

St. Thomas Church

On Sunday at the 11 o'clock Choral Eucharist, the musical setting will be by Dr. Sydney H. Nicholson, Warden of St. Nicholas College, founded by him as a School of English Church Music. He will visit Toronto at the end of December under the guidance of Canon Venn Pilcher, and will conduct a two-day Choir School and give various lectures. The preacher at the morning service will be the Rev. R. S. Rayson, Rector of St. Mark's Church, West Toronto, and the choir will sing Palestrina's Motet, "Be Thou not far from me, O Lord." At the Choral Evensong at 7 p.m. the Choir will sing Sir John Goss' well known anthem "O Saviour of the World."

During the week the St. Thomas' branch of the Anglican Young People's Association will present a three-act comedy, "Daughter for Sale", written by Iris Nash, one of the members of the association. It will be given on Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the Parish Hall, 383 Huron Street, at 8.15 p.m.

Yesterday afternoon the Women's Musical Club presented the Vienna Boys' Choir, a superb organization rich in the traditions of the past. The programme was one of the most exquisite and beautiful examples of vocal art imaginable. Between a sacred group of XVI century compositions and secular group of Schubert, Brahms, Emmer and Strauss, a short operetta arranged especially for the Choir was given.

The complete absence of self-consciousness, the charm and abandon of the boys, to say nothing of the masterly singing of Schubert's music, made this second number a thing of rare beauty and finish.

A certain hollowiness which frequently characterizes boys' voices was entirely absent. The voices without exception were exceedingly fine, resonant and strong. The training which has succeeded in producing artistic results of so high a calibre has been meticulous, wise and painstaking. The precision, balance and clarity of the part singing and the breath-taking pianissimos challenge the finest vocal art of any mature choral aggregation.

It is hard to believe that such technical finish and artistic excellence can be obtained from a group of youngsters. There can be no doubt that some of the voices are phenomenal. The young lad who took the solo parts in Mozart's Lullaby has a voice of surpassing beauty, a richness and freeness beyond credence.

SENIOR NETTERS DEFEAT FIATS

Hamilton Club Easy Mark for Varsity in Basketball Opener

PLAY WAS RAGGED

Basketball made its 1934-5 debut on the time-worn court at Hart House when Lew Hayman's Varsity seniors defeated Hamilton Fiats Saturday night in an exhibition tilt by a 41-27 count. The game was a typical pre-season fixture, play on the whole being very wide open and ragged, with the coaches juggling players frequently trying to find a winning combination. Both teams showed a decided lack of timing in their plays, the smoothness and finesse around the hoops that comes with long hours of practice being scarcely evident. Hayman had two separate squads on display, starting with Gold of last year's Blue quintet teaming up with Joe Connelly, formerly of St. Mike's, on defence, Alex Munro, intercollegiate high jump champion, at centre, Marks and Meagher, late of St. Mike's, as forwards. This five has the makings of a great team, their rapid fire passing, fast breaking and smooth ball handling marking them the most outstanding outfit on parade during the evening's play. ### FULFORDS TO SPEAK TO YOUNG LIBERALS

Youngest Member of Ontario Legislature Here on Thursday

Mr. and Mrs. George Fulford of Brockville, will be guest speakers at the University Liberal Club next Thursday evening in Wymwood.

LACK OF VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS CRITICIZED

System Existing in England Suggested as Suitable Model

PARENTS UNINTERESTED

"I think it is a splendid idea," stated Professor G. Norwood, Director of Classical Studies in University College, when asked his opinion on the editorial in last Friday's Varsity, which suggested the placing of a consultant in each high school to assist and advise pupils in the choosing of a suitable career.

"It is strange that such a question has not been raised long ago," Professor Norwood declared. "However, instead of an outside person, I think it would be better to have the principal, or someone who comes more intimately in contact with the students, perform this duty. Of course, it would be a heavy responsibility, but such a person would eventually become competent enough to assist the pupils in this respect."

"Such a system has been existing in England for years," continued the professor, "and it has certainly proven a great success. The Headmaster becomes acquainted with the parents of each student in the school. He gets to know in just what subjects the pupils are interested, and is able to advise them accordingly."

"The English Universities also cooperate in this regard in the fact that they have a University Appointments Board, whose members investigate the different professions to ascertain which are crowded and which are not."

"In most cases, of course, the parents know very little about University and high school education, or, worse."

PROFESSOR TRACES HEREDITY SOURCES

Theory of Evolution Applied Further in Discussing Development

"The study of germ cells has to do with the evolution of races and species and new organisms. If man has developed from some other organism that change came about through a modification of the germ cell," stated Professor E. G. Conklin of Princeton University, speaking in Convocation Hall, Saturday evening on the subject: "The Cellular Basis of Heredity and Evolution."

Dr. Conklin went on to characterize as absurd the old idea that in some strange way one adult animal could turn into one of a different species. "Evolution must take place in the germ cell and be passed on from generation to generation. The characteristics and changes which lead to the development of different kinds of species are to be found in the germ cells and their environmental influences."

By means of slides Professor Conklin illustrated the behaviour of cells and chromosomes and the result on the living organism. It has always been a cause of wonder that children of some parents could sometimes be so different. This fact led many people to doubt if there was anything to heredity. The reason, according to Dr. Conklin, is that one child gets a different combination of chromosomes from the first.

REAPPOINT OEAN OF MEDICAL FACULTY

Dr. J. G. Fitzgerald has been appointed as Dean of the Faculty of Medicine for a second term of three years by the Board of Governors, it was announced Saturday.

Psychology Heads Favour Idea but Point Out Many Difficulties

MANY FACTORS INFLUENCE

"The idea of having an adviser in the high schools is an excellent one," said Professor Chant, associate professor of Psychology at U.C., in regard to Friday's editorial. "However, such a person would have to have unusual abilities, as it is difficult even for someone here at the University to know all the ramifications of all our numerous courses. It would be even more of a problem for an individual working on the outside," Professor Chant went on to say.

Mr. Ketchum, also of the Psychology department, agreed with Professor Chant in feeling that they knew nothing, or at least very little, about the high school systems. High school principals would do something towards giving vocational guidance to students, was the suggestion of the dons.

Professor Chant told the reporter of a questionnaire given to three or four hundred Psychology students a few years ago, in an attempt to discover what led students to choose subjects they did. Some reasons given were the advice of parents or friends, belief that certain courses would be useful to them, and a real liking for the subject.

ESTABLISH NEW AWARD IN DEPARTMENT OF LAW

President H. J. Cody announces that the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto has accepted with gratitude the offer made by a group of friends of the late Angus McMurchy, B.A., K.C., of a gold medal to be awarded at the end of this session to a student in the Department of Law, the terms of the award to be fixed by the Senate of the University.

Mr. McMurchy was at one time President of the Alumni Federation and was for years a member of the Board of Governors. He was actively interested in the University of Toronto throughout his life.

MULOCK CUP GOES TO DENTISTRY; FIRST TIME IN SIXTEEN YEARS

MODERNISTIC TRENDS IN ART DISCUSSED

"The character of an individual can be estimated by the pictures he likes," said Mr. A. Lismer in an address at the Art Gallery, Friday afternoon. "Art intensifies the business of living—it has a life of its own and a tremendous vitality."

He spoke briefly of the general attitudes in painting, particularly of colour and general lighting. The brightness of Canadian pictures has something to do with our optimism. Mr. Lismer compared academic and modern art with two steam engines. "Academic art is all shined up, but with no place to go. Modern art gallops wildly on a rampage of its own." Modernistic art is an organized version of things felt. It interprets a state of mind, rather than a realistic vision.

Mr. Lismer went on to say that it is not necessary to like a picture to enjoy it. "Art must not be taken seriously." All the great painters chose their subjects from the environment in which they live. Pictures are children of their own times, and that is why artists must think with the simplicity of a child.

HAMILTON TIGERS SWAMP VARSITY IN O.H.A. OPENER

Varsity Trailing at End of Third Period—Mass Attack Proved Disastrous

FINAL SCORE 6-1

Bengals Show Superiority in Condition After First Period

Hamilton Tigers proved too fast and hard for the University of Toronto hockey team Friday evening as the teams met in the Tigers' Arena in the opening encounter of the O.H.A. series. The Bengals, although showing a superiority in condition only, won the engagement 6-1.

However, the work of the students was far from disappointing and only a last period gamble for goals, in which incidentally, Varsity lost, kept the score from being considerably closer.

The count read 1-all at the end of the first period, but when the teams entered the third Varsity was trailing 3-1. A massed attack, which sent every man up in this period, proved disastrous, as the Bengals broke away to run in three goals. Varsity had several close chances, but they failed to get by Teno.

In the matter of territorial play, the students had just about an even division. However, they showed a lack of condition, and the end of each period found them "hanging on". The veteran line of Hendry, MacPherson and McLellan looked to be as effective as anything the Tigers were able to produce, while the Ottawa line of Kieff, Levine and MacLugham, was the combination which produced the only goal of the evening. Shipp was also good and was only beaten with shots which he had no chance to save.

For the Bengals, the work of Liska, the Galt recruit, was next to brilliant, while Gordie Kerr also was at his best. Maxie Bennett failed to get into the scoring column.

Slippery Field Caused Many Fumbles and Was Decisive Factor in Win

ROLLASTON STARS

For the first time since 1918, the Mulock Cup, emblematic of the inter-faculty rugby championship, will take up residence among the drills and the other instruments of torture in the Dental College. The Dents won the trophy by beating Hal Richardson's Junior Meds at the Stadium on Friday afternoon by 6-2.

The slippery playing field caused many fumbles, particularly by Meds. In fact, Dents owe their victory to their better ball handling and to Rollaston's superior kicking. In the other departments of the game, Meds had a slight edge. They gained yards on plays from scrimmage eight times to three by Dents, and to everyone's surprise, they made more headway in running back kicks. Dents' fleet half line was obviously bothered by the heavy going, and except for a couple of nice runs by Dore and Spears, they were held well in check by the Medical tacklers.

VIC TAKES LEAD IN SOCCER FINALS

Battle to 2-1 Victory Over S.P.S. in First of Two-Game Series

COME FROM BEHIND

On Saturday morning the front campus saw the mighty Victoria soccer team forced to battle for sixty bitter minutes to obtain and hold a 2-1 lead over their S.P.S. rivals in the first of the two final games for the inter-faculty championship. Completely out-playing the collegians in the first half, and earning a one-goal margin as the proof, the engineers' high hopes of capturing the coveted Arts Cup were rudely tumbled in the last period when they bowed to the devastating and irresistible attacks of the wearers of the Scarlet and Gold.

The losers swept into the lead at the

END OF CAPITALISM SAID TO BE DISTANT

McInnis Sees Return of Individualism in United States

N.R.A. NOT A FACTOR

"Capitalism will continue to be the dominant force in the United States in spite of the New Deal and whether the N.R.A. succeeds or is a dismal failure makes little or no difference in this respect," said Mr. McInnis of the History Department at Baldwin House in the third of a series of lectures given in Trinity College Library.

"Only a remarkable man can be a Democrat and a president, because the Democrats are so exhausted by the time they have chosen a candidate and conducted a campaign they cannot carry on the business of the country. Mr. Roosevelt is not a remarkable man, he was elected because he was not Herbert Hoover. The idealistic creed of the Republican leaders was not adequate to meet the needs which developed from the crisis of 1929. The government's pure individualistic souls, though willing to give relief to crops and hogs, were repulsed by the thought of aiding human beings." Roosevelt, a believer in the basic traditions, sought to adapt his party's negative creed to the needs of the time in a positive fashion. The forgotten man was to become an important factor in the economic system and the N.R.A. was set up to regulate industry.

The results have been somewhat disappointing; the continued unemployment was unexpected, profits are not to the wage earners but to the industrialists.

Intercollegiate Rugby Title Still Unsettled After Saturday's Game

REPLAY NEXT THURSDAY

An Intercepted Forward Pass Gives McMaster the First Touchdown

In one of the most exciting football games seen at the Stadium this season, McMaster University battled the Varsity intermediates to a 14-14 tie Saturday afternoon, leaving the question of the intermediate intercollegiate championship still unsettled. A few unfortunate penalties in the last moments of the game prevented the Varsity Seconds from scoring the extra points which would have made the replaying of the game next Thursday unnecessary.

McMaster were the first to score. Early in the first period, Pitt of McMaster intercepted a forward pass, and ran the ball to the Varsity twenty yard line. From there after three successive first downs, Pitt plunged for a touchdown which Apps converted. This lead was but momentary, however, for Lynch of Varsity caught a long forward from Miller and ran to the McMaster twenty-five yard line before he was stopped. A couple of extensions and Jackson was over for a Varsity touch which Gray converted. Five minutes later, after McMaster had blocked Edward's kick, Palmer kicked to the deadline for a single point.

Varsity came back with a tying point when on the first play of the second half, Powell kicked a long punt from forty yards out which Brown was unable to take past the Varsity tacklers. Varsity went on top again when Gray kicked a perfect field goal. Whitey Miller in his turn, kicked another long placement from thirty yards out, and left the score at half time, 13-7 for Varsity.

Held well within their own territory, Varsity suffered a series of mishaps by a short kick and a no-yards penalty, and McMaster had the ball on the nine yard line. Moore threw a pass to Apps who scored the five points which left his team in the lead, 14-13. Coming so late in the game, this touchdown looked disastrous for Varsity, but when Moore fumbled on his twenty yard line, Powell recovered the ball and after two plunges failed was called upon to kick the tying point, which he did.

GALA NIGHT FOR DENTS AT "NOCTEM CUCKOO"

The Dental Juniors captured the Psi Omega trophy on Friday evening in Hart House with a hilarious skit entitled "A Radio Broadcast" at their annual skit and dance night, Noctem Cuckoo. The Junior production won the honours over the Senior attempt, "In the Inferno".

The frolic came as a fitting climax to their day of victory and the Dentsists added another wreath to their laurels by defeating U.C. in the water polo game during the evening with a score of 6 to 5.

The main gymnasium and east common room were filled with a crowd that rivalled that of the Hart House Masquerade, dancing to the music of Karl Mueller and his entertainers. A buffet supper served in the Great Hall was a pleasant interlude in the evening's festivities. When the revelers took their leave at one o'clock, many were heard to observe that this year's Noctem Cuckoo was one of the best the Faculty of Dentistry had yet succeeded in producing.

The Editorial Page

Today we introduce a change on the editorial page of The Varsity, a page which for years, in appearance at least, has been the most conservative part of the paper. The two wide columns which appear this morning instead of the usual one, are part of an experiment which has as its objective a more interesting paper for you to read.

The change has not been made as a mere novelty, and is not an effort to foist more dry editorials on an unresponsive student body. We hope to print in two columns our editorials, any literary material which is available, and some of the most interesting excerpts from other college papers as well.

It has been said that the second page of The Varsity has been too unattractive to invite interest, which is unfortunate since the editorial page should be the most educational, and therefore the most valuable, part of any publication. By enlarging the scope of our material, and publishing some undergraduate literary efforts both here and at other universities, we hope to produce a newspaper which will have a more interesting and more cosmopolitan outlook, and a consequently higher standing in the eyes of its readers.

However, we warn you that it is an experiment, and may not last. Your comments and criticisms are awaited with a great deal of interest.

A Moral Responsibility

The political implications of the discussion regarding conditions in Ontario schools are becoming very interesting. The discussion itself is excellent fodder for the ever-hungry daily press: an opportunity to increase circulation must never be wasted. In fairness to ourselves we must realize that the situation has a deeper significance than either politicians or hard-pressed journalists are permitted to appreciate.

It is curious that facts, while being common property, should be so elusive. We have heard various charges made concerning the morality of children in provincial schools. The very nature of these charges makes it impossible to investigate them except through statistical evidence, and it is unnecessary to point out the fallacies of this method. Moreover, it is obvious that an extreme view of the case prompted the original attack and that an inflamed public is maintaining it. The existence of unmarried mothers, the overindulgence in intoxicating beverages, are conditions in our society of which most adults are aware, conditions which are recognized, by the more intelligent of these adults, as being a necessary outcome of the education that is offered. To generalize concerning them and in so doing place the stigma of the condemnation upon every unhappy recipient of our educational benefices is grossly unjust.

If individuals are willing to do this and the press and public at large is ready to echo it, these must also be ready to accept the challenge it implies. Children are amoral, they approach adulthood with clean souls that become besmirched with whatever filth their environment provides. Parents and educators must look to themselves if they would know what will be the colour of the new generation.

The lack of consistency between the values forced upon the youth is, to him, one of the most confusing aspects of life. The higher authority of his elders is meaningless,—their actions if not their words have made it so. Society offers nothing in return but superficial standards, remnants of thought pretending to be part of the fabric of a new society. Consider the dangers of this unsystematic sex education. We refuse to be honest and recognize the need for complete and unsentimental knowledge of the subject, and yet we allow half-truths to be purveyed in places where they will fall upon the most fertile soil.

To say, "Stop this, keep the youth of the nation pure," is as impossible as it is impractical. We are moving in a new direction, let us face the fact honestly and make the necessary but different adjustment. It is the debt that the older generation owes to the younger for the future is theirs.

THE WINNIPEG LITTLE THEATRE

During the past few years there has been a lack of good professional dramatic companies, as it has been impossible for English companies to make ends meet on an American trip. Interest in the drama, however, has been kept alive by the widespread growth of the Little Theatre movement. In Winnipeg, far removed from the American centres of professional drama, amateurs have built up a really credit-worthy Little Theatre.

The Winnipeg Little Theatre is organized in a manner entirely different from Hart House Theatre. Instead of being privately controlled, it is operated as a club. Classes are held in the various branches of dramatic work, such as make-up, scenery designing, directing and acting. A member signifies, when he joins, which branch he is particularly interested in, and is given a thorough practical training in this line of work. Actors are trained in enunciation, breath control, and many other matters, the ignorance of which can cause directors to tear their hair and jump over bridges.

The Sock and Buskin Club, a junior organization of the Winnipeg Little Theatre, is very valuable in training material for the main productions. The technicalities of lighting effects, sets, make-up and properties are taught to the aspiring workers, which helps to provide a background for the production of plays that the average amateur company cannot hope to equal.

Short plays and readings are presented under amateur direction on Members' Nights. Here the newer actors have to play before a most critical audience—their own friends, and the frank criticism often helps to raise the standard of their work. At these Members' performances, the rough corners are smoothed off, and "Melodramatic stoops" are corrected.

The Little Theatre has a professional director, who directs the five main productions of the Theatre, and supervises the work of amateur directors on the Members' Nights. Thus the amateur is given the finest opportunity to develop his ability, while all the public performances have the touch of an experienced director. Also, by sitting in on the Members' Nights, the director is able to select the best material for the big productions.

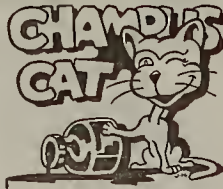

Amateur dramatic work, carried on as it is through the enthusiasm of the participants, has no need to be dull and clumsy. If the people concerned are really interested, and not just stage-struck, they will be glad to put the extra effort into the work that is required to make a really finished production, and they usually find that the gruelling training of the preparatory school is as much fun as the actual work on the play.

The final test of the success of the Winnipeg Theatre is the attitude of the public, and in this respect the Theatre is particularly successful. But here again enters the thorough training of the club. The advertising is handled by a well organized system among the members themselves. Special emphasis is placed on poster making, and the designers try to use their originality in creating posters that will be talked about. The large membership of the club itself insures an interest in the productions. Nothing is so discouraging to a cast as the sight of rows of empty seats, and even the stage crew and make-up people lose interest at the report of an empty house. For this reason the members are particularly anxious to advertise their work.

Perhaps these few facts will in some way explain why the Winnipeg Little Theatre receives such high praise from the Dominion Drama Festival adjudicators. T.M.H.

All men are born equal. It's it what they're equal to that counts.

Eaton Auditorium

On Saturday evening in Eaton Auditorium the London String Quartet bade farewell to a large and deeply appreciative audience. It is a tragedy due to present unsettled economic conditions that this fine group of artists should be forced to disband. They are not subsidized. Musical societies have greatly decreased in these depression days and competition has enormously increased with the organization of numerous other quartets.

We, who are fortunate in being able to hear this quartet in Toronto on frequent occasions, are in a position to enjoy the London String Quartet in our own unique way. Comparisons, odious as they may be, inevitably arise and in this particular instance favourable to (Continued on Page 4)

Let's Go Places

The novelty has begun to wear off in the French picture business and the audiences have begun to take a shape that the founders of the movement hope will be permanent, namely, a mixture of the French population, natives of Quebec and France living in this city, and people interested in learning to understand the spoken French language, students of the University and of high schools. The curious are beginning to lose heart, because they discover that while steady progress is made at first, they seem to be at a standstill for a time in interpreting the seemingly unintelligible jargon of the screen into the French words they have learned to read. However, this difficulty (Continued on Page 4)

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Sarnia, after six years of effort, are now the Dominion champions. The Oilers won from the Regina Rough Riders, won in fact by eight points—but the victory was anything but a formality as we suggested last week that it would be. In fact, the Riders, were without a doubt, the "best team ever to come out of the West". Had they possessed a kicker who could match punts with Bummer Sterling, the story might have been different. The kicking of the Sarnia ace, plus the gift touch, which the Riders presented to the Oilers, was about all which separated the two teams. At that the visitors made a better showing than any team from the plains has been able to do in the past.

When picking out stars for the big game Saturday, we would suggest that John Law be given honorary mention. John was the Blue-clad individual who rescued the ball from the bleachers every time Sterling hoisted one into that section, which was in fact three times. It looked on more than one occasion that the game would have to break up, but each time the "Cop" emerged victorious, to give the boys back their ball and let them go on with the game.

The battle which the intermediates produced in the first half of the day's twin bill, was one of the best of its kind to be witnessed here in some time. The play was for the most part devoid of fumbling and fast. As usual the work of Jackson was bordering on the sensational, while Miller and Powell also were much in evidence. Then there was the pass which Lynch took to put Varsity in position for their first touch, which was also a brilliant effort. The teams will clash again later in the week and it is a toss-up who will be the champions. They were just as close Saturday as the score would indicate.

The Blue and White hockey squad gave notice Saturday that they will be heard from before the season ends. Although beaten 6-1 they were anything but outclassed. They were short on condition, but other than that looked just as good as the Tigers. On the play the score should have been about 4-2, but a last period gamble for goals cost the visitors three, while they gained nothing.

The statement appearing in the Friday edition of the Globe, in which the editors discovered symptoms of dissension, is, as was proved Friday night, so much "filler". True, there was a difference of opinion regarding the playing of a single or double schedule, but it had nothing to do with the coaching position. In this regard, the players are solidly behind Stevens and such comments to the contrary are too ridiculous to be worthy of refutation.

Over at the Faculty of Dentistry there is quite a stir. The Dents are now in possession of the Mulock Cup. It is sixteen years since the Dents last saw the cup, and this is the second time they have won it. The Dents extracted a decision from the Meds in the finals Friday, and are just slightly puzzled as to the treatment the Mug should receive. They may have solved that Friday night.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

U.C. Seniors clinched their group title on Friday in one of the best games this year. The Vic Seniors went into the game determined to break down U.C.'s single game lead and they fought beautifully throughout. For the first half it was Vic's game quite definitely. U.C. came back after the half a different outfit and took the game with a seven point margin when the final whistle blew. It was an open game throughout with clean, fast passing. The ball handling by both teams was excellent. Both teams seemed to pack a direct attack at the basket, although U.C. was the best in this respect.

For U.C., Kay Brown, of course, starred on the forward line, although in the first half she was not on her real game, and she had a certain amount of hard luck with her shots all through. She didn't get as much support from her co-forwards as might have been expected, although in the last part of the second period Pat Pethick showed up better. The U.C. defence line lacks the height the Scarlet and Gold have but got along quite nicely in spite of it. Billy McGarry turned in a very neat offensive defensive performance and Jean Atkinson blocked a lot of Vic attempts to score.

Friday was a bad night for Vic, for their Juniors fell too—before St. Mike's. It was a close game with 18-12 for the final tally. This result means a tie for the group lead which will be decided by a sudden death game on Tuesday night. It was a close, exciting game, largely due to good checking on both sides. St. Mike's held a slight edge for the whole game, although both outfits played well.

All three Irish forwards were fairly equal. Peggy Bailey, on the defence, played stellar basketball and missed no chances to intercept the ball. Muriel Beaton was outstanding on the Scarlet and Gold forward line. The Vic squad has more the appearance of a basketball team, but St. Mike's gets results, of which one would not imagine them capable.

The Vic-St. Mike's baseball game scheduled for Friday will be played tonight at 6.30 in St. Alban's gym. These are the two winning teams, so it will be a battle for first place honours, later playoffs definitely deciding the title.

Vic deserve credit for being right in there from the start. In the first half Maisie Cowan played glorious basketball, but she exhausted herself before the end game and was not nearly as good as the game went on. Marion Bernhardt had a hard job handed her when she was asked to guard Kay Brown. She held Kay quite nicely in the first half but later on she tended to stand back and let Kay make valuable centre play unguarded. But Vic certainly had high honours as far as a gallery was concerned. If every team could inspire such enthusiasm these games would be much improved.

The basketball preliminaries are being brought to a close tonight. The schedule, as pointed out in Friday's Varsity has had to be slightly altered. The U.C. Jr.-St. Mike's game was run off on Friday. Tonight at six, the Vic Seniors play Meds and at seven, St. Hilda's and U.C. Jrs. clash. Watch for this column for information about the final games.

Professor Norwood also mentioned a book of which he is a co-author, entitled: "Information concerning careers for Canadian graduates in Arts". Although this book has not yet been published, copies of the text are available in the Registrar's office for anyone who wishes to consult it.

"I can see nothing anomalous about such a situation as that of the young man in Social Science with the B.A. in Mathematics," said Professor Sissons of Victoria, on the same subject. "There can be no harm for people taking Mathematics to have exact thinking training, which seems to be what mathematics affords. In fact a man whose mind is trained to work rapidly and steadily, who has good tastes and a fine sense of values, ought to be able to adjust himself to a variety of occupations. I notice, in this regard, that the new head of the Bank of Canada was particularly efficient in the Classics while at school."

tries, the farmers are discontented, the banks while urged by the government to lend are at the same time being told by the inspectors to be cautious, and the stock market regulations are unpopular because people still want to "get rich quick". The result has been a rapid loss of confidence in the administration, but Roosevelt continues to be a popular hero and the New Deal, if not an economical success, is at least a psychological one.

Mr. Melniss dismissed socialism and fascism as improbable solutions and claimed that there is no effective radicalism in the United States as yet. "Even if the N.R.A. succeeds," said Mr. Melniss, "the industries will gradually resume control and be freer than before. If it fails, there will be a new revival of rugged individualism, so that in any event capitalism will continue to be the prevailing power in the United States and there will be a new submergence of the forgotten man."

ject. Some young hopefuls had picked their subjects solely for time-table reasons.

Both Professors Chant and Ketchum were of the opinion that it would be more advisable to ask the students themselves what difficulties they have encountered, and what factors have entered into their choice of subjects. "In this way, real insight into the problem could be gained," asserted Professor Chant.

On reading this assignment The Varsity's Bureau Dater collapsed and was removed to the Western Hospital murmuring vaguely.

But down at McGill according to the Daily emanating therefrom, the complications that have ensued from the founding of the Date Bureau have necessitated the institution of a Lone-hearts column. Disillusionment, broken hearts, and bent egos have resulted from Dates that did not (execrable word) click. Fanny Fixit has undertaken the tremendous task of repairing the damaged souls and smoothing out the path of true love. What will mere brawn avail against a rehabilitated McGill team next year whose emotional problems have been straightened out, and who are fired by the flame of true love. "I could not love thee, dear, so much, loved I not honour more," we predict, will appear in answer to not less than 60 per cent of the letters received by Miss Fixit.

When approached on the subject of the establishing of a similar organization here (to be run by myself) we were seen to turn to a shade half way between livid and vermillion, and turn away to hide a horrid leer. No, dear loneliness, we positively will not guarantee to simplify your sex-life.

all concerned. Far from depreciating the Hart House Quartet we can more truly appreciate certain points of their playing—an unusually scholarly approach and rare finish and subtlety in performance of all that they play.

The London String Quartet make an excellently balanced ensemble. The virtuosity of the individual members is the less striking part of their work. The general impression is one of easy, unforced playing, generally fresh and unlaboured. The Quartet in D minor of Mozart responds to this treatment better than the Brahms Quartet which although capably played, could have taken a deeper and more studied treatment. Between the numbers two short compositions of Borodin and Bridge were offered and the programme was concluded with three encores, including the delicate Haydn Serenade, so recently played in Toronto.

It is with sincere regret that we bid farewell to the London String Quartet.

Massey Hall

Crowded to overflowing with school children, Massey Hall was on Friday the scene of the second Young People's Concert given by the Toronto Symphony. The orchestra played a suitable programme of Wagner, Dvorak, Brahms, but the novelty and feature of the occasion was the Vox Theremin played by Clara Rockmore. It is true that Miss Rockmore has approached this instrument as an artistic medium rather than a scientific novelty. She played a movement from Goldmark's violin concerto, and another from Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole. As an encore with Dr. MacMillan at the piano, Miss Rockmore played Saint-Saen's Swan.

The quality of tone which the Theremin produces ranges from 'cello to viola quality. Extremely rich in quality one is struck by a similarity to the human voice when humming. The pitch and quantity of the tone is controlled by the hands held at certain definite positions in relation to sensitive electrical controls.

Friday Afternoon Recital

Miss Margaret Parsons, pianist, and Mr. George Lambert, baritone, were the artists on the programme of English music given in Hart House music room last Friday evening.

Miss Parsons has been rated as one of Toronto's finest lady pianists by no less an authority than Dr. Ernest MacMillan, Dean of the Faculty of Music.

Her music spoke for itself. The first group, of an early period in English music, was simply and beautifully played. The "Barre" by Jones, being most effectively rendered, the tone quality being well controlled and the technique masterful.

Mr. Lambert quite aptly expressed the sentiments of folk song melodies, in the analogous words of Abraham Lincoln, "music of the people, by the people and for the people".

His first group represented various national folk songs within the Empire, featuring an arrangement of North American Indian music, by Dr. E. MacMillan.

Miss Parsons scored a decisive triumph with her final group of English moderns, winning her audience by her skillful renditions of modern compositions, portraying fine dramatic col-is met with in any branch of learning, and they tell us that after about eight pictures the jargon will resolve itself into a steady stream of language.

All of which is a preface to the information that without the help of the printed resume this correspondent would have been unaware of the score for most of the film Le Gendre de Monsieur Poirier at the Hollywood on Saturday. It is a very fine piece of acting, and the photography is up to the high standard set by the previous French pictures shown here, but so much of the story depends on the dialogue that it might have been better to have held it over until nearly the end of the series.

M. Poirier, a retired merchant, marries his daughter off to an impoverished nobleman, Gaston, as the first step in a climb to the peerage. Gaston married the girl in order to pay off his huge debts. Poirier, with a view to the practical, makes a bargain with the creditors that is satisfactory to them, that is, to pay the sum owing, plus six per cent. Gaston, with a false sense of pride, will either pay the ridiculous sum they ask or nothing; he will not stoop to bargain.

Antoinette, Gaston's wife, pays off the debt out of her own fortune in the way that Gaston wishes, which grieves her father very sorely, and he unctuously discloses his ambitions to the aristocracy. Gaston then scornfully suggests that his ancestors maintained their noble name in order that the bourgeois Poirier should become a baron, and Poirier in turn suggests that he built up his fortune, in order that Gaston, who had done nothing to uphold the family honour, should live in ease. Our sympathies, while opposed to Poirier's materialistic standards, certainly favour them to the degenerate and pseudo-romantic aristocracy of Gaston. It is that sort of a play; you must take sides.

Next week we shall have the privilege of seeing a very fantastic tunnel being dug under the Atlantic, which will probably be a little more self-explanatory than Poirier.

J.N.H.

"Daily duty begins at 6 a.m. . . . Love must end at midnight!" runs the catch-line for "The White Parade", and the story of the student nurses which is this week featured at the Imperial. "They're o.k. about the daily duty, and late leaves do end at twelve—but I don't know where they get this love angle!" Such is the report from our special operative among the "Probes" of the Class of '37, at Western Hospital.

We must confess that our operatives have been wrong before now, however, and a personal viewing of "The White Parade" proved this film to be highly entertaining throughout, and to contain a few scenes of exceptional merit.

The technical detail of the hospital sequences, while possibly not perfect, impresses the lay mind as a sincere attempt to portray the relentlessly difficult yet far from uninteresting existence of the nurses in training during their four years' course (slightly less in Canada and west of the Rockies).

Loretta Young plays exceedingly well the part of the young "Probationer" who tries to sympathize with her broken hearted room-mate, by creating an imaginary fiancé that she, too, has left behind. The most convenient gentleman for the purpose happens to be John Boles—or rather, a rotogravure photo of this young society polo player. When the story reaches the other nurses, they become suspicious and write to the playboy for confirmation or renunciation. Mr. Boles, however, plays up to the occasion and a real love affair develops. The story hinges on the young nurse's difficulty in deciding whether it is her duty to serve the many, or to devote her life to one man.

The dialogue is effervescent with girlish, yet not unsuccessful humour, the highlight of which is a bit of advice offered to another nurse, who has fallen in love with an interne—"You'd be a goose to marry that quack!"

Which is a better laugh than you will get from either Popeye or the other short, "Syncopeated City", although the latter featurette sways to some good tunes.

start. Their opponents kicked off, but the Schoolmen soon had the ball, took it with precision, passing down the field to the front door of the target, and while Charles Street, goalie, and backs were all trying frantically to clear, Self ripped in front right wing and blasted the ball into the empty goal. It took the Victorians some time to recover from their shaky start. Occasionally the bi-coloured booters hit their stride and almost scored when Rawlinson missed a set-up shot close in.

By the second half both teams were warmed to the game and travelled at high speed to play superlative soccer. Cochrane netted the first goal for the winners when he drilled one to the far corner on a beautiful pass from Taylor. By putting on pressure Victoria kept the play in the S.P.S. half of the field. Mitchell made two beautiful saves when he cleared a high long shot from Cochrane and a close wickedly-angled ball from Rawlinson. The winning tally was scored on a corner shot by Cochrane; Woodsworth, Victoria's brilliant half, headed his fine centre to Rawlinson, who made no mistake.

Eleven men started for the winners. The standouts on the losing team were Mitchell, Brawley and Kearney, and the forward line led by Self and Johnston. One more game will be played; goal aggregates will determine the new champions.

Victoria College: Goal, Dyke; fullbacks, Scott, Pratt; halfbacks, Woodsworth, Simpson, Cooper; forwards, Rawlinson, Rutherford, Grills, Taylor; subs, Macdonald and Campbell.

S.P.S.: Goal, Mitchell; fullbacks, Brawley, Kearney; halfbacks, Bowen, Tuke, Davey; forwards, Sharnandurov, Fraser, Self, Woods, Johnston; subs, Moore, Marks and Jaffe.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Berlin—It is rumoured that Hitler is mobilizing the Schutz Staffel to stand by before, during and after the Saar plebiscite. There is a widening rift between the Schutz Staffel and the regular army, as according to international agreement, only the regular soldiers may be armed.

Paris—The Turkish Foreign Minister, Tewfik Ruzhdi Bey, has been conferring with Foreign Minister Pierre Laval, regarding a Franco-Turkish mutual-assistance and security pact, according to well-informed quarters.

Toronto—Premier Hepburn has called a caucus for this morning for a free discussion. Industrial standards legislation will form one item of business.

Ottawa—Inspector Cuddy, at the Price Spreads Commission yesterday afternoon, stated that of 1,077 items purchased from chain stores, 549, or 50 per cent, were short weight. He also found that 32 per cent of pre-packaged parcels were under weight.

Toronto—Clifton Carlisle, Goodyear head, last night advocated the establishment of a coalition government and a revision of the British North America Act as a solution to Canada's difficulties.

S.C.M. ENDEAVOURS TO ASSIST NEEDY

Old Clothing Solicited from Student Body for Distribution

ANYTHING APPRECIATED

The Student Christian Movement in the University of Toronto is organizing a drive to collect old clothes to aid the 4000 needy families in Toronto. All these cases have been carefully investigated and all are genuine cases of need. The clothes will be collected by the S.C.M. and handed over to the Neighbourhood Workers' Association for distribution.

All kinds of clothing—suits, overcoats, shoes, underwear, sweaters, wind breakers, etc., are needed and also material which can be used for making quilts. Although clothes in good condition are needed, partly worn clothing can be re-made and the extra material used. At the central office, on Wellesley St., on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, there are large rooms where women go every day to remodel clothing and make quilts from the materials sent in according to the instructions supplied to them. For this work the women are paid two dollars per day. This clothing is distributed to other needy people by the Association. For the remainder of the week the women are given materials and instructions for making clothes for themselves and their children.

This drive, organized by the men's units of the S.C.M., is mainly an effort to collect men's clothes, and will be held during the week, Monday, Dec. 3rd to Friday, Dec. 7th.

Notices re the drive will be posted in each faculty and residence in the near future and various receiving stations will be established. Further information may be obtained from the S.C.M. office, Hart House, M.I. 9727, and contributions may be left there at any time.

It is sincerely hoped the students will respond generously to this appeal and make an effort to help the Neighbourhood Workers' Association reach their objective.

Miss Spence One of the First Women Teaching in Collegiates

FINOS LIFE TOO BRIEF

"Varsity" Vainly Fought the Invasion of College by Co-eds

Miss Nellie Spence, who was on the staff of Parkdale Collegiate for thirty-eight years, is one of the oldest graduates of the University. She is now retired, but far from slipping into lethargic old age, this vivacious and energetic woman takes part in activities with a vigour which belies her years.

In an interview on Saturday afternoon, Miss Spence told in graphic terms the story of the struggle to obtain admission of women to the University. It was an uphill fight. Dr. Wilson, president of the University at that time, was against their admission and even The Varsity, then a weekly literary effort, editorially fought the issue. Bitter letters were printed in it and for some time feeling ran high. Although many were in favour, it was Miss Eliza Baumer who at last forced the Lieutenant-Governor to issue an order-in-council admitting women to lectures.

"It was an exciting time," said Miss Spence, "and while a woman of a different type might have set the cause back some years, Miss Baumer's sweetness and modesty endeared her to all who knew her and at her first lecture she received a tremendous ovation."

Although official recognition had been granted, the general public still believed "the woman's place was in the home" and it required women of the (Continued on Page 4)

ALFORD SPEAKER ON MEDIEVAL ART

Christianity Produced Symbolic and Unnatural Works

GREEK INFLUENCE EVIDENT

"Christianity, being essentially the religion of the oppressed, whose chief interest was not this world but the next, because of its implicit denial of natural beauty, resulted in an unnatural and symbolic art," Professor John Alford said in a lecture on Medieval Art at the Museum yesterday.

"The only saving grace of the art of this period resulted from its absorption of a great deal of the ritual and ceremony of the Near East when the seat of the Roman Empire moved from Rome to Byzantium." What saved this art from symbolic crudity was the influence of the Greek sense of beauty. It was characterized by magnificent harmony of line, colour and space, suggestive of cosmic order.

Western Europe was at this time over-run by German barbarians, and darkness descended on art for 300 years. In the 11th century the Germans settled down and art became a profession. The outcome was the development of Romanesque art, the form of which was characterized by a fusion of the Byzantine tradition of interior quietude with the barbarian feeling of strength. The culture of this time was essentially monastic, it being ascetic and unnatural.

ECONOMIST ADDRESSES MACDONALD-CARTIER CLUB

Professor Slichter Member of Advisory Employment Board

Professor Sumner H. Slichter, of the Department of Business Economics of Harvard University, will address the Macdonald-Cartier Club tonight at 7.20 in the Music Room of Hart House. Professor Slichter is an economist and at present is a member of the advisory board on employment and a neutral member of the New England regional labour board. He is also the author of several texts, including "Modern Economic Society" published in 1931 and of "Towards Stability" which will be published early next month.

The executive of the club feels that all students interested in economics will be interested in hearing this distinguished speaker, and have thrown the meeting open to all men students. There will be a dinner for members of the club only preceding the meeting. As Professor Slichter must leave for Chicago immediately after his speech, the doors will be closed at 7.30 sharp, ten minutes after the opening of the meeting.

PURSE SNATCHER AGAIN AT WORK

Young Woman Attacked on Path South of Knox College

CULPRIT ESCAPEO

Another case of purse snatching took place at quarter to eight last night when Miss Evelyn Peceover of 24 Madison Ave., was attacked at she was going through the passage from the campus to St. George Street to the south of Knox College.

The young woman, who is not in the habit of taking this route, was suddenly accosted by a strange man who tried to muffle her shouts while he grabbed for her purse. The University police and students from Knox, as soon as they heard her shouts, set out after the thug, who ran towards Convocation Hall and S.P.S. He was headed off north of the Physics Building and doubled back through a lane to St. George Street. With his long start the culprit escaped down the street.

In the darkness of the passage and through her surprise Miss Peceover did not get a good view of the man. Those who gave chase describe her assailant (Continued on Page 4)

Students Follow Bouncing Ball Ping Pong Table Now in Hall

When rugby and soccer are over, when it is too cold to romp about outside, what do the sturdy athletes of University College turn to? Ping Pong. A brand new table was installed in the junior common room and now the athletically inclined students follow the bouncing ball with a will and a way.

We have our own ideas as to why the table was installed. Frederick J. Perry, the world's premier tennis player, was the world champion at ping pong not so long ago. Perhaps certain members of the Lit executive hope to improve their game during the winter season.

Now that the ping pong games are in full swing the radio is reported to be incessantly playing "After the ball" in order to keep up with the latest fads.

Only Thirteen Would Support Government in Every War

FORESEE UNIVERSAL PEACE

Invasion of Canada Strongest Incentive to Take Up Arms

A majority of those who answered the questionnaire which The Varsity published last week signified their intention of refusing to fight in any war. From a University registration of over six thousand, only two hundred answers were received. Of these 99 gave the assurance that they would not support the government in any war, 88 said they would support the government in any way which they believed justifiable and only 13 would support the government in any war which the Canadian government declared. The most popular reason for considering war justifiable is the invasion of Canada, and secondly when the League of Nations requests assistance. Seventy-five people checked the question that war is justifiable when Canada is invaded whereas 97 answered that war is not justifiable under any circumstances. Only two people were prepared to support any war which Great Britain declared, or if the United States were invaded. The 13 who would support the government in any war almost unanimously considered any of the listed reasons as justifying war.

Of the 200 answers, 53 said that there would always be wars, 27 were not sure and 112 felt that there would not always be wars.

The 13 who would support any war would all enlist voluntarily, whereas, of those 99 who would not support any war the most popular action to discontinue war is to hold peaceful protest meetings or to support a general strike and many of them would refuse military service. (Continued on Page 4)

New Policy of One Bigger Better Show Proves Successful

The plan being introduced at this year's edition of the University College Follies, of producing one review with the cream of U.C.'s histrionic talent instead of four mediocre year skits, has met with popular approval throughout the college, if the subscription lists are to be believed. The ticket allotment has been fully subscribed, and additional tickets will be sold only if those already signed for are not claimants. (Continued on Page 4)

The rumour that a University holiday would be declared this Thursday in order to celebrate the marriage of the Duke of Kent was denied officially yesterday from the office of the President in Simcoe Hall.

TOPICAL QUESTION DEBATE SUBJECT

Big Business Problems Are to be Discussed at Hart House

H. H. STEVENS SPEAKER

The Honorable H. H. Stevens, who as a member of the commission inquiring into mass buying, is probably one of the best informed persons on that subject, will be the guest speaker at the third Hart House debate to be held tomorrow. The subject under discussion will be "Resolved that Big Business is a curse when actuated solely by the profit motive."

Mr. S. F. Rae, of University College, will uphold the motion, and Mr. J. S. Woods of Trinity will oppose it. The material for the affirmative will be drawn from the investigations carried on at Ottawa under the guidance of Mr. Stevens. The guest speaker, it is expected, will support Mr. Rae on the affirmative side of the question.

The line that the negative will take will probably be that the results of the recent probes concerned only a part of what is known as Big Business and that to condemn the whole for the evils of a part is unfair. Such organizations as the chartered banks, large insurance companies and other institutions are vital to the functioning of the present day industrial economy and that the benefits from their outwrench (Continued on Page 4)

GENERALLY APPROVE NEW EDITORIAL PAGE

Innovations Are Making "The Varsity" More Interesting

COMMENT INVITED

The remodelled editorial page of The Varsity is a distinct improvement over that used in the past is the opinion of the majority of the undergraduates of the University as evidenced by statements made yesterday to The Varsity.

G. Henry Leslie, I.U.C., said that the new lay-out made the page considerably easier to read and in his opinion the general appearance of the page was much improved.

"The idea is very good, and should help to create more interest in the editorial page," stated J. Scheffer, II.U.C. The more artistic effect appealed to Miss Rivka Harnick, I.U.C., who also commented favourably on the large, easily read type used in yesterday's edition.

A. H. Jared, Wycliffe, stated that this new venture was only one of the many innovations that were making this year's Varsity the most interesting for several terms.

"The two-column lay-out presents a rather formidable appearing page," said W. Fowler, III.U.C. "but I think that if the topics are short and timely, the new style will be very successful." Jack Blackhall, III St. Michael's, believed that anything different would be an improvement on a section which he said "couldn't be worse."

The opinion of many was summed up by R. A. Sharpe, I.U.C., who re- (Continued on Page 4)

TRAINING COURSE CREATES INTEREST IN RURAL STUDY

Young Men Taught to Organize Study Groups for Local Communities

ALL CLASSES TO BENEFIT

Economic Conditions, History, Correct Expression, Form Study Topics

Yesterday in the Economics Building a two week course of training for young men from rural communities was inaugurated by the department of University Extension. The aim of this series will be to provide these young men with the material to organize study groups in their own localities as nuclei for the work in the rural extension course.

During the slack season on the farm those interested in the present economic conditions, in the social and industrial history, or merely in the ways and means of expressing themselves fluently and correctly, will be invited to spend from one to three months at the local high school.

In a room equipped with tables, chairs, books and maps, lectures will be given each day by leading men of the community, including the lawyer, doctor, librarian and other public spirited individuals who, under the supervision of the high school principal have formed a committee for this purpose. The class will be a self governing body and the tutors will advise, correct mistakes, and lead the way.

For the older men and women desiring this education who are employed in shops or on the farm during the day, the committee in charge plans to hold discussion groups in the homes during the evening. Subjects similar to those taught during the day will be discussed, and Mr. Dunlop hopes that each month a radio talk may be given to keep the various groups scattered over Ontario at an equal mark.

ALCOHOL EXPLOSION IGNITES LABORATORY

Flames Quenched Before the Arrival of Fire Department

APPARATUS DESTROYED

A fire caused by a premature explosion of alcohol as it was being emptied into a still, broke out in a sixty foot pit in the Connaught Laboratory about nine o'clock yesterday morning.

Many students, attracted by the sight of so many fire reels, arrived in time to see brown smoke pouring from the building. What they thought was smoke was nothing more than the foam caused by the chemical reactions of the Foamite Fire Extinguishers used by the Laboratory employees who were successful in confining the blaze to the deep pit. The firemen who were all prepared in case the large quantity of alcohol should ignite, were not needed, as the blaze was extinguished by the timely actions of the employees before the flames had a chance to spread.

The damage to the building was practically negligible but the loss will be quite heavy when the Laboratory comes to replace the electrical apparatus destroyed by the fire.

The last call the fire department had to the University, with the exception of the minor conflagration on the evening of the memorable bad race, was one Sunday about two years ago when a slight fire also caused by a premature explosion broke out in the Mining Building.

Banking Facilities

† Students who must pay fees, buy books and clothing, and spend money in various other ways, must have that money, in most cases, in "Hard Cash". A relatively small number have a source of cash income, the majority find themselves confronted with the difficulty of converting the cheques they receive from home, from their part time employer, or from their personal savings, into the necessary currency.

Those who are enrolled in courses that allow a certain amount of leisure time during banking hours may solve the problem by opening an account with one of the banks located some ten minutes' walk from the University, East, West, or North, and using these facilities for converting the cheques into usable cash. To the student, however, who finds that lectures and laboratory work occupy his time from nine o'clock until five, with a scant hour for dinner, each day of the week, the matter is not so readily solved. He has the choice of foregoing the pleasure of dining to make a hurried trip to the bank, or foregoing the trip to the bank, in which latter case, he must also dispense with the meal, due to a lack of available capital.

Some kind providence has placed a much appreciated post-office at the disposal of the students in Simcoe Hall. Men students may purchase a variety of needs at the Tuck Shop in Hart House, and a large number avail themselves of the facilities afforded by the barber shop. The University Press, and such institutions as the Engineering Society's store, make the purchase of books and equipment an easy matter, but there is no provision, on the campus, for obtaining that most important item, money.

A suggestion has been made that the Bursar's office cash cheques for students. Those who have waited in line for a considerable time for the scant pleasure of paying fees will realize the impracticability of this scheme. A bank where students could deposit their money, cash their cheques, and transfer the inevitable funds to the University, would be a boon to out of town students in particular, and to all members of the student body and Faculty as well. The number of students and others that would make use of the bank, and deposit their money in its care, would certainly justify the expenditure involved.

Ready cash is something that every student finds a frequent need for. Is there not some more convenient way in which it may be obtained?

Get in Line

Architecturally, Hart House is complete in the minutest details. At the time of its erection, provision was made for the accommodation of men students in the best and most convenient manner, and it stands as a memorial of the unsparing efforts of its designer.

On the southern side of the building there are two main entrances, one of which is used a great deal, the other slightly. Foreseeing the daily influx of students, especially during that time when Great Hall presents a gastronomic as well as an architectural appeal, the designer provided two capacious portals, and in each portal, two doorways. Of these, only one entrance is used to any great extent, and this one, except on the rarest of occasions, has one door, or fifty percent of its capacity, securely locked.

The result—a line up on both sides of the opening, and a continuous game of "Watch your Chance". Undoubtedly, this is not provided for in the annual fee that is paid by all male undergraduates and there seems to be no apparent reason for its continuance. Life is short enough as it is, without the additional expenditure of valuable time lining up before Hart House, in veritable "Soup Kitchen" style.

The S.C.M. Drive

The annual drive by the Toronto branch of the Student Christian Movement will take place next week, when an effort will be made to gather together a supply of men's clothing for distribution among the needy in this city. The S.C.M. is co-operating with the Neighborhood Workers Association, and will turn over all clothes which they collect to the Neighborhood Workers in order to be sure that there is no duplication, and that their benefit will be spread over as many people as possible.

The appeal is one which is made in such a good cause that it will reach the hearts of all thinking undergraduates. It is sincerely hoped that the student body will respond generously to this appeal, and make an effort to help the Neighborhood Workers' Association reach its objective.

Making History

History was made at the University of Toronto last night, when a group of more than twenty students from the Department of Germanics at McGill University came to Hart House Theatre to produce the German comedy "Die Deutschen Kleinstädter", by Kotzebue. This is the first time on record when a student group has come to Toronto from another university to present a dramatic programme, but, we hope, not the last time.

We understand that the German Club at this university has been invited to return the visit next year, producing some play in German for a McGill audience. Such exchanges are bound to have a good effect at both universities, stimulating an interest in German, and in German dramatic art. It is an activity which we believe should be encouraged.

SO THIS IS TORONTO

The following is an article contributed by M.M., an exchange student from Toronto at present attending the University of Alberta, and published recently in the student paper there.

The mere mention of Toronto in the fall calls to my mind a whirl of fluttering blue and white ribbons, Stadium Magazines, red blankets, umbrellas and peanuts—for the Saturday afternoon of a home game, whether sunny, rainy or snowy—finds the campus in the throes of rugby madness. A ticket for the Varsity cheering section (open bleachers at that) is worth anything from your best hat up. There are times, however, when a cold trickle of rain down the back of one's neck makes the covered grandstand—the stronghold of ordinary citizens—look decidedly inviting. Everybody goes—and even when the snow is falling so heavily that it is absolutely impossible to see across the grid, everyone cheers lustily and hoarsely, thoroughly convinced that something must be happening on the field.

Nine-tenths of the thrill of a game comes from being one of the hilarious, insane rovers for the home team. Rain may fall in torrents, dye may stream from innocent looking hats and coats may be pressed into permanent creases, but still the energetic cheer leaders—splendid in white (?)—continue to cheer and wave their arms, finishing each yell with a hand spring in the mud.

Nor is the Varsity band to be overlooked! Last year they were very swish—sporting new blue and white uniforms—with capes, no less! And they have the most priceless, plump little bandmaster! At half-time they ably amuse the noisy mob with college songs. After marching around the grid and performing intricate manoeuvres, they halt, in formation, and there before wondering eyes are the initials of the university of the visiting team. A few brisk moves, and this time U. of T. With what gusto is the Varsity song sung!

Each game in itself is an event of a lifetime. Till last fall my interest in rugby had been practically nil, but by half-time at the first game there was nothing I wanted to know quite as much as the meaning of "yards", "first down", "offside" and all. In a surprisingly short time the game changed from a meaningless scramble to a real battle where superior strength, speed and technique won the day. Rugby has a new meaning.

We were exceptionally fortunate last year in having the final game played in Toronto—after Varsity and Queen's had tied for first place in the Intercollegiate League. It was a splendid game, genuinely interesting and gloriously exciting.

The tea dances which often follow the big rugby games are jolly affairs, perfect endings for such fall afternoons. Conversation never lags, for there is always the game to discuss. And who could think of mentioning anything else?

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

The H.C. Players' Guild

This week the Guild presents the last act of "Nine Till Six", by Philip and Aimee Stuart, under the direction of Dorothy Walker. The cast, which is entirely female, is made up with one exception of new-comers to the Guild stage. The leading part, that of an elderly woman, proprietress of a millinery and dress-making establishment, will be taken by Margaret Howe. Her daughter Clare will be played by Aileen O'Brien.

Hart House Theatre

The University of Toronto German Club is to be congratulated on the successful manner in which they presented the German Department of McGill University in a play last night at Hart House Theatre. The play was August von Kotzebue's "Die Deutschen Kleinstädter" and the cast was made up of members of the faculty of German and Moderns students of McGill.

A discussion of the play and the players is unnecessary. The play is interesting if one of Kotzebue's lesser works and the cast ranged from very good to rather poor.

The impressive point of the whole presentation is the fact that a good audience turned out, and thereby showed that the idea of an interchange of cultural activities among the numerous large universities is an opportunity which we cannot afford to neglect.

Queen's, Western, McGill and Toronto each have something to offer in cultural fields as well as in sport fields and among students one ought to engender about as much enthusiasm as the other.

To the Department of Germanics of McGill University we offer thanks, and we do appreciate their effort. To the University of Toronto German Club and those few who worked most industriously to ensure the success of the production in German here, we congratulate them on their foresight and efficiency and we hope other organizations on the campus will follow their splendid example.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Many letters have been received regarding the questionnaire published in The Varsity recently, on the student reaction to war. The following letter is published in order to terminate the discussion which has arisen in the correspondence column.

PARDON ME, MR. COLBORNE
To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:
In reference to Mr. J. B. Colborne's letter in Wednesday's issue, I would like to ask him, or anyone who agrees with him, a few questions.

He says, "As long as there is human nature there will necessarily be wars." Why? He might as well have said that as long as there is human nature in Canada there will be no law and order. If a country like Canada, or the United States, where the population is even more cosmopolitan, can attain a peaceful organized state, why cannot the whole world, the countries of which are its individual members, as the persons in Canada are its members?

Mr. Colborne states that every Canadian would be bound to help the United States if she were invaded, because of the threat against Canada. Yet he asserts that he would not help the United States if she declared war. But if she declared war and lost would we not be just as exposed as if she had been invaded? Frankly I cannot see the difference.

War is a question on which everyone should do a great deal of thinking and try to arrive at definite conclusions. Everyone admires a person who will stand by his convictions. Now surely he would be taking a weak and unpatriotic stand who would say that he would "serve only where the alternative is imprisonment". Let us either have the determination to be the first

By M. A. F.

At 6 o'clock this evening at the O.C.E. gym St. Mike's met for the championship in a playoff game for the championship in their basketball group. The winner of this contest plays St. Hilda's in two semi-final matches, the first on Thursday, November 29 at 7.30 at O.C.E., the second one on Saturday, December 1 at 6 p.m., also at O.C.E. U.C. drew a bye into the finals. There is to be 10 cents admission charged for these games, but it will be money well spent.

The interfaculty basketball finals will be played at Hart House as usual. There are to be two final games—on Tuesday, December 4 and Thursday, December 6, both at 7.30. In these final bouts, as well as in the semi-finals, points are to count on the score.

Vic has secured first place in the basketball preliminaries with St. Mike's in the second berth. The playoffs will follow shortly; watch this column for full details.

Vic defeated the St. Mike's nine by 25-13 last night in a ragged type of ball game, the outstanding feature of which was a great number of errors. Vic had it definitely in the bag except for one inning in which they were tagging the Irish. It was during the second inning that Vic's lead took the nose-dive but luckily for them, they did not give way altogether. Again Gretta Maxwell and Jean Blundell, Scarlet and Gold battery, turned in sterling performances. They might well have expected more support from their fellow players.

St. Hilda's defeated U.C. Juniors last night but did not cover themselves with glory by any means. The Juniors were playing the best game they have put up during the entire series and held the Blue and Grey squad down to a 14 point lead. In view of the colossal wins the Saints have been chalked up, this is not the best omen with which to enter the semi-finals. Neither side displayed particularly high calibre basketball. For the Saints Ellen Wilson turned in a fair defence game and Mary McDonald and Mary Carre did creditable offensive work.

The Saints went off on one spree in which they piled up 12 points in very short order, securing a comfortable lead, but the game was tighter than the final tally would indicate. Eugene Mav and Ruth Thomas were the high scorers on the losing outfit. Eugene was the fastest player on the floor, but her shots went wild, which wrecked U.C.'s chances of coming closer to their opponents' lead.

Meds played their final game last night and once more fell before the finished Vic Senior basketballers, meeting with a 26-8 defeat. Vic's plays worked smoothly right down the floor and left Meds quite helpless. It was a fairly easy going game; neither side over-taxed itself. Meds put up the best game yet, and Jean Lang did some nice scoring under Vic's excellent heavy checking. Meds' lack of training was quite evident in their free throws and cost them a number of points. Maisie Cowan repeated her stellar performance of Friday night, although it was not quite so brilliant under weaker competition.

To be a good patriot, a man must consider his countrymen as God's creatures, and himself as accountable for his acting toward them.

JUNIORS VICTORS
IN INITIAL GAMEVarsity Juniors and Dukes Lack Co-operation in TeamsBACKCHECKING EXCELLENT

Varsity juniors made their debut at the Maple Leaf Gardens last night in the S.P.A. series and chalked up their initial victory of the current campaign by defeating Toronto Dukes 3-2. The Blues deserved the win, not because they were very good, but because the Dukes were not so good.

The students should have won last night's game by a wider margin as both of the Duke counters were registered while a Varsity player was sojourning with the time-keepers.

The Varsity forwards displayed quite a penchant for back-checking but were woefully weak on combination. The defence did not function any too well, and had it not been for the back-checking of the forwards, a different version of the night's proceedings would have resulted.

The team has had only a few practices to date, and it is possible that they might yet develop into a formidable squad. This year's entry is composed almost entirely of new players, only two of last year's squad appearing on the roster. The team is being ably coached by Frank Sullivan, but from present indications the coach will have a difficult proposition on his hands if he hopes to have his charges figure in the playoffs.

Varsity: Goal, McGee, G. Campbell; defence, O'Leary, Sissons; forwards, Morrison, Walkey, Willmot; subs, Sanson, Gregory, Murray, K. Campbell, Fremes, Shultis, Leslie, Botterell, White.

Dukes: Goal, Mortimer; defence, Perry, Greenburg; forwards, Hotrum, Grant, Tomm; subs, Mitchell, Mader, Surudle, Bradley, Buchanan, Maxwell, Rennie, Davidson, Taylor.

VARSAITY SENIORS PLAY
FIRST HOME GAMESenior Hockey Squad Play
Toronto in O.H.A.
Fixture

Tonight the Varsity senior hockey squad took on the all-star Toronto at Varsity Arena in their second O.H.A. fixture. The Blues dropped the opener in the Mountain City on Friday when a last period gamble gave the Bengals three goals and a 6-1 victory.

The Varsity pucksters will be making their first appearance at the local arena, and will be anxious to start the season off with a win. The work of the Port Colborne Sailors in holding the Toronto to a draw would indicate that this is not an impossibility and augurs well for tonight's game.

Warren Stevens is fortunate in having good material to work with this season and once the boys get in condition, well, anything may happen. The students are in the game from start to finish and give everything they have, win, lose or draw.

The Toronto have an all star team consisting of many players who turned out for professional hockey but decided to remain amateur for another season. Andy Goldie, who played for Toronto last year, will guard the net while Bowman, Hodges, McAlpine will alternate on defence. Coach Joe Pri-mau is well set for forwards with Mann, Acheson, Grivel, Parsons and others of equal ability ready to take the ice.

TRINITY TRIUMPHS OVER DEPLETED DENTS

Trinity defeated Dents 12-3 in a scheduled boxa fixture in the big gym at Hart House yesterday afternoon. Dents took the floor with only four players, with the result that all the Trinity subs saw action under Dents' colours at some time during the game.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

Tonight Varsity hockey enthusiasts will get their first opportunity to see the Blue senior team in action when they clash with the newly organized Toronto at Varsity Arena. The college entry in the O.H.A. Senior series isn't optimistic enough to dream of a title but there are a few other teams that hope, not only for the group title but they have their hearts set on the 1936 Olympiad at Berlin. The all-star collection that bears the name of our fair city is no exception in that they have been gathered together for this sole purpose or we miss our guess. Varsity finished the season last year in a way that annoyed some of the playoff aspirants to a point of intense heat. Ever hear of Gene Fraser's roar? Well, the Blue pucksters are liable to have more to say this year.

Ticket 14 of the Students' book will be accepted at the gate.

Last night Frank Sullivan's Varsity junior hockey squad ckd out a close 3-2 victory over Toronto Dukes at the Carlton Street citadel in an S.P.A. fixture. The team looked anything but impressive but since there are only two of last year's veterans left and the rookies have only practiced together for a week we hope for the best. St. Mike's and Toronto Canoe Club both have strong clubs this year and present indications are that they will be in the same group as Varsity, so the students had better sharpen up or they will find themselves on the cellar steps. Our correspondent says the reason they won last night was not because they were very good, but because the Dukes were very bad.

This year Varsity's Senior "B" squad is entered in the Major T.H.L. along with Royal York, Hinde-Dausch, Royal Canadians, Bell Telephone and Mimico. Plenty of good material is on hand since the senior club will carry around twenty players, and any one of these can play senior or senior "B" at any time; without any strings attached as in rugby. A coach has not been appointed yet as the boys have all been under the wing of Warren Stevens but it won't be long now since their first game is on Wednesday night against the Royal Canadians at the Varsity Arena.

After remaining on the shelves of Knox College for the past six years, the Arts trophy cup, emblematic of interfaculty soccer supremacy will take up residence in the little red school house by virtue of the Engineers' spectacular win yesterday. Trailing by one goal S.P.S. came back strong to win the second game and round 4-3 over Victoria. The Engineers certainly upset the dope when they downed the Scarlet and Gold, but they deserved the win, playing heads-up ball to take the match 3-1.

ARTS SOCCER CUPKnox Are Finally Defeated
After Six Years'
Supremacy

By juggling their lineup, School of Practical Science succeeded in turning the tables on Victoria in the final game for the Arts Cup, emblematic of soccer supremacy within the University and overcame a two-goal disadvantage to win their first championship since 1921, by the score of 4-3 on the round. This year marks the end of Knox's string of consecutive victories in the soccer world and although halted at six the smallest College on the campus, has set a new record in inter-faculty sport of which it can be justly proud.

The new champions were well worth their victory in one of the fastest games that has been played on the front campus in years. The spectators were kept continually on their toes as the play ranged from one end to the other and they witnessed a great comeback as School ran in three fast goals in the second half.

The Blue and Yellow lads had a distinct edge in the first half and only the excellence defense of Scott, Pratt and Dykes kept them from obtaining the equalizer. Victoria went two goals in the lead on the round when Taylor beat Mitchell on a fast shot, at the beginning of the second half. The play ranged evenly between the two teams for the rest of the game, but School seemed to find their shooting eye again as Shamandurov, then Johnson, scored to tie the score, and then Woods on a pass from Self gave the Engineers the lead and championship in the last few minutes of play.

School of Practical Science: Goal, Mitchell; fullbacks, Fraser and Brau-ley; halfbacks, Bowen, Tuke and Dav-ey; forwards, Woods, Johnston, Shamandurov, Jaffe, Self, Kearney, Marks and Self.

Victoria College: Goal, Dyke; fullbacks, Scott and Pratt; halfbacks, Woodsworth, Simpson and Cooper; forwards, Cochrane, Rawlinson, Ruth-erford, Grills and Taylor; subs, Mac-donald and Campbell.

Referee: Jimmie Macpherson.

SMOOTH PLAY WINS GAME FOR VICTORIA

A well played game in the inter-faculty series at O.C.E. took place last night between Vic Juniors and Meds, despite a score of 26 to 8 in favour of Vic.

The entire game ran along smoothly with Meds putting up a much better front than the last time they met Vic. Bessie Stern and Jean Lang played a steady game for Meds, while Mary Albertson played a fine game as check. Vic's defence, B. Barton, M. Bernhardt, H. Brown, played stellar basketball, checking Meds closely. R. Leavens and M. Cowan, forwards, ran up most of the score for their team with great ease.

SENIOR MEDS LEAD IN VOLLEYBALL GROUP

Defeat Emmanuel "A" Team in Well Matched Play

Sr. Meds took over the leadership of their group by defeating Emmanuel "A" in an interfaculty volleyball game yesterday afternoon.

The score in yesterday's game was 15-12, 14-16, 11-2, which indicates how well matched the two teams were. Meds were within one point of victory in the second game, but Emmanuel staged a rally and scored five points in a row to finish on top by 16-14. In spite of the fact that they played most of the game with but five men, Meds came on to take the final game in decisive fashion.

Meds: Himel, Saunders, Simon, Sher, Scott, Gold.

same courageous spirit as Miss Baumer to carry on in the face of public opinion. Among the pioneers who followed her was Miss Spence. Graduated from the University in 1887 she went directly to Parkdale Collegiate, where she taught until her retirement a few years ago. At the time she began her career, women teachers with college educations were almost unknown, although women had been teaching separate girls' classes in high schools for some time.

Since her retirement, this remarkable woman has taken up swimming at Margaret Eaton School and although "I haven't as yet been able to master the breathing in the crawl, yet I am quite proud of the fact that I can swim on my back!" she said.

Not content with her knowledge of languages, she has been "brushing up" on her French, and has learned Italian as well as German at the University Extension courses.

"I have never been able to understand how any person could wonder how to put in the time," declared Miss Spence, "there is so much to accomplish in one short lifetime, that one scarcely knows where to begin!"

Bearded One Brandishes Brush Beasties For Bashful Biologist

Dear Jinny—

Well, here we are again, though of course you're not since you've graduated and everything, and I really did mean to write before, but between doing one thing and then doing it again the next night, I simply haven't had a minute. But as it's getting near examination time I remembered I hadn't answered your last letter, so could you possibly lend me your biology notes? This year I didn't think I'd take biology I mean, I don't intend to get married, and then there are all the drawings too. But listen to this, my dear, since you left, the college is just insect-ridden with art students painting in unlikely places. Well, one day I was walking along to Vic, just walking along, thinking how pretty the park looked with all the pigeons and things making love in the simply gorgeous sunshine, when suddenly I saw a mon who was painting. Jinny, he had the most romantic long black hair, AND A REAL HONEST-TO-GOODNESS BEARD! (though I found out later when it came off—the dye I mean—that he had to make it a little darker because it has a tendency to verge on the Titan).

Well, of course there was nothing for me to do but stumble over a pigeon or two and strain my ankle, and so he helped me home. I was wearing my new skirt with the slit, which really gives a very décolleté effect, and it must have been effective, because on the way home when I told him all about how very difficult I found it to draw the things in Biology and so I didn't know whether to take it or not, he told me how art is everything and anyone can draw frogs with his assistance. Well, Jinny, we've been everywhere and his beard creates such a sensation at class parties! Though at the Masquerade, that horrible Joab tried to pull it off because it dribbled in the punch, (which was when I found out about the dye). But though he's very helpful, artistically speaking, Biology being at nine I haven't gotten any notes somehow. So could you pretty-please?

Well, Jinny, I'd better close now because we're going to watch the stars at Casa Loma which is a really heavenly artistic way to spend an evening, especially with hot doughnuts at midnight from the bread factory at the foot of the hill. I'll take good care of the notes.

Your Loving

to spring to arms to support our country (if we believe the particular case is justified) or refuse absolutely to fight if we believe that in that way we can best serve Canada's interests.

I agree with Mr. Colborne's impression that many students will stand by their decisions and refuse to be swayed by the glamour of a "patriotic" recruiting campaign. It would take far more courage to refuse to enlist when friends and our own emotions were calling us to military action, and we could bolster up our determination by thinking of the armament makers and their control over the governments of many of the most powerful countries in the world!

tary service but be prepared to render humanitarian service. Of those who would support a war if the war was justified, the general opinion was that the fray would receive the support in proportion to the definiteness of the justifiability.

None of the few who would support any war the government may declare, would have military organizations abolished but they did signify some faith in a World Court, the League of Nations and an International Police Force. Any of the listed suggestions appealed to those who disapproved of war or who would only support justifiable wars. Most questionnaires carried suggestions for furthering the purpose of peace. Only a few of these suggestions were facetious and they ranged from a profound faith in Christianity to complicated schemes of economic adjustment. The most bitter suggestion and one which strikes home in its irony is that of a student who advises curtly "a war to end war".

"Start in on a small paper. Small-town experience is comprehensive," was the advice given by Bride Broder to the University Women's Press Club at the Women's Union yesterday afternoon. "Young, enthusiastic journalists are needed for small papers to give them new blood. Such writers could mould the countryside as they wished."

Bride Broder further advised those interested in journalism to improve their vocabulary by reading continually in the Authorized Version of the Bible, especially the Old Testament, as it is an unexcelled model of terseness, picturesqueness, poetry and rhythm.

"Never think of journalism as a commercial matter. It ruins success. Never get a swelled head. No matter how

DINNER TO COMMEMORATE ADVENT OF CO-EDUCATION

Just fifty years ago women first won the right of admission to the University. That such an important event should not be allowed to pass uncommemorated is the feeling of the present undergraduate women. As a result a Jubilee Dinner is being held at the Women's Union this Friday, sponsored by the Women's Undergraduate Association. Miss Nellie Spence, one of the oldest living graduates of the University, will be the guest speaker. Her subject will be the early days and the trials and tribulations faced by women at that time. Such a topic should be of great interest to those who are now benefiting from the labours of those first enterprising pioneers.

PLAN CONFERENCE ON SOCIAL ORDER

Last Hart House Address Today by Sir Robert Falconer

INTEREST DISPLAYED

Sir Robert Falconer will conclude the series of Hart House addresses this afternoon when he discusses what can be done about applying Christian standards to the social order. Such widespread interest and genuine enthusiasm has been aroused by the theme of this series "Christianity and the Social Order", that the Student Christian Movement has arranged to hold a week-end conference over December 1st and 2nd which will deal with the problem intensively. The addresses and discussions of the conference will be based upon the report of the United Church Commission headed by Sir Robert Falconer entitled "Christianizing the Social Order".

Professor E. J. Urwick will address the opening session of the conference at seven o'clock on Saturday evening. The address will be followed by a discussion. At eleven o'clock on Sunday morning a student service will be held in the Emmanuel College Chapel, at which Dr. John Line will speak. In the afternoon the conference groups will meet for tea and discussion and at 6.30 a vesper service will be held, followed by a forum discussion led by Professor Urwick and Dr. Line, both of whom were members of the commission.

A copy of the report will be provided all students who register as delegates to the conference.

PROGRESS AND PROCESSES OF PHOTOGRAPHY SHOWN

H. E. Appleyard Outlines Technical Appliances Before Chemical Club

Kodacolor moving pictures were the feature of the Industrial Chemical Club smoker in Hart House last night. The audience appreciated the feminine stars equally as well as the landscape views shown. The speaker was Mr. H. E. Appleyard of the Eastman Kodak Company.

He commenced with a short history of the early development of the film industry. Originally it was necessary for the photographer to carry complete equipment with him for the preparation and development of plates, since the emulsions in use would only remain sensitive for a very short time. George Eastman developed improved plates and later invented roll films. Thomas Edison was the inventor of the moving picture camera.

Film manufacture as at present carried on requires very carefully controlled apparatus. The operations must be carried on in constant humidity rooms to prevent defects in the films.

The Kodacolor process, by which moving pictures may be taken in natural colours, involves the use of a special three-colour filter on both the camera and the projector. The film goes through an embossing process which forms its surface into a large number of small lenses. Each of these lenses receives light from one portion of the colour filter.

RETURN ANNOUNCED OF DR. A. HUNTER TO MEDICAL STAFF

Have you ever stopped to think, you coy co-eds, that a crazy convention is the only thing which prevents you from saying those four fatal words "Will you be mine?" to your Prince Charming?

Some bright young things about the campus, realizing the folly of such a condition gathered yesterday during the lunch hour in the cloak room of the Physics Building at a Sandwich Debate, where they threshed out the wisdom (?) of this time honoured custom.

"To propose or not to propose?" made many a girl munch thoughtfully on her sandwich. We should "pop the question," said Miss Myrtle Hunt. We should not, contradicted Miss Faeda Crutcher—and so it went for a solid hour.

Why shouldn't we propose? Marriage is a fifty-fifty proposition. If we share equally in the state of wedded bliss why can we not have the privi-

"I don't know whether we can operate capitalism on a proper basis or not," said Professor Sumner H. "Mr. Roosevelt," said Professor Slichter, "once compared himself to a quarterback seeking to win a game by a variety of plays. The President's three main plays are the manipulation of currency, the N.R.A., and increased government spending. His two objectives are to raise prices and to increase

THOMSON DESCRIBES GREEK CULTURE

Parallel Drawn Between Greek Tyrants and Our Dictators

SLIDES SHOWN

We are apt to consider our present run of autocratic rulers as unique, but a close parallel exists between them and the tyrants of the Grecian states, according to Dr. H. A. Thomson, who delivered a lecture on "Dictatorship in Athens in the 6th century B.C.", at the Museum Theatre yesterday afternoon. The difference in tempo of the two historical periods must be considered, the life of the Greek tyrant being a "slow motion picture of the career of a modern autocrat."

The Athenian tyrant, Pisistratus, and his two sons, Hippasus and Hipparchus, were chosen as representative of their age by Dr. Thomson. Pisistratus rose to power by taking advantage of the cleavage between the two ancient Athenian parties, the men of the plain and the men of the coast. He was not a very harsh ruler and paid particular attention to the rural population. Tyranny in Athens came to an end after Hipparchus was driven into exile in 510 B.C. Athenians hated tyranny, not because of the cruelty or harshness of the tyrants, but because they wanted to be independent and to have a voice in their method of government.

Dr. Thomson showed many slides, depicting the architecture and art of the sixth century. The cult of one god, Dionysus, was first introduced into Athens under Pisistratus' rule and the Panathenic games were also inaugurated then.

U.C. MUSIC CLUB PLAN PRODUCTION

Performance to Take Place in February if Plans Materialize

MEN NEEDED

Either "Good News" or "Music in the Air", is to be produced by the new U.C. Music Club, which held its first meeting at the Women's Union yesterday afternoon. The attendance was very encouraging; however, as seems to be usual, men were conspicuous by their absence, and a special request was made to those present to bring their friends, especially men. In spite of this lack of masculine attendance much is hoped for as great enthusiasm has been shown. The club, which is being sponsored by the men's Literary Society, and the W.C.U., is under the guidance of a committee consisting of Mary Hethers, Madge Shaw, Dot Fairley, Don Stewart, Ted Seythes and Ted Livingston. The group is strictly "co-operative", and although no fees are demanded this year the hope was expressed that next year there would be.

First Period Finishes with Torontos Holding a Big Lead

MANY PENALTIES

Ganging Attacks of Tired Varsity Team Prove Unavailing

By Ken Burn

Varsity proved genial hosts to the Toronto hockey aggregation last night when they allowed the visitors to go home on the favourable end of a 5-1 score. At no time during the game did the Blue team appear as potential winners and the Toronto team were superior in every department.

Toronto gained their big advantage in the first period when they outscored Varsity 4-1. O'Brien scored the opening goal when Toronto were ganging after McLelland had been penalized. Varsity retaliated when Grivel was marking time in the penalty box. After Goldie made four sensational saves, Sweeney finally banged home the fifth attempt for the tying counter. With both teams at full strength Toronto clearly outplayed the students and Parsons put the Olympic hopes out in front with the whole team assisting on the play. Two minutes later Grivel lengthened the lead after Oliver had drawn Shipp from the goal. Grivel was again chased for slashing and Varsity pressed hard. Normie McLelland made a nice solo effort but his shot was wide. Oliver gave the Torontos an insurmountable lead when he pushed the puck in the net after the Varsity defence had failed to clear. Jimmy McPherson led a strenuous attack but the period ended with the Blue team still trying to bulge the net.

Varsity had a distinct edge in the early stages of the second period but could not chalk up the necessary goals. When Sweeney was penalized Torontos again put on the ganging attack but Shipp was unbeatable. Varsity looked equally as good during this period but their attack fizzled at the goal mouth. The Blue team seemed very tired in the last session and did not play as

ATHLETES TO HOLD SOCIAL FUNCTION

Romanelli's Orchestra and Supper Are Features of At-Home

FIRST IN TWO YEARS

Subscription lists for the Athletic At-Home are being filled up rather slowly, it was stated yesterday by T. A. Reed, financial secretary of the University Athletic Association. The annual At-Home of the Athletic Association is to be held this year on Friday, December 7th in Hart House. In view of the fact that this will be the first Athletic At-Home in two years, the committee in charge hope to make it a particularly gala occasion.

Dance music for the evening will be supplied by Luigi Romanelli and his well known King Edward Hotel dance orchestra, and a delicious sit-down supper will be served in the Great Hall. The attendance will be limited to 400 couples at the most, who will dance in the main gymnasium, beneath a sky of blue and white, with spotlights adding a dash of romance to the party. The Athletic At-Home is designed particularly as a social function for athletes, both intercollegiate and interfaculty, and their followers. All students who desire to attend are asked to sign as soon as possible, so that the lists may be closed.

Follow the Leader

It is quite probable that on Thursday hundreds of thousands of people will stand in an English rain storm vainly hoping to catch a glimpse of the royal newly-weds. The registrars' offices are crowded with couples seeking a marriage license so that they can be married on the same day as their prince. The stores will be unable to meet the demand for cheap imitations of the bride's trousseau. Thousands of parents will bring their babies to church to be christened "Marina". In brief we are confronted with another problem in mass psychology.

It is very easy to follow the leader. How many went to the Great War because their neighbours were going? Just what percentage of our daily actions are due to the fact that everyone is doing them? We, who are supposedly blessed with a specialized education, realize the dangers of interbreeding as well as the decadency of monarchy and can tolerantly look down on the worshipping mobs in London. Yet the position would be reversed if that mob could see us obeying the wave of a cheer-leader's hand at a rugby game. For as much as we hate to admit it, we as a group, are no more individualistic in our thinking than the general public.

College graduates are represented as the intelligentsia of a nation. They have been hand-picked and the chaff has been cast aside. Yet the greatest moral, religious and political reformations in history have been brought about, not at the instigation of the leaders, but by the demands of the people that they be relieved of the oppressions being thrust on them by the so-called leaders.

The past five years have definitely proven that Life no longer offers to the graduate any snug harbours of security. Will we, faced with the knowledge that we are not ones on whom the favours of this world naturally fall, bring into use the latent abilities with which we are supposedly possessed? Will we attempt to rectify the social and economic evils which are so apparent? Will we dare to be leaders instead of followers? Or shall we go and stand in the rain and watch the wedding?

The League and Peace

Recent inquiries into student opinion in the University seem to amply justify the belief that the majority of students are definitely opposed to war; and in many cases would take no part in the eventuality of an anticipated war. In so far as this stand goes, it is more than encouraging. But unfortunately, while students (and this concerns the majority of professors as well) are ready to support the general principle of Peace, for the most part they seem to have very hazy notions as to how their beliefs concern their general attitude on international problems.

In a time such as this, it is very difficult to evaluate the various institutions which might command the loyalty of one sincerely devoted to the cause of Peace. There is one body, and one only, which is in the forefront of movements which are definitely seeking to better international relations. That is the League of Nations. The League has come in for a great deal of very destructive criticism in recent years; this criticism has resulted in a loss of faith by the peoples of the nations in the ability of that body to carry out to any degree of success the enormous task required of it. It is true no doubt that some of this criticism has been justified; that is, where the representatives of the nations have failed again and again to come to an agreement over such questions of disarmament policy as have arisen. But there have been patent cases of decisions made by the League councils which the nations bound to obey them, have neglected to carry into effective expression. It is not necessary to cite the too evident examples. For failures such as these we cannot in all justice blame the League. They are the fault of our respective governments; and in so far as we have representative systems of government, they are the fault of the people—of the people, who protest that they want nothing more than peace.

To bring the moral home to ourselves, if we really want peace it is up to us to support the League in whatever way we find possible; even though it be only by speaking in its favour. The League of Nations is what the peoples of the world wish to make it; their attitude will mean the success or the failure of League proceedings. Instead, therefore, of declaiming against the League whenever it is mentioned, we would be better advised in spreading propaganda which would lead to a respect and an enthusiasm for the cause of International arbitration leading to Peace, which seems to be most deplorably absent here. We cannot see a better way of coming to a real international understanding in the present day, than through the prestige which might be that of the League, if only we would will it so.

BEER, BULBS, AND BONHOMIE

Dear Mr. Editor:

May I invade your columns long enough to utter a few philosophic reflections and criticisms on three subjects, Beer, Bulbs and Bonhomie. The reflections will, of course, be practically without value, except that they just go to show what some people spend their time thinking about.

Suppose we take beer (does such a nasty word appear in your columns these days?). I have often wondered why hotel beverage rooms all over Ontario have such a universally gloomy and tawdry appearance. The sepi curtains across the lower part of the windows, the chairs painted a dark shade of brown, the round wooden tables in the same colour, and the salt shaker—they are all virtually the same anywhere, and they disseminate the same dismal and singularly cheerless atmosphere in your town as they do in mine.

In each of them you will find the same serious people, subdued and a little self-conscious, who drink their beer and sip quickly away. Is this the way one should drink beer? It is a far cry from the boisterous dare-devil laughter suggested by the Engineers in their marching song.

And next we have bulbs. Tungsten bulbs. Last Friday evening, in an orgy of spendthrift celebration, we attended the opening night of the moving picture, "The Merry Widow", and from there went to a dance in Hart House. One would expect to find the same spirit of fun, of gaiety, and high spirits in both places, for both were filled with pleasure-seekers.

At the theatre there were soft lights, and music, which together with the picture itself, blended into a whole evening of wit and laughter. The incidental effects were in complete harmony, to put it another way, conspiring to provide two of the most interesting hours we have enjoyed for a long time.

In Hart House, at the same time, a dance was in progress. When our party arrived the music was sweet, the women were beautiful, and the floor was smooth—but, Mr. Editor, the dance floors were lit by crude bright lights. As a result the dance was dull. It lacked the gaiety, sparkle, and romantic atmosphere which is always present where dancers are circling dreamily beneath paper skies, a yellow moon, and a few coloured spotlights. True love, I suppose, will bloom even beneath the yellow glare of tungsten bulbs, but I could not prove it by Friday night. So much for bulbs.

What of bonhomie? James Powers, in the New York Sunday News tells a story of a snowy Christmas Eve in Milwaukee. He tells of a bowling alley, and a group of people who had bowled, sung, and aled until their faces beamed, and their hearts melted. Then, at midnight—to quote Mr. Powers:

Suddenly at midnight a German patriarch with incredibly white hair and a beautiful long stemmed pipe rapped his cane on the floor for attention. He spoke to us in his native tongue and I gathered that he was reciting poetry. It must have been a wonderful poem for some of the women stood with tears in their shining eyes. Then we raised our skirts and as the church bells clanged in the frosty air without, and the stars shivered in the sky above our roof, we all held hands and sang "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht!" I guess I'll always like people who bowl.

I am not an advocate of beer drinking in bowling alleys or elsewhere, but I would like to question the possibility of such an exhibition of simple good-fellowship occurring in Ontario this Christmas. If such a spirit of bonhomie could be gained by each and every one of us during the Christmas season which is approaching, would we not have gained something? A something hard to define, but of infinite value to our social well-being.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Hart House Theatre

An almost capacity audience witnessed the first of the Victoria College Dramatic Society's one-act productions in Hart House Theatre yesterday afternoon when Cyril Roberts' play, The Last Rib, was presented under the direction of Osmond Rowe.

The play is one that lends itself to amateur production with much facility. The setting was very simple and most effective, and the lighting was well arranged and entirely adequate. The plot is a novel one that completely captures the attention of the audience. A supposedly mad scientist demonstrates to three persons interested in the armament industry the effect of a certain invention of his which has the power of destroying the entire female part of the world's population. He succeeds by the power of suggestion in making them believe that he has actually destroyed all women—but one. The reactions of the three men to this apparent calamity and to the appearance of the single beautiful woman left present a most interesting study. Finally he reveals that he has tricked them and they leave him, angry and ashamed. The suspense is maintained until the curtain.

ON TO GENEVA!

To the Editor of The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

We must awaken to the realization that mere talk is not effective against the machinations of those who foment and perpetuate wars. The crying need of the time is action! The reorganized Anti-War Society at the University appeals to all organizations and students who are determined to do their bit to prevent the recurrence of another war (which modern science ensures will not be war as we have known it in the past but the mass slaughter of civilians) to co-operate in the sending of a delegate from the University of Toronto to the World Congress of Students Against War, to be held in Geneva on December 29, 30 and 31 of this year. Students from all Europe, from the United States, Mexico, Canada and other countries are to assemble and draw up a plan of action against the greatest threat to our civilization. A Canadian anti-war movement cannot hope to be successful. Only by organizing a strong international movement against war can we expect to have peace.

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

Vic came through to clinch their group title last night, and nosed out the St. Mike's aggregation in the sudden death game. The final tally was 20-11 and had the Irish squad had better luck with their shots the final whistle might have told a very different tale. Both teams played real basketball for the most part. Vic have a tall defence, which will give the St. Hilda's forwards some real checking in the semi-finals.

The Vic baseball nine took the Medley team on last night to make up for the game the Medley group were not ready to play earlier in the season. Vic's leading position was not altered by the contest for they came out on top of a 27-14 tally. It was distinctly the best game the mongrel outfit has put up yet. They were really playing ball, and had this spurt come earlier in the year all the games would have been much closer. In one inning they held the Scarlet and Gold outfit to no runs and in another the Vic maidens only brought in one player. However, in the end Vic were too strong and the Medley group fades off the baseball horizon with a shut-out score in the final reckoning of games won and lost.

The Hockey Club made several interesting and vital decisions at their meeting yesterday which are to be passed on to the Directorate to get their sanction. They suggest that Varsity should not have an intercollegiate squad this year, but should concentrate on improving the calibre of interfaculty play. This change is not due to any lack of interest or enthusiasm, but rather to lack of funds, insufficient competition (Queen's, McGill and Western are also withdrawing from the field) and to the absence of really first rate material. Betty Mark is the only member of last year's senior team who is still with us. And in the interfaculty games, Molly Slater, of Vic, was the only player who came near the necessary standard. This withdrawal, it is hoped, will only be for one year and seems on the whole the best move.

It is possible that an all-star team will be chosen at the conclusion of the series, which should be an incentive to any hockey fan. Already the Hockey Club is busy with plans and arrangements so as to get the season off to a real start immediately after Christmas. It would be a big thing if this could be made a real year for hockey between the colleges.

Marion Best chalked up 8 of the 20 points collected by her team-mates and Betty Jenkinson and Alice Bassett looked good on the defence. For the losers, Mary Vining was the high scorer with 6 points to her credit. Agnes Gardner, Peggy Bailey and Marg Flahiff did some very close checking, but they were a little too slow for the flashy forwards on the opposing line.

TRINITY OUTPLAYED BY JUNIOR VICTORIA

Experienced Victoria Squad Win by Careful Play and Serving

The Victoria College junior volleyball team last night, by virtue of consistent playing and accurate serving, defeated Trinity College in two straight games, 15-4 and 15-13, in the scheduled fixture in the little gym. Junior Victoria merited their win on the superior net play of Welch and Cronin and the well placed services of Pollis. Trinity fought doggedly in the second game but could not break the more experienced play of Junior Victoria.

Trinity: Ongley, Wyckoff, Lossing, Macdonald, Scrivener, Summerville; subs: Curzon, Berlis, McNaughton and Brymer.

ST. MIKE'S DEFEATED IN GROUP FINAL

Junior Victoria Women Take Women's Basketball Title

FAST GAME

While lusty lunged spectators cheered, St. Mike's went down to a 20-11 defeat at the hands of the stalwart Jr. Vic team in a women's basketball fixture in the O.C.E. gym last night. By winning this sudden death playoff game for the group leadership, the Scarlet and Gold juniors emerged with the title of the Vic-St. Mike's-U.C. Freshies group, firmly in their grasp.

During the first few minutes of play, both teams were decidedly not up to their usual fast and furious standard. The scoring of the game was opened by Margaret Sedgewick of Vic, and for a while it looked as if this was to be the only shot scored during the half. The Vic forward line went wild in their attempts to score and this slowed the game up considerably. Muriel Beaton sank two shots in a row for the Scarlet and Gold lassies. The Saints were slightly erratic in their shooting and managed to get only one point, a foul shot by Betty Herring, in this half. The Vic team began seeing better towards the end of the period and scored six points in a row, making the score 12-1 in favour of the Woodman-spore-that-tree girls.

In the second half both squads used a close checking style of play with the Vic aggregation taking the offensive all the time. Mary Vining, Betty Herring and Marg McCarthy, in a belated rally, managed to pile up ten points for the Saints, while their rivals had to be content with 8. When the whistle blew to end the tussle, the score stood 20 to 11 in favour of Vic juniors.

Vic Juniors: Marian Best, Muriel Beaton, Eleanor McIntosh, Mildred Sedgewick, Tod Henderson, Betty Jenkinson, Alice Bassett, Sheola Brown, Gladys Kippen, Ruth Young.

St. Mike's: Mary McCarthy, Mary Vining, Peggy Bailey, Marie Lambie, Betty Herring, Agnes Gardner, Marg Flahiff, Mary Gallagher, Chris Kennedy.

STUDENTS APPROVE OF CAMPUS BANK

Pressure of Lectures Said to Prevent Cashing of Checks

PAWN SHOP SUGGESTED

The establishment of some bank on the University campus seems to be favoured by most of the students interviewed on the subject, following the suggestion in yesterday's leading editorial that such a bank should be started. The editorial drew particular attention to the difficulty experienced by students in trying to cash cheques.

"A bank might be started in connection with Simcoe Hall post office," suggested Henry Sims, II B. and M. "The post office might at least cash cheques. I have only one hour a week in which I can get to the bank, but Simcoe Hall would be convenient at lunch hours." "In a pinch one can keep his lucca in a sock," said J. L. Bradley, II Pass Arts. "A much greater problem to the average student is not finding a few minutes to go to the bank, but finding a whole morning which he can waste waiting to pay his fees to the Bursar."

R. A. Armstrong, Trinity House resident, was heartily in favour of some banking and cheque cashing arrangements being made on the campus. He suggested the small observatory in front of Hart House, among other places, as a home for the bank.

"A very good idea," said W. Harrison, II S.P.S.

"A pawn shop would be better," suggested J. S. Cutter, I Arts.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

There was no doubt as to the superiority of the winning team in last night's hockey encounter at Varsity Arena. The Torontos were clearly superior to the Varsity squad even in their bright moments. This could in no way be construed as news, as the Torontos are a hand picked outfit with the Olympic games, rather than the forwarding of hockey interests as their goal. With this in mind we think the management might have called them the Olympics, rather than the Torontos.

However, last night's struggle was far from dull. The students, after a shaky first period, in which they lost four goals, had almost an equal break in the territorial play. However, their scoring chances were few and it was the work of Frank Shipp more than anything else which kept the score relatively low. The game also marked the rise of Charlie Sweeney to the rank of a goal scorer. Charlie has been the tough luck player on the Varsity team for the past year and last night's goal marked his first advance in the scoring column. The other features of the game were the work of Maxie Fullerton and Teddy Oliver on the opposing side.

It is unfortunate that Varsity should have to meet Hamilton, Toronto and then Hamilton right at the beginning of the season. With a few more games behind them the students will give any team a battle and to meet the two best clubs in the circuit, clubs who have been working for the past month, in the opening games, will not do the attendance any good at the Arena. However, the Blue team is, as it was last season, a hard battling, colourful crew and should build up quite a following before the season is far advanced.

The admission of O.A.C. to the senior intercollegiate B. W. and F. meet to be held in Kingston, concludes a struggle of several years' standing. The students at the Guelph college have for many years past been noted for their ability to win arguments with a minimum of vocal effort, as witnessed in the way they capture the interfaculty assault with monotonous regularity. For the past several years they have been seeking admittance to the senior meet, and their success in the intermediate ranks has afforded them the desired admittance. What they will accomplish now that they are in is a matter of conjecture, but it is safe to prophecy that they will have a strong club.

Queen's re-entry into the senior hockey loop may also give impetus to the intercollegiate series which would be a very desirable course of events. Western have also signified their intention of entering, but that is unlikely. The London outfit have never been an outstanding club, even as intermediates and their entry into senior ranks would do little if anything to make the series more popular.

Tomorrow the Varsity intermediate pignis chasers will meet the McMaster Redmen in the replay of Saturday's game for the Eastern title. The fixture is scheduled for Hamilton and is the last senior club in the city to remain in the field of battle. Argo juniors and St. Mike's intercollegistics also remain undefeated and enthusiastic in the quest for honours. Should Varsity win tomorrow they will doubtless fold up for the season, but the McMaster team intend to enter the O.R.F.U. finals.

The indoor swimming season will be officially opened tonight when the junior interfaculty swimming meet gets under way in the Hart House pool. The number of entries for this event has not been so large as formerly but there will doubtless be numerous post entries when the swimmers go to the mark this evening. The quality of the swimmers, is, however, expected to be even higher than in previous meets, and there is every indication of a successful show.

MITTMEN PREPARE FOR BUSY SEASON

Senior Assault at Queen's; Boxers to Visit Cornell in February

SYRACUSE TEAM HERE

Every night from five to six sounds of clash, slap and grunt come from their respective rooms in the B. W. and F. section of Hart House, as the Mitt, Mugs and Muscle boys work themselves into shape for the coming season.

The beginners' classes in boxing and wrestling are larger than usual this year—particularly the boxing, so it looks as if the many art of self-defence is gaining prestige at Varsity. The large number giving and taking it promises some interesting bouts in the junior interfaculty assault, which will be held on December 12th and 13th.

Porcius, a heavyweight with previous experience, looks like a good prospect for the mitt-tossing squad, as does Grant in the 145 pound class. Martin at 175 pounds, Archer and Boyd at 165 pounds, and Carmichael at 135 pounds, work well in the ring. Others have not yet made themselves known, but judging by the number of applicants, boxing is in for a good season.

Several good grapplers have shown up in the wrestling section, but they are still looking for more men—every one has a chance, experience unnecessary. Among the squad already turned out, some of the potential point winners are Lathrop, a heavyweight; Evans and Crossley in the 155 pound class; Cruickshank at 145 pounds, and Robertson at 135 pounds. But until the junior assault clears the air, it

FAST FORESTRY TEAM EASILY TRIMS O. C. E.

Disorganized Teachers Lose Fast Rugged Game to Forestry

Forestry swamped the O.C.E. lacrosse squad by a 10-1 count in a fairly interesting game played in the big gym yesterday afternoon. The game was very rugged and very fast, and this made up for the one-sided nature of the contest.

The game started out at a fast clip and Forestry quickly showed their superiority, seeming to organize attacks with great ease. The Teachers, however, found it hard going all the way and very rarely were able to rally get going.

Grier and Higgin for Forestry were the leading marksmen, with Crossley contributing his share of the goals.

O.C.E.: English, King, McKernan, Sheehan, Douglas, Grant, Colmer and Lindsay.

Forestry: McConnel, Maundry, Larson, Grier, Higgin, Crossley, Cowan, Carrique and Joneson.

will be hard to say who's who in the B. W. and F. department.

The boxers will have their first big test on January 26th, when the Syracuse ring artists come to Toronto.

The senior interfaculty assault is scheduled to be held on January 30th and 31st. A week later the boxing team will invade Cornell, and at the same time, the wrestling squad will visit Rochester.

The senior intercollegiate assault will be held at Queen's on February 15th and 16th.

brilliant hockey as they did in the second period. When Campbell was penalized for some obscure reason the team was weakened badly and Robinson added the final tally after a scramble in front of the goal mouth. McAlpine was sent off for roughing but Varsity couldn't do much. Kieff was sent off and Torontos again had the advantage. Devine caught the Toronto team flat-footed but couldn't beat Goldie. Grivel received his third penalty and in a last futile effort Varsity sent every man up but the score remained unchanged.

IMPERIAL TEAM LOSE UPHOLDING LIBERALISM

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 27.—Liberalism was pronounced dead at the Imperial Debate last Tuesday evening in the Civic Auditorium when the University of Manitoba team, consisting of Cecil Sheps and Wilfred Butcher were successful in upholding the resolution, "That Liberalism, though it yet speaketh, is dead," against the visiting Imperial debating team consisting of Leslie Jackson and Robertson Critchton.

AIMS OF ZIONISM GIVEN IN DEBATE

"Resolved that the World Zionist organization politically has outlived its purpose," was the vitally important topic under discussion at the symposium held by the Avukah Society last evening at the Women's Union at their first open meeting of the season.

Mr. Harold Acker, first speaker of the affirmative, in a well documented and interesting analysis, stated that, "The hope for the future of Zionism should be placed, not in the World Zionist organization, but in the Labor Government of England."

The first speaker of the negative, Mr. Norman Adell, in his paper, maintained that "The organization really has certain vital things to perform, which only a body representing the whole of Jewry as the Zionist organization does, is able to perform. In co-operation with the League of Nations, the aim of the organization is not to colonize Palestine, but to build up a Jewish Palestine."

Jack Sugarman, upholding the affirmative, raised the question of whether the Zionist organization was interested in the political implications of the Saar plebiscite, and voiced his scepticism of any interest in political issues. He nevertheless granted that with proper management, the possibilities of the or-

PACIFIC PLAY TO BE PRESENTED

Talent Will Be Recruited from Dramatic Societies on Campus

DENTON MASSEY PATRON

In an endeavour to combine startling dramatic effects with an appeal for world concord, the Youth Unit of the League of Nations Society of Canada have under way an original and gripping production entitled "Prelude to Chaos", by Margot Blaisdell, a brilliant and alert Toronto playwright.

Crystallizing as it does the sentiments of all zealous peace devotees, without resorting entirely to the ranks of propaganda, this play presents in epic fashion the story of events leading to the great war, the war itself in its effects on nations and individuals, the making of peace and subsequent events. Drawing on the talent of the various dramatic aggregations of the city and University campus, including the University College Players' Guild, and the Victoria College Dramatic Society, the production will be principally by such familiar names as Harold Hunter, Leslie Floyd, Patricia Card and Byron Westlake. Interesting in this connection is the active co-operation being lent the production by such leaders in Toronto's religious life as Dr. Stanley Russell, Rabbi Eisen-drath, Father McGarity, and Denton Massey. These extremely busy men are all participating in the actual production and working to ensure its success and the forcefulness of its message.

The President and the Board of Governors are delighted to have been able to obtain the services of Professor Hunter, a man of world-wide prestige, and it is interesting that he returns to his original position in the University of Toronto, but it is now a position, which is very much larger and very much more important than ten years ago.

SLICHTER FLAYS

RECOVERY ACT

of the ideas of two conflicting groups: the American Federation of Labour, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. The first group believes in that number one superstition of the age, that raising wages and shortening hours will increase purchasing power. The latter, representing the business men of America, believes recovery will come when cut throat competition is eliminated so that business men may find it easier to raise prices.

To further these policies, Roosevelt has three stratagems: monetary manipulation, regulation of industry (N.R.A.), and government spending. As one fails, he substitutes another. At the present time, he is abandoning the N.R.A. as more or less of a failure.

The crux of the matter, according to Dr. Slichter, is the possibility of creating new ways of making money, i.e., of producing economic change. This is the first depression in the United States where the new has actually been at a standstill as compared with the old. Only when new paths are opened to the profit incentive will unemployment (which the NIRA has utterly failed to remedy) be effectively curbed. The trouble with the New Deal is that it has increased the cost of economic change.

"The only way out of this difficulty," concluded Dr. Slichter, "is a flexibility of wage-rates, which will also prevent the recurrence of similar depressions. Only a changed psychology on the part of the worker regarding the sanctity of wages will stabilize the economic system under which we now live."

consumers' buying power." Professor Slichter then gave a description of the various uses of these plays in the history of the United States during the depression, and showed that a fourth play might shortly be introduced to the game in the form of co-operation with business.

The fundamental fallacy in the N.R.A., according to the professor, is that it attempts to produce recovery by the raising of the cost of change. "You cannot stabilize business if you don't stabilize profit prospects," he said, "and under the kind of system to which we adhere, how can you prevent profit prospects fluctuating?" In the matter of unemployment relief Professor Slichter said, "People regard unemployment reserves as socialistic, but under a properly operated system of socialism there is no unemployment." In another place he made the statement, "In many ways I'm close to becoming a socialist."

In regard to the influence of the N.R.A. upon Canada, Professor Slichter repeated what he had told the Business Men's Club earlier in the day, "Canada," he said, "has been able to benefit greatly by the mistakes and by the successes of President Roosevelt's experiments." Above all Professor Slichter advocated close attention to the matter of government control over private business, and its possible effect. He thought that we in Canada had a far better opportunity to deal with this matter than had the United States for, as he put it, "You in Canada have well organized political parties which you can hold responsible, whereas we have 435 different parties in the House and 96 in the Senate."

After Professor Slichter had concluded his remarks he answered the many questions that were put to him by the members of the club, explaining his meanings where they had been misunderstood and elaborating on some of his theories.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

of the armament manufacturers, was played to entire satisfaction by Bill Shaver, who, in our opinion did the best acting of the cast. His diction was flawless and his actions betrayed but slight nervousness. Gerrard Smith, acted by Don Stewart, was fairly well done except that there was a slight lack of modulation in voice. The scientist, played by Don Marlette, was an unfortunate bit of casting. This was the most important part and as it was portrayed definitely detracted from the play's effectiveness. The two stenographers, played by Grace Barber and Muriel Eastwood, were good, particularly the former, but both were somewhat restless. Dorothy Garton, as the woman, did her small speaking part excellently. Hugh Peart, as Charles Harmon, showed improvement in his part as the play progressed. In the future more attention should be paid by directors to voice production and quality.

In spite of the little flaws, however, the production as a whole was rather well done and augurs well for future productions of the Victoria players.

Toronto Symphony

When you are surfeited with mediocre concerts and begin to doubt your genuine appreciation of music hear Szigets. We hope you were present at the Toronto Symphony Concert last evening. If you were you enjoyed a fine programme, well chosen and well played in addition to hearing one of the world's outstanding violinists. Only on isolated occasions does one hear anything so supremely satisfying as Szigets' playing of the Beethoven D major concerto. It takes real genius to catch the great and true essence of the old masters; to subdue the technical and florid figures to an intelligible part of a great and magnificent architectural whole; to breathe life, beauty and pregnant meaning into every note. What was most impressive in Szigets' work was not the manner but the matter: the deep and poetic insight that penetrates into the very "warp and woof" of the music.

The ovation which followed such finished work was indeed thrilling and gratifying. After numerous recalls the artist encoored with an unaccompanied Bach selection.

The orchestral numbers were effectively chosen for striking contrast. The Overture in D minor—Handel-Elgar, a stirring and massive orchestral work, was followed by Ravel's delightful Mother Goose Suite. As the programme notes suggest, this work is flavoured with innumerable varieties of "quaint and delicious effects". It was the first performance by our orchestra and will improve with familiarity. The Don Juan tone-poem of Strauss finished off the evening with a mighty climax.

Music of this type is liked or disliked according to what one looks for and expects in the listening. It is definitely music to be felt and experienced and as such may well be described as a "tumult of dazzling colour daubs", but something more. In expressing the moods, the passions and the inmost life of Don Juan we hardly look for a great development of musical ideas. The appeal lies in the ever-changing dramatic moments; the story in ground and colour. And thus results the somewhat detached fashion in which the work is built up.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

London—At least 1,000,000 people will throng the route over which Prince George and Princess Marina will drive to Westminster Abbey. The prospect is that the procession will be viewed through the traditional London fog.

Ottawa—An unconfirmed report stated that knighthood will be conferred on Archbishop H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, in the King's New Year's list. G. D. Roberts, Hon. H. A. Bruce, lieutenant-governor of Ontario, and several other notables will also be included.

Chicago—The bullet-riddled body of "Baby Face" Nelson was found in a ditch outside this city yesterday. His death ended an amazing crime career, in the course of which he killed the two Federal agents who were responsible for the capture of John Dillinger.

London—Sir John Simon has announced the delivery to France, Germany and other nations of the full contents of Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin's speech urging Germany to abandon her policy of secrecy and isolation.

Toronto—The evidence gathered by M. A. Sorsolle regarding vice among school children, will be laid before the cabinet today by Hon. David Croll.

Los Angeles—Violent rioting broke out again in this city yesterday. The rioters disrupted traffic on at least six thoroughfares, by overturning street cars at crowded intersections. Peace overtures to date have been unsuccessful.

Buenos Aires—Jose Luis Tejada became the new President of Bolivia yesterday. Former President Daniel Salamanca resigned after suffering disastrous military reverses in the Chaco war. It was feared that the efforts of the League of Nations towards a settlement of the Chaco war would be endangered by this sudden turn of events.

VICTORIA DEBATE ON CITY POLICE

Treatment of Citizens by the Police Commission to be Discussed

LARGE ATTENDANCE

The subject of the debate of the Victoria Sandwich Parliament today will be "Resolved that the Toronto Police Commission should make no distinction of persons in its treatment of the citizens."

George Proust, Victoria II, said that the obvious result would be for the affirmative to win, but that such a debate might also turn in favour of the negative. "The affirmative will probably take a Socialist angle," he said, "and the negative a traditional view." More formalities will be introduced at this meeting, including the prohibition of loud gurgling of soup to drown the speaker. "Other means will be used to that end if necessary," he added. The purpose of the Parliament being to develop speakers, in future the chairman will give the floor to new speakers who have as yet had no opportunity to be heard, whenever two or more men rise to speak at once.

The attendance has been so large, he explained, that it might yet have to be limited to Vic men, but at present men from all other colleges and faculties will be welcome.

FALCONER SPEAKS AT HART HOUSE ON CHRISTIANITY

Wrong Conception of Wealth is Underlying Cause of Present Conditions

SOCIETY IS IMPROVING

Youth Will Rally to Cause When Greatness of Problems is Seen

"I believe that the underlying cause of the present social conditions is the wrong conception of wealth that has been spread about, and a wrong status it has been given in society," stated Sir Robert Falconer, speaking at the last of a series of meetings held in Hart House to discuss "Christianity and the Social Order."

Sir Robert based his remarks mainly on the findings of the commission, of which he was chairman, appointed by the United Church of Canada, to try and get to the root of the evils of the present social system. "I believe that the problem can only be solved by educating the young people to a new conception of the demands placed upon them by their religion, and by teaching them to estimate their fellow men by a Christian standard of life," Sir Robert added.

Michelangelo and Rembrandt Discussed in Second of Series

ADDRESS ILLUSTRATED

"The ultimate aim of an artist is to create a definite unit or idea, then present that idea in such a way that the spirit of the creator definitely becomes an integral part of the finished work," said Professor John G. Alford of the Department of Fine Art during his talk in Hart House Sketch Room yesterday afternoon. The lecture was the second in the series of informal discussions, the topic being "What is the Artist Aiming At?"

"The true artist," continued the speaker, "begins his work with a general idea."

STUDENT INSURANCE MAY BE PROVIDED

Would Pay Hospital and Surgical Fees for Athletes

In view of the present inadequate protection against accidents and sickness the University is proposing the formation of Students' Accident and Health Insurance. Under this plan the student would be paid his surgical and medical fees up to $100; his hospital and nursing fees at three dollars a day up to $75; his full ambulance, X-ray and operation charges.

This policy would cover students while engaged in athletics, except while playing or practicing for teams representing the University of Toronto in intercollegiate or outside leagues. These can be covered for a slight extra cost if desired.

The students are responsible for procuring and handing in properly itemized bills within two weeks of recovery. The most that any student could obtain in one year would be limited to $175. The maximum yearly total would be $50,000.

First Term Fees Must Be Paid

The attention of all students is drawn to the following general University regulation:

"Students must have paid the fees due in the first term before proceeding with the work of the second term."

It is the intention of the University authorities to enforce this regulation in all faculties. Students should, therefore, make the necessary arrangements for the payment of all fees for the first term before the opening of the second term on January 3rd, 1935, in order that they may be eligible to continue their registration for the second term.

Professor Taylor Gives Views on Peace Movement and its Problems

INTERNATIONAL CONTACTS

"It is quite evident that to be ultimately successful any peace movement must be international," said Professor W. R. Taylor of the Oriental Department when asked by The Varsity what he thought of the worth of sending a delegate to the youth peace conference at Geneva this spring. Dr. Taylor went on to say that he was unable to judge the value of sending someone, but that anything that promoted international knowledge was in the best interests of world peace. "If people travelled more and got to know the people of other countries they would have no desire to fight. The difficulty of understanding the thoughts of people who speak a different language is one of the large factors in causing international ill-feeling."

With regard to the recent I. S. S. questionnaire, Professor Taylor said he considered that it was useless for ascertaining the true feelings of the students. "For one thing the number of questions asked was confusing and the labour involved was so great that"

BUSINESS WOMEN DEBATE SUBJECT

Woman's Place in the Home, Decide Loretto College Debaters

ST. JOSEPH'S DEFEATED

"Eve, thou shalt be under thy husband's power, and he shall have dominion over you," was the basis of Miss Smyth's affirmative argument in the debate held at Loretto College last night. The motion before the house, "Resolved that women should withdraw from the business world," was defeated by Loretto College, who formed the opposition to St. Joseph's. The government explained that woman's position today destroyed chivalry, and tended to increase the unemployment problem. Woman's only definite place is in the home, where she reigns supreme. Her highest calling is motherhood, which implies a domestic life. Women were urged to give up the rights they usurped from the men.

"Tough and tearless," were the attributes essential to those in business, was Miss Flahiff's contribution for the government, stating that the fair sex can certainly not be characterized thus.

SWEEPING PLAN NOT EFFECTIVE SAYS STEVENS

Necessity of Keeping Original Problem in View is Stressed

PRACTICAL PROBLEMS

Canada Needs An Efficient Programme of Reconstruction

By R. G. Anglin

In the midst of a very busy morning the Honorable H. H. Stevens, on a short visit to Toronto as the guest speaker at the third Hart House debate, yesterday found time to receive The Varsity in his suite at the Royal York. During the very informal interview which transpired there was no attempt made to further discuss or propound the detailed findings of the Royal Commission probe into "big-business" practices. Rather, the former chairman of the Commission stressed the necessity of keeping the original problem in view, and the danger of giving too much attention to political and other unessential issues.

"I have always sought to keep the problem before the public," declared Mr. Stevens, "for in a democracy opinion must be moulded by the public. Only a strong and clear public opinion, it was suggested, would have the power to effect the vital reforms demanded by recent revelations. The Varsity suggested that University students tend to be critical of the value of such 'startling revelations' as have been recently pouring forth from the price spread inquiry."

BLUE PUCKSTERS DEFEATED BY 2-0

Varsity Team Are Impressive Despite Inability to Score

SHIPMAN STARS

The new Varsity entry in the T.H.L. made their debut up at the Arena last night, and made a good impression despite the fact that they were outscored 2-0 by the powerful Royal Canadians. Not until the final period when the Blue team tired badly did the Canadians succeed in denting the twine behind the spectacular goalkeeping of Shipman. Four times this trick was accomplished but twice the official nod of approval was lacking. The Blue team found themselves confronted with the powerful defence combination of Bobby Porter and the ex-pro, Red Moore.

The first period was fast and fairly even with the team from the Royal rink having a slight advantage. The

Co-operation Asked From University

A request has come from the Deputy Minister of Public Works in Queen's Park, asking students to refrain from using the cafeteria in the East Wing of the Parliament Buildings.

ROBINETTE TROPHY LIST IS POSTED

Elimination Debates Will Be Commenced in Near Future

ALL U.C. MEN ELIGIBLE

The entry list for the Robinette Trophy debates has been posted in the Junior Common Room at University College. The Robinette Trophy was first presented for competition in 1912 by the University College Literary and Scientific Society. The elimination debates to pick the teams to represent the different years in the competition are going to start almost immediately, according to N. M. Fivnick, the Literary Director. All men in University College are eligible.

The teams consist of two men from the same year. A feature of the debate is that the contestants after consultation with their opponents choose their own subject for debate. In the semi-finals the first year meets the third and second meets the fourth. The final debate is held at the second last Lit. meeting.

Since it is generally understood that previous winners of the trophy do not enter again, all teams have an equal chance. Several prominent parliamentarians have already entered and it is expected that more will enter before the list closes. All University College men interested are urged to sign the list immediately.

MUSICIANS IN SOVIET SUBJECT OF LECTURE

"No country is able to put out a catalogue of music as large as that of the Soviet Union," said Mr. Boris Berlin of the Toronto Conservatory of Music in the concluding remarks of his address on music and musicians in Soviet Russia at the meeting of the student branch of the F.S.U. Monday night.

He added that until five years ago music was in an experimental stage and far inferior to Austrian, French and German composers. But with the opportunity of hearing western music Soviet music has advanced and the output at the present time is enormous.

In the first years of the revolution composers found themselves in a different atmosphere when the Soviet came into power. Musicians were forced to unite themselves into unions and they launched a campaign for creation of proletarian art. The young musicians formed two associations. These two bodies are the only ones in union at present. One of them, the Association of Proletarian Musicians, created heroic revolutionary songs for the masses which are extremely popular in parades. But this music was far from the ideology of Soviet or proletarian music.

Resolution: "That Big Business is a Curse When Directed Solely by the Profit Motive" is Upheld by 307-88 Vote.

CAPITALISM IS OENOUNCED

The Hon. H. H. Stevens definitely convinced the undergraduate body last night at the Hart House debate, that Big Business is a menace to society. The House was utterly packed to hear discussed the question: "That big business is a curse when directed solely by the profit motive." The motion carried 307 to 88; and there can be no doubt that Mr. Stevens' speech was the deciding factor. Speaker of the House was Mr. A. C. Smith.

S. F. Rac, of University College, led off the debate, denouncing the whole capitalistic system, which fosters the profit motive. He saw no alternative, in such a society as ours, to the disgusting mess we are in: "Even the angel Gabriel would have produced the identical situation we see today," if he had been in charge for the last few years of a social order whose beauty seems to be: "Blessed are the grasping, for they shall inherit the earth."

The answer of the Noes, represented by J. S. Woods of Trinity College, was that these evils are mere phases of Big Business, but are not part of its essence. He pled for regulation instead of abolition, and insisted that scrapping big business would be "excavating a garden to get rid of a worm."

After several speeches from the

LOVE OF COLOUR KIDNAP MOTIVE

Colour Has Psychological Value, States Museum Lecturer

"Have you ever stopped to think what this world would be like if there was no colour and everything was black or white?" asked Miss Ruth Home in her lecture at the Museum yesterday afternoon.

The love of colour was the motive behind the first kidnapping of which we have record, when Joseph's brothers became envious of his beautiful coat of many colours. This love also played an important part in more modern history when the Indians sold the Island of Manhattan to the white man for a few coloured beads.

Colour has a very definite psychological value. For example, red is associated with war and bloodshed and when used in large quantities in a room it may become extremely irritating. Doctors say, in fact, that certain nervous disorders may be caused when colour is used without judgment and are trying in some hospitals to make use of colour as a cure for these diseases.

Anti-War Questionnaire

The recent International Student Service questionnaire published in The Varsity, was answered by about two hundred students, about half of whom were definitely pacifistic in their leanings. This is probably a fairly accurate expression of opinion from those who answered, but what of the other six thousand students who did not take the trouble to fill in a form? At McGill University, which has a registration only slightly larger than our own, there were 497 replies received, more than twice as many as here. Apparently Toronto students are not seriously interested in the question which was raised.

The attitude which has been taken here is best summed up by the University of Alberta Gateway in an article entitled "Youth and War", which we quote in part:

The large majority of young men are not especially concerned with the subject. Either they are neutral in the controversy or just don't care. A minority will be seen at Masquerades falling over their fathers' swords and spilling Scotch on their C.O.T.C. uniforms. These constitute the bulk of the post-war generation with their indifference and lack of realization of war. We can't remember the horrors of the World War, but we see much of the picturesqueness of it. The stories of the camaraderie, of the fellowship among the men appeals strongly to us. The "leaves in Paris", the romanticism of the battles in the sky are the things we think of when we imagine war. The mud, fleas and bad food are forgotten, and as far as death is concerned, well, that is just the other person.

The present generation has very little to look forward to after their graduation. A war wouldn't be any great disruption in their lives, something preventing their marriage, of keeping them out of good positions and a rapid rise. For many years after graduation there is only dreary prospect of sweat-shop wages and no place to rise to; war might even be a bright spot on the horizon, a thrill, something to give us some excitement.

If war should be declared by the Government of Canada the opposition of the new generation would be practically nil. Although the majority might not welcome it they, like previous generations, would be just as patriotic and equally ready to go.

The Egg

It has so often been said that the Arts have always reflected society. Shakespeare drew the court intrigues, the coarse wit and boorishness of the peasant class and all the comedies and tragedies of the Elizabethan era.

Then came Milton, a resonant echo of the Puritan in the dark beauty and dignity of his verse. With Charles came Romance again in Richard Lovelace and his kind and in the beauty of Sir Anthony Van Dyck's portraits and paintings, in Purcell's spontaneous music. Following on this is the trim balance of Pope and Dryden, and its glorified musical counterpart in Bach, that mirrored a saner, more normal people.

And so it is possible to come up the ages, reading and hearing and seeing the life of our ancestors without looking at a history book. But it rouses the age-old question when we consider our own time: "Which comes first, the hen or the egg?" Does Noel Coward portray us, or do we portray Noel Coward? Modern literature, music and art are so widely diffused that they become part of our very selves, and we find it increasingly difficult to isolate them.

To say we had the intensity and frenzy of "The Rhapsody in Blue" until it played itself into our emotions and we became intense and frenzied, so the older generation says, quite mad.

Did we bother our heads about four dimensional art until Aldous Huxley and some of his equally intellectual contemporaries repeatedly brought the question to our notice. Are we quite as perverted as Epstein would have us believe? A distorted mirror has been held up to us and the finger of Art has pointed to our absurd reflection with great mocking. So accustomed have we become to this state of affairs that our image no longer seems absurd, and we have closed our ears to the mockery.

So in the future, judging by what modern work is likely to live, we will be seen in an age of mental and emotional chaos, of exquisite but decadent literature, of powerful but discordant music, of unintelligible but beautiful art. Whereas we are a very average people, reading a great many books with happy endings, which though they won't be immortal, are very readable now; listening to pretty music that is a creditable echo of the classic composers; looking at pictures and architecture that is comfortable because it is not provocative. But rather than let history down, we pose as being intellectual perverts. —From The Gateway, U. of Alberta.

The Big Show

Among the outstanding features presented for the entertainment of the members of the North American Showman's Association this week convening in Toronto, have been the Royal Winter Fair and last evening's Hart House Debate. The large numbers of students present at the University function enjoyed themselves immensely, added their personal witticisms to the speeches of the headline players and were completely carried away by the dramatic skill of the leading actor. The play was not without its dramatic irony, for three hundred and ninety-five spectators polled a very decisive vote on a motion which was so adroitly worded as to have three hundred and ninety-five quite justifiable interpretations.

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD WAR

After a rather thorough investigation into the answers to the I.S.S. questionnaires, the conclusion stands out in my mind, that even those two hundred students who were interested enough to get their answers in, do not fully realize the implications of war. The questionnaire, of course, is bad, mainly in that it is not coherent and does not point out the fundamental issues. The most informative part of the questionnaire was the question asking for further suggestions for ways of furthering the purpose of peace. The most common suggestion is that more stress be laid upon educating children to the horrors and evils of war. Almost as common was the statement that we need not worry so much about the problem of war in which all students, and countless other mortals will suffer, but rely on a supreme deity.

By far the most important suggestions, however, to my mind were those which asked for a fundamental change in our present economic system which I believe can be pointed to as the main cause of modern warfare. The munitions manufacturer wants war and lays the path for war because from war and the fear of war he derives his huge profits. The arms purveyor is not the only one who gains from mass massacre. Most other concerns in the commercial world profit from war.

It is only the great multitude of people and civilization which loses by war. That at least is the tenet of modern commercial competition. But it is pointed out in many of the questionnaires that the economic status of "much for the few and little for the many" will not stand the strain of another war. Whether that fact justifies another war I do not care to say. More important is it to look ahead and see now what we can do to change the economic system so that profiteers will not be able to be vultures who subsist luxuriously on the carnage of the battlefield.

Many of the added suggestions on the questionnaire asked for superficial changes rather than fundamental ones. I find answers which suggest "abolition of medals, military funerals, etc." or "touring other countries". Answers range from this type to such as "If those parties who promote and profit by wars actually took part in the war and exposed themselves to the dangers, suffering and hardships of modern warfare, I feel sure that they would be less eager to encourage war", or "any war which may take place in the future will come as a result of the desire of a small group, not primarily as the demand of an entire nation. I believe, therefore, that the abolition of any opportunity for individuals to make profits from war is one of the surest ways to ensure peace."

The most general conclusion that is significant, is the fact that the questionnaire has been a means of arousing sane thinking upon the problem of war, its causes and possible cures. M.B.L.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

The U.C. Players' Guild

Yesterday afternoon the U.C. Players' Guild presented the last act of "Nine to Six", by Amy Philip Stewart, a one-time success of the London theatre world. It has been well described as a minor work of rather unknown authors, but it did supply a means of introducing several young women to the glamour of stage work. The cast was under the direction of Dorothy Walker, who has previously, as in this case, started out definitely with the idea of bringing new people on the Guild stage. All of the cast which included, Margaret Horne, Dorothy Linklater, Margaret Dunlop, Aileen O'Brien, Kay Huff and Madeline Cummins, showed that they could learn and had learned considerable about the art of acting. To be sure, there were frequent and consistent flaws in posture, movement, voice production and general stage deportment, but at least those who have appeared on the stage for the first time or without much previous training, are now able to know that the stage offers possibilities of expression which they can develop. Feeling that the University women have been neglected in the matter of political discussion, and in an attempt to ascertain whether they are really interested in political affairs, the University Twentieth Century Liberal Club will hold its meeting tonight in Wymillwood at eight o'clock.

The guest speakers of the evening will be Mr. and Mrs. George Fulford of Brockville. Mrs. Fulford was unanimously chosen as president of the Ontario Federation of Twentieth Century Clubs at the convention on November 3rd and holds a reputation for being an outstanding political speaker. Mr. Fulford is the youngest member of the Ontario Legislature and a graduate of University College.

This will be the first open meeting of the club and the executive are looking forward to a representation from the women of the University.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Ken Burn

This afternoon the intermediate rugby team will vie with McMaster to decide who will be the Dominion Intermediate Intercollegiate champions. The team is up against a tough proposition, namely, winning from a Hamilton team in the Mountain City, but we understand they have been bribed with promises of tickets to the Athletic At-Home if they do win, so do not be surprised if Varsity holds on to the rugby title this year.

The S.P.A. junior hockey series will take on a distinctly collegiate atmosphere tonight when Varsity meet St. Michael's "A" team in the second game at Maple Leaf Gardens. The winner will enter the semi-final round which will be played on Saturday afternoon.

In the opening game of the T.H.L. last night Varsity dropped a close decision to Royal Canadians. The defence of Bobby Porter and Red Moore was too much for the Blue team, but on the other hand it was not until the latter stages of the game that Shipman allowed any to slip past him.

Hamilton loom up as heavy favourites to take the O.H.A. title this year. Although the Toronto hockey mentors are doing their utmost to have the Queen City represented at the Olympiad next year, to date their all-star aggregation have not appeared very impressive. We feel that by next spring they will be less impressive after having played Mercantile hockey two nights a week and amateur hockey another two all winter.

As the interfaculty lacrosse schedule is rapidly drawing to a close, speculation is rife as to whether or not a representative team will be chosen to play exhibition matches with U.S.A. squads. A number of last year's team are back and many are eager to avenge the defeat by the Rochester team last winter.

U.C. VOLLEYBALLERS DEFEAT O.C.E. SQUAD

Chang and Himel Dominate Dull Contests

Senior U.C. successfully turned back the Ontario College of Education yesterday afternoon in a spiritless game of volleyball staged in the upper gym. Senior U.C. won two games, 15-4, 15-6, easily defeating the inexperienced and unpracticed O.C.E. squad. The first game was uninteresting due to the fact that both teams displayed poor form and an obvious lack of combination on the part of O.C.E.

However, in the second frame Chang counted point after point for the winners with his sparkling net play and smashing returns. Levy and Murphy also added zest to the second game by reason of their smooth combination and the telling serves of Himel caused much grief on the O.C.E. squad.

Davidson and DeMay were best for the losers, in displaying occasional spurts of individual ability, but the remainder of the O.C.E. aggregation were unable to take advantage of this and consequently suffered defeat.

Senior U.C.: Chang, Murphy, Golding, Himel, Damsky, Lasken, Kriger and Levy.

O.C.E.: Blachford, Scherbarth, Henderson, Young, DeMay, Flannery and Davidson.

Individual honours of the evening went to Dilworth, who was a big factor in the Trinity victory. Dilworth came home in front in three different events during the course of the evening. The first victory was chalked up by the Trinity natator in the 50 yards free style, and he repeated his triumph

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. W.

Tonight's basketball game between Vic Juniors and St. Hilda's should be very exciting. It is the first of the two semi-final games these teams will play. If one team can pile up a lead tonight, it will be a big help in the second game, since points count on the round. (Nevertheless it is not a boxing match.) Come on, you fans, get out and support your team. For the small sum of 10c you will be thrilled by a fast, close game of basketball. Both teams have a fast breaking offensive, and a close checking defensive. Both were out practicing last night. Vic had an informal game with several grads, and have probably learned several new things. Let's see a big crowd in O.C.E. gym tonight at 7.30.

The second of these semi-final games will be played on Tuesday, December 4, at 7.30 p.m., and not on Saturday, December 1st, as was previously announced. The winner of these two games will meet U.C. Seniors in the finals, which will be played in Hart House gym. Two games will be played, the first on Thursday, December 6, and the second on Tuesday, December 11. The times will be announced later. This schedule has been changed from the one which appeared in this column last Tuesday, so please note the change.

The schedule for the baseball finals between Vic and St. Mike's has not been announced yet, but is scheduled to appear in the near future. The would-be champions will have to win two out of three games.

So far not many girls have been taking advantage of the life-saving classes from 12 to 1 on Fridays in the Lillian Massey pool. These classes are worth while and interesting, and since Billy Cochrane is kind enough to have them, why not show your appreciation by turning out? We can't emphasize too much the fact that the girls who will star in the interfaculty swimming meet will be those who have practiced regularly.

Nothing very new in hockey news. It is being planned that the same referees will be had for all the interfaculty games. If an all-star team can be arranged at the end of the interfaculty series, these referees will be

GOOD GAME ASSURED

Finding it necessary to once more get their uniforms out of their lockers, the Varsity intermediates go to Hamilton this afternoon to play McMaster University in the return game of the intermediate intercollegiate final. Last Saturday, after a thrilling struggle as could be wished for, the two teams left the score tied at 14-14. The battle will be carried on from where it left off on Saturday, which means that there will be plenty of action around Hamilton this afternoon.

The deciding factor in the game last week was the presence of too many penalties to the Varsity line-up. Three times in the last five minutes of the last game, Varsity were prevented from scoring by penalties for roughing and holding along the line. On the play of the game, Varsity seemed a good deal stronger than the McMaster intermediates, both in kicking and in plunging. George Powell and Ivan Edwards were kicking the ball farther than Palmer, and Syd Jackson made some tremendous gains through the line and around the ends. Everything points to a wide open game with lots of passes being thrown this afternoon, and lots of pretty fast broken field running when the rival halfbacks, Jackson, Edwards, Palmer and Moore start running back the kicks.

McMaster have intentions concerning the O.R.F.U. championship, and require but a victory over Varsity to make the attempt at that added honour. If the game should happen to be won by Varsity, it is very doubtful that the students of this University will decide to make any further effort at football supremacy.

able to advise when the team is picked. Each faculty is to suggest a referee and two or three will be chosen.

Our curiosity was aroused by the sight of the five girls who were running up St. George St. last night about nine o'clock. They were wearing shorts and looked as if they might be training for a cross-country run. Can anybody shed any light on the subject?

PHARMACY LOSE IN BOX LACROSSE

Ford, Goal-Tender for Pharmacy, Suffers Broken Nose

U.C. buried Pharmacy under an avalanche of markers in an exciting box lacrosse fixture in the big gym at Hart House yesterday afternoon, the final score reading 19-8. The play was quite even despite the score and the Drugists did not deserve such a crushing defeat. The contest was strenuous all through, featuring plenty of stiff checking.

The soda-jerkers' artillery was very erratic, and with any kind of rifling they should have had several more counters. Coulter was the big noise of the pastime, scoring several tallies, and making the plays for various others. U.C. displayed a smooth passing attack and their sniping when in close was deadly.

Pharmacy held the potent U.C. aggregation to a 7-4 score during the first two chukkers but U.C. broke away during the third canto, bulging the twine nine times. An unfortunate incident marred the dying moments of the game when Ford, the Pharmacy net-minder, sustained a broken nose during a scramble near the goal.

SIR ROBERT FALCONER SPEAKS AT HART HOUSE

Sir Robert went on to state that he believed that society is constantly improving, for, he said, conditions of the poor and sick were not given the same sympathy as they are at the present time. He urged that the church support the principle of free analysis of the subject, since, "the more intolerable conditions are brought into the light, the more easily they are fought. This problem will not be solved at once, but there will constantly be partial solutions."

Sir Robert expressed his belief that the youth will rally to the cause when the greatness of the problems is clearly seen. "If Mussolini in Italy and Hitler in Germany can arouse the youth," he said, "I have hopes that the church will lead the youth of the nations to grip this cause."

WOMEN IN BUSINESS SUBJECT OF DEBATE

Man's physical and emotional nature is more suited to cold, hard business, while women's supersensitive natures are inclined to annoy a business man. "If women must work for a living, the callings open to them are nursing, librarianship, dietician and teaching. If they had remained in these professions the dole would never have been instituted."

Miss McCarthy, speaking for the negative, explained that women had originally been industrially employed—winning their agricultural labour while men hunted, and their weaving and spinning. Men had encroached on these rights gradually, until women were completely relegated to the duties of housekeeping. Their emergence into the business world was really just a reinstatement of their earlier occupations. "What about parents whose sons are all daughters?" queried Miss Fletcher for the opposition. "Who will then support them in their old age, if women are refused positions in the world of business? Most women work from economic necessity."

NO SWEEPING PLAN WILL BE OF BENEFIT

Can we expect to see any practical results come out of the investigation?

"I don't believe in the feasibility of any sweeping plan that will set the whole of humanity straight," Mr. Stevens took up the question. "There are certain practical problems involved,—the suffering of the farmer, the injustices to the workman, and others of a like nature, all of which can be adjusted from within. I shall be prepared at the next session of Parliament to offer very practical remedies to most of these things, which are capable of correction step by step. There is an absolute necessity in Canada for a reconstruction programme. Not some weird thing financed wholly by the government, but a mobilization of the country's credit, private and public, for that purpose."

"The federal parliament in my opinion has never seriously attempted to occupy the field of regulation of trade and commerce as set forth by the B.N.A. Act. We've regulated the outside field, but have never attempted to direct the internal field. We have never sought to work out a really effective system of regulating internal trade and industry."

VARSAITY HOCKEYISTS LOSE GAME BY 2-0

Impenetrable defence proved the difference between the two squads. Shipman had many close calls and saved brilliantly at times to keep the score sheet clean.

"Varsity nearly broke the tie in the second period. Charles was taking a breather at the penalty stand and the Canadians turned the Varsity supporters pale with their gangling attacks. Jeffrey snared the puck from the mass and raced for the other goal. He drew out Carey, and then proceeded to put the puck in the corner of the rink instead of the net. Soon after Keith tore down the ice but Carey outgassed him. The third period saw a tired and disorganized Varsity team who tried vainly to cope with the Royals' attack. Boston scored when he and Hamilton had Shipman at their mercy. A penalty to Porter near the end of the game gave the Varsity team a chance and they repeatedly drove shots at Carey, giving him many anxious moments."

For Varsity the second line of Poupore, Scragam and Jeffrey looked very good and played well together. Devine and Kieff were with the seniors in Tuesday night's battle and plainly showed the effects of it. The defence combination of Rey and Charles worked well together although they were weak in covering men inside the blue line.

PROFESSOR ALFORD LECTURES ON ART

eral idea of his subject in mind and to this basic outline he adds the creative touch that distinguishes his work. This distinction may be achieved in several ways. In Michelangelo's Birth of Adam, for instance, the effect of motion is implied by exaggerated and distorted positions of the central characters. Similarly Rembrandt attains the same effect by co-ordination of movement and by employing certain mechanical aids such as a variety in the texture of the brushes he uses.

"Harmony may be gained chiefly by co-ordination in the visual aspect of the work. Proper proportion and discreet use of light and shade were also used by many great painters to obtain harmony."

Professor Alford illustrated his talk with reproductions of the works of the masters which embodied the points he was attempting to make clear to his audience.

SCIENCE LECTURES BY DR. C. G. FRASER

To Discuss Work of Great Authorities in Various Research Fields

IN McLENNAN LABORATORY

The following series of lectures have been announced in connection with the work of the McLennan Laboratory. They will be given by Dr. Charles G. Fraser, Science Master of Harbord Collegiate Institute, on Friday evenings at 8 o'clock, Room 43, of the Physics Building. The general title might be announced as "Chats with Great Scientists."

Dr. Fraser has been paying considerable attention to the early development of scientific experiments and theories as they are depicted in the writings of the great men of the history of science from the earliest days.

December 7th.—This lecture will deal with the story of the development of elementary Mechanics as found in the works of Aristotle, Euclid, Archimedes, Lucretius, Leonardo da Vinci, Copernicus, Stevinus, Napier, Kepler, Descartes and Galileo.

December 14th.—This lecture will deal with the development of Mechanics and Acoustics as illustrated in the works of Torricelli, von Guericke, Boyle, Newton, Daniel Bernoulli, Westinghouse, Helmholtz, Plateau, Maxwell, Gibbs, Savers, Einstein, Leigh Page, Hooke, Sauveur, Chladni, Keignig, Weber and Bragg.

December 21st.—This lecture will deal with the development of relations between elementary Electricity and Chemistry, referring to the work of Dewar, Norman, Gilbert, Faraday, Crookes, Roentgen, Lavoisier, Bunsen, Pierre and Mme. Curie, Young, Pasteur and Fabre.

All of these lectures will be illustrated with slides and appropriate experiments.

H. H. STEVENS FEATURE OF HART HOUSE DEBATE

floor—some of which contained more humour than economics—Mr. Stevens as Honorary Visitor, rose, and, greeted with terrific applause and cheers, set forth his views. He began by comparing the House with the Parliament to which he is accustomed, commending the former for its broad-mindedness, its wit, and its evident desire to appreciate the problem.

Mr. Stevens defined Big Business as business of such a character that it dominates the group of industry to which it belongs. He stated that bigness does not necessarily mean either efficiency or financial success; for "we have learned in the past five years that those masters of Big Business are idols with feet of clay." He proved his charges by concrete illustrations, and went on to declare that the principle motive in mergers is to provide new lucrative securities for the investing houses; and pointed out the awful implications of this. He emphasized the question of personal responsibility, drawing tremendous applause for the remark that "One of the greatest problems of this age is the refusal of great men in business to accept responsibility for those operating under them." If an institution becomes too large for the director to know the condition of his employees, then the law must step in.

But "The Directors of Big Business are the real governors of our country," he definitely declared. He then showed something of existing conditions, and concluded that while Big Business has contributed much good to the country, it has done so with the result of human suffering, and is therefore a social evil.

I.S.S. QUESTIONNAIRE HAS LITTLE VALUE

only those who felt very strongly on the subject would answer. Also the students would not commit themselves because they were not certain what they really would do when the time came. Matters like these are settled not by questions but by a change of mind. It is obvious that unless everyone comes to the same opinions about peace all efforts will be useless. If one set of people wanted to fight they would and the others could not stop them by any other means than war. Towards this aim all international contacts are valuable, especially by students because they represent the rising generation. I think that the most valuable form of student contact is by groups of students of various countries gathering together in some summer camp to live together and discuss various matters. In that way they get to know and like each other.

"One of the main difficulties in the way of the abolishment of all international boundaries and conducting the world as one large country is that each group of people desires to maintain its traditions and ideals. For example the British are very keen on maintaining the old and established line of monarchy whereas other European countries desire republican government. But," he pointed out, "internationalism would not necessarily obliterate individualism. For example, various parts of Germany have maintained their own traditions in spite of political unity. Another example is Switzerland, which has even maintained three distinct languages. Already the radio has done much both here and in England to promote cultural internationalism."

"Another difficulty in dispensing with all boundaries and immigration barriers is that the standard of living is so different among the various parts of the world that employment competition would drive the labourers with the high living standards to the wall. As interchange of ideas becomes more rapid this difficulty disappears. And this may be overcome by some such arrangement as exists between Canada and Japan today, which is so much more amicable than that of the United States."

"Taken all in all," Dr. Taylor concluded, "wars are caused by selfishness and greed for power."

One cannot be a good citizen without education—that means more than the ability to read and write.

UNDERHILL TRACES PARTY GROWTH

Struggle for Power Most Keen Between Capitalists and Agriculturists

4 GROUPS REPRESENTED

A comprehensive survey of the growth of Canadian national political parties was given by Professor F. H. Underhill of University College yesterday in the fourth of a series of lectures on Canada.

The struggle for political power was between four classes, the landed, the manufacturing, the mercantile and the moneyed; but the two who contested the supremacy most keenly were the capitalists and the agriculturists.

With the attainment of responsible government in 1854, four groups appeared to represent Canada. In MacDonald's Liberal-Conservative party the strongest of these was the French Canadian Catholic party under the leadership of Cartier; the second was composed of Montreal "big business" men whose supporters were from Eastern townships; the third was the moderate urban element under Baldwin, and the fourth MacDonald's own Tories.

Professor Underhill concluded his lecture by asserting that the two-party system in Canada would never vanish, as it is necessary for such a country which demands it as a result of her international bargaining.

NATIONALIZATION OF ARMS OUTPUT SEEN AS WAR CURE

Smith Government Sustained in Session of U.C.
Parliament

PROFITEERING DENOUNCED

Vigorous Speeches from the Floor Support Both Factions

"Totally himself would blench to think of the huge Amaggonodon conceived by this Communist party," violently charged the Rt. Hon. Mr. Wm. Stobie, at the University College Parliamentary Club yesterday afternoon, as he accused the Opposition of dastardly motives for refusing to nationalize armaments. The question was: "Resolved that the nationalization of armament manufacture would affect the future occurrence of war." The Smith government was sustained and carried the motion.

The Rt. Hon. Mr. Wilfred Smith, Prime Minister, led off the debate, denouncing profit motives in arms supply and pointing out the ghastly effects of capitalistic munition manufacturers. He defined the Opposition stand, and maintained that those who thought nationalization of munitions a good thing, and even those who thought it a bad thing, should vote for the government; the Nocs consisting only of such as believed it would have absolutely no effect either way.

The Hon. I. Kaplansky, Leader of the Opposition, replied that the proposal was "merely a tiny item in the tremendous system which produces war." While admitting that armament firms may cause war to an insignificant extent, he saw no sign of a changed situation under government control. "Government is corrupt," he charged, "and nationalization would be nothing but an empty gesture."

Speeches from the floor were vigorous. The government was openly called "deceitful" and "spineless"; while its supporters retaliated by accusing the Opposition of "lusting for war," being "greedy, unreliable," and owning shares in armament firms.

STANDARDS CHANGE IN CENSORSHIP

Major J. C. Boylen Addresses
Victoria College Dramatic Society

MOVIES RESTRICTED

"The mental impact of the American films has given serious people concern. This is the background of censorship," declared Major J. C. Boylen, former chairman of the Ontario Board of Motion Picture Censors, speaking on the subject of "Censorship in the Movies," to the members of the Victoria College Dramatic Society at a meeting held in Alumni Hall last evening.

"There are changes in the standards of censorship; for example, Salome was banned in 1902, but last year received commendation, and scenes in which women were smoking used to be prohibited on the screen. Certain rules have been laid down by the British Board of Censors such as the prohibition of offensive burlesque of the marriage ceremony, comic suicides, methods of crime that might be imitated, and certain moral themes." In Canada we must guard against the use of gangster slang and we must take care that the prosecution in American

TRICOLOUR COACH TO STAY WITH TEAM

Kingston, Ont., November 29th.—Ted Reeve has again consented to coach the Tricolour senior team in the season of 1935. Announcement to this effect was made Saturday by T. A. McGinnis, chairman of the Athletic Board of Control.

While in Kingston to attend the complimentary banquet to the senior team last Friday night, Mr. Reeve was asked to return as coach next year. He consented immediately and stated that he felt confident, even at this early date, that the Tricolour will successfully defend the intercollegiate championship.

FATHER BULGAKOFF EMINENT VISITOR

Dean of Theological Academy in Paris Has Varied Career

TO SPEAK SATURDAY

A visitor of unusual interest is expected in the University on Saturday in the person of Father Sergius Bulgakoff, Dean of the Russian Theological Academy in Paris. His career has been a varied one. He was born and brought up in Russia—the son of a priest of the Russian Orthodox Church. After studying law in Moscow and London, he became a professor in Moscow University. His interest in social and political life led to him being a member of the second Duma and later one of the literary leaders of Russian Marxism. But the Marxian doctrine failed to hold him and he abandoned it to return to the Christian Church and ultimately to the priesthood. On his banishment from Russia he settled in Paris where, as Dean of the Theological Seminary, he has won distinction as a leader among the Russian exiles.

Father Bulgakoff will address a meeting under the auspices of the S.C.M. in the Music Room, of Hart House, on Saturday, December 1st at 7:30 p.m. His subject will be "The Church in Russia." The address will be followed by opportunities for questions. All students who may be interested are welcome to attend.

Trinity Frosh "Take The Cake" Songs Keep Sleepy Saints Awake

"378, 378, 378—and so on far into the night as the Frosh over at Trinity celebrated the demise of tyranny, in the form of their Sophs, yesterday. Crushed before an overwhelming mob of stampeding Freshmen, bewildered by unheard-of strategies and yet overconfident in their powers, the Sophs came out at the wrong end of a five-minute struggle in the quadrangle before Trinity House last night. The cause of all this was a poor cake—and believe us, it was a very poor cake, and the name given to it was the Cake fight, a tradition almost as old as that of hotbed of traditions itself. Dressed in their raggedest clothes the two factions clustered outside the House, the frosh received their cake (beautifully arranged to resemble a babies' milk-bottle of giant proportions, and presented to the year by their sisters the Saints) from the Dean of Residence and proceeded to charge with it, through the Sophs, up to the steps of the residence. Two hastily bought counterfeited cakes and several bags stuffed with paper added to the con-

Reorganization of Educational

"The present government is keenly interested in youth," declared Mrs. George Fulford, president of the Ontario Twentieth Century Liberal Clubs, speaking before the University Twentieth Century Club at Wymilwood last evening. Mrs. Fulford stressed the importance of youth's taking an active interest in politics.

She reported that at the Liberal Association's convention the question of the nationalization of armaments had been discussed and voted upon.

Mr. George Fulford, M.P.P. for Leeds, voiced similar sentiments on the importance of student opinions in civic affairs, stating that "the old time dogmatic politician is fast disappearing and is being replaced by the enlightened University graduate."

Beautiful Chorus Feature of Follies

Tonight in Hart House the 1934 edition of the U.C. Follies will be presented. There has been a complete sell-out. This year's spectacle is being produced on a scale which is not to be compared with the efforts of preceding years.

Last night a reporter from The Varsity chanced to walk in during the rehearsal of one of the choruses, featuring the most beautiful girls ever gathered in a single line-up. A splendid band furnishes the musical accompaniment in which the numbers were written especially for the show. Besides the gorgeous array of briefly clad baller dancers, many attractions including the Marx brothers in person, the Mirsky twins, Hart Buck, Bud Barry, and many others, will help to make the three acts the most stupendous in history.

In the swimming pool, the finest in water polo will be displayed by some of the stars from the Varsity team.

SIR ARTHUR CURRIE COMMEMORATION DAY

Montreal, Que., November 29th.—The death of Sir Arthur Currie, late Principal of McGill, who died at Montreal last November 30th, will be quietly remembered on the McGill campus on Friday.

Sir Arthur entered the Ross Memorial Hospital on November 7th, and lingered in a state of severe illness until the last day of the month. He was buried December 6th in Mount Royal Cemetery, on which day the greatest funeral parade in Canadian history took place. It is possible that church services will be held throughout Montreal on Friday.

GOOD BALANCE STRESSED

"The secret of walk and poise lies in the lift of the diaphragm," said Mrs. Diana Watts in her lecture and demonstration, "Beauty in Movement as a Living Art," yesterday afternoon at the Hart House Theatre. The lecture was under the auspices of the Physical Education Diploma Alumnae Association. "In the diaphragm lies the essential power of physical and mental poise," added Mrs. Watts.

Mrs. Watts stressed the true value of perfect balance. This is achieved only when the weight of the body is carried with the minimum amount of effort. The principle of balance is ably illustrated in the archaic sculpture of the sixth century Greeks.

"The true meaning of the word tension is the elastic force in the act of stretching. A special condition of the muscles makes tension possible in the human body. This act formed the preliminary of training by ancient Greeks."

Women to be Guests; Debate and Dancing Features of Evening

TUESDAY, DEC. 6

On Tuesday evening, December 4th, the U.C. Junior Common Room will be the scene of the joint meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society and the Women's Undergraduate Association.

"A debate, the subject of which is still under debate, will be a part of the evening's activity," stated S. M. Hermann, president of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Association. The teams will consist of two men and two women, representing their respective societies. The subject will be announced as soon as the committee comes to a decision.

A reproduction of the better parts of the U.C. Follies will also take place in order to enable such members of the undergraduate body of U.C. who do not see the Follies, to enjoy the highlights of that affair.

This, it must be understood, is a regular meeting of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, to which the president affirms, the women will be their guests, to add colour and dignity.

Special to The Varsity

Hamilton, Nov. 29.—The last Blue brigade in the football campaign fell yesterday on the rain-swept field at Hamilton before the attack of the Maroon-clad McMaster squad. Champions of the western division, the Maroons, yesterday mounted the throne of intermediate football supremacy when they defeated Varsity 7-1 for the intercollegiate title.

The battle for the intercollegiate title was waged on a soggy, slow field, which was further hampered by an intermittent rainfall. Close to one thousand fans braved the unfavourable weather to watch the ascent of McMaster to the foremost place in intermediate football circles.

Slim indeed was the margin of superiority enjoyed by the winners. Playing for breaks, and waiting for the inevitable fumbles resulting from a slippery ball, the Hamilton team let Varsity force the play and then capitalized on the Varsity errors.

NEW SCHOLARSHIPS IN ARTS COURSE

Men in Second and Third Years Eligible; Expenses for Year in China

AWARDED BY S.C.M.

A communication has been received at the registrar's office at Simcoe Hall concerning three scholarships open to male students at the University of Toronto who are in their second or third years in Arts, entitling them to free room and tuition at Ling Nan, China, for one year, commencing February 1, 1935.

The scholarships, which are to be awarded by the Student Chinese Movement, will be awarded to men of the finest Christian character, who have a genuine interest in international and inter-racial goodwill.

The scholarship is offered in order that Chinese students there may be given a good example of the occidental racial group and also to offset the unfavourable attitude of a large number of overseas Chinese returning to Ling Nan to study.

Eleven scholarships are now held at Ling Nan by Canadian and American students, who will be leaving next June. The three scholarships are offered now in order that there may be a group of three inducted into oriental life by the group now at Ling Nan, and they in turn may introduce a new group of twenty-four students who will be starting next fall.

The academic rating of Ling Nan University is high. Columbia University, Stanford, and the University of British Columbia accepting the Ling Nan degrees at par. Natural sciences, botany, government, economics and sociology are particularly good courses which the scholarship students may take. All instruction is in English, and it is not expected that the visitors will suffer any severe academic set-back. Any students who are interested may get full details from the Registrar's Office in Simcoe Hall.

The Suggested Health Insurance

A suggestion has been made to the Students' Administrative Council recently by a firm of insurance brokers, providing for a blanket policy of Health and Accident insurance for the whole student body. The proposal has been made that the S.A.C. should sponsor the insurance, making the premium of four dollars a compulsory fee for all undergraduates.

The plan as it has been suggested provides for insurance against illness or accidental injury, with a maximum payment set at $175.00 for any student. However, no claim will be considered for injuries sustained while practising or playing for any inter-collegiate sport (this can be covered by an extra fee) or for chronic ailments. Among the ailments which would not entitle a student to compensation are conditions of the nasal sinuses, tonsils, or appendix, tuberculosis, cystitis, venereal diseases or diseases not common to both sexes. Only dental work necessitated directly by an accident would receive compensation, and no illness resulting from the excessive use of narcotics or intoxicants.

Despite the fact that all of the more common ailments would receive no compensation, the scheme would be of obvious value to those involved in the numerous accidental injuries which occur each year. For those students who engage in sports of one kind or another it is a very good suggestion, but as a blanket insurance policy covering all students, it might not be received with so much favour. Its success would depend upon the co-operation of all students by refraining from making excessive claims, an ideal which is impossible of practical achievement. However, in any case, it would be an economy plan, costing little, and providing valuable protection against such unforeseen expenses as medical fees, hospital and nursing fees, and any other charges arising out of accidental illness.

The plan has been suggested to the S.A.C., and will come up for consideration at the next meeting. Students who wish to register an opinion of the project should get in touch with their S.A.C. representative immediately. He will be expected to express the views of his faculty at the next meeting of the Students' Council, and will appreciate any co-operation which is given.

We Want Vice!

Hollywood, because of religious pressure, has gone pure. Henceforward movies are to stop sticky sentiment into their audiences. We awaited this new development with apprehension. It now appears from "The Girl of the Limberlost", that our apprehensions were fully justified. It is fascinating to see one such picture. We gaze at it in amused horror. It is a prolonged mistake on the part of the producer. If such faults are encouraged, what will be the future of the American cinema? Now, at the beginning of the deluge, it is easy to avoid such films. But if we do not immediately make a decided stand by privately boycotting them, we shall find them at every theatre. Possibly the French pictures, if they remain untainted, will enjoy a sudden growth in popularity.

To be perfectly wholesome a movie need not be sentimental, or stupidly motivated. It need not be devoid of humour. It need not go to children's books for a plot. "As the Earth Turns" had none of these defects, and it was, in addition, a remarkably true picture of farm life and of human nature.

But "purity" is dangerous to handle. It leads to inevitable excesses of painfully serious sentimentality. Many valuable pictures, faithfully portraying the stirring crises of human life will be doomed to die unborn.

What will happen to humour in the coming era of cinematic pap? For, as James Stephens says, "Humour is the health of the mind." We do not mean to suggest that comedy and vice must go together, but rather that these melodramatic "Pure" movies have the effect of squelching all humour. It is to be feared that it will be a long time before we see the equal of "Tillie and Gus", "It Happened One Night", or "Sing and Like It",—none of which were immoral. Their sole sin is that of creating mirth, and of winking at life.

If then, purity is going to bring more movies like "The Girl of the Limberlost" and "Mrs. Wiggs", then please, oh please, give us vice!

McGill Daily.

TO WHAT END, THE FRATERNITY?

An unbiased discussion of this comparatively contentious subject may be of some value here in that it may provide enlightenment for the average student mind which is, perhaps, for the most part misinformed on the subject. To begin with, the fraternity as an institution on the local campus is principally a group of social organizations. Consequently it must be judged with that in mind. As such it can offer something of value in the life of the college student as an undergraduate and possibly in after years as well. To place the correct valuation on the fraternity is the difficult problem. In these days when dollars are counted and dispensed more scrupulously, the situation is being viewed in a much different light. Formerly, when luxuries were in greater demand, investments in entertainment and in social preoccupations were looked upon as being productive of a dividend worth while, intangible as it may seem now. As a result the value of the fraternity in practical terms has decreased. This is to be expected with the trend of events and conditions of the past few years. Necessity is being considered first and desirability next. The dividend which the fraternity offers remains the same but the student who contemplates membership in a fraternity now bases his action in this respect on the above qualification.

The fraternity provides for students, who have no home in Toronto, an abode which is perhaps closest to a home in comparison with residences, boarding houses, etc. Leaving home for the first time, the student who finds himself relegated to one room as his home, finds it repressive and often lonely. A house with the use of all the facilities of home is convenient to say the least. To live with friends is also an advantage and a help to incoming students as they encounter the problems of the freshman.

In this respect the value of the fraternity cannot be over-estimated. Of course, there is the prevalent idea that fraternities are dens of evil. Publicity of the type that finds its way into the press is usually unfavourable and exaggerated beyond reason. The conduct of fraternity men in fraternity houses is probably on a par with that of any like number of students living together anywhere on the campus. It is probably slightly better because the property is their own rather than that of a college or the University.

In the minds of some students, fraternity men and women are snobs who never allow people to forget that they are members of an institution set apart from the majority of the students, and that their financial and social status is worthy of recognition. Such is far from the truth. Some fraternity members have worked their way through University supporting themselves entirely from their own earnings. A good many scholarships won each year are earned by fraternity members so that the belief that it is impossible to belong to a fraternity and achieve scholarship standing, is mistaken. Then there is quite often heard the howl that fraternity cliques control University activities, though this has not been audible so much of late. In any organization or activity on the campus where fraternity members and non-members are working together, there is never any indication of division or competition between the two groups as groups. In the social, political and athletic circles of the University there is no trace of the influence of fraternities. Each one has its own social life and as a group they foster sport between themselves.

HUSBANDS

Husbands are what women marry. They have two hands and two wives but never more than one idea at a time.

Like Turkish cigarettes, they are all made of the same material, only some come in nicer wrappings.

Men are divided into three classes: prizes, surprises and consolation prizes. Making a husband out of a man is the most difficult art in the world; it requires patience, skill, faith, hope and (in particular) charity, because

If you flatter a man it makes him unbearable; if you don't you bore him to death.

If you permit him to make love to you he gets tired of you in the end; if you don't he gets tired of you in the beginning.

If you agree with him, you fail to interest him; if you argue with him, you fail to charm him.

If you believe him, he thinks you are a sucker; if you don't believe him he thinks you are a cynic.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

Vic has a 50-50 net total from two playoff games in which it had teams entered last night. The Saints took their junior basketball squad for a 17-12 ride in the first semi-final match. But the Vic baseball nine swamped St. Mike's 25-7 in the first of the baseball playoffs.

It was a great game to watch—that basketball contest—but neither team was up to its real capacity, especially the Saints. The game tended to be sloppy at times, especially at first. The strain of playing in the semi-finals seemed to be too much for both outfits in the opening minutes of the match. The Vic sextette realized what it was all about before the Saints did, and their defence did some beautiful work, on which the forwards failed to capitalize. The Saints held a scoring lead throughout but just didn't get that "something" into their game which makes for real basketball. Either squad will have to spruce up to beat the U.C. Seniors—at least if they are playing as they did on Friday when they defeated Vic.

The Vic defence turned in a lovely performance (and so did the Saints' for that matter). Betty Jenkinson was on her job every minute and Alice Bassnet and Ruth Young gave her some real support. Gladys Kipper did some smart checking the few minutes she was on the floor. The forward line had a number of chances to score but their aim was off. Muriel Beaton did some nice offensive work and Dot Henderson and Marion Best made some very neat plays on the forward line. All in all the laurels go to Vic despite the score.

The Saints' defence was right in there every minute. Kay Grubbe was checking hard and Ellen Wilson got the jump with no difficulty. Edie Ardagh and Mary Carle picked up a lot in the second period, but were not really on their game even at that. The whole Blue and Grey team lacked their usual snap and precision. But in spite of it all they took the game—and in the end that is what counts!

The Vic nine played real ball last night and easily outclassed the Irish team. The Scarlet and Gold squad made some spectacular catching and their heavy hitting and ability to steal bases gave them a decisive win. Again the Maxwell-Blondell battery for Vic was the outstanding feature of the game. St. Mike's weakest point is their fielding and they also lose out by being too honest—they cannot seem to bring themselves to steal a base.

The Vic Jr.-St. Hilda's basketball classic was very poorly attended. The Trinity team had their athletic banquet, but what excuse can Vic men or women offer, to say nothing of the Saints? Vic was a trifle more loyal than the supporters of the winning squad, but the general turnout was quite pathetic. The next game is scheduled for 7.30, Tuesday, Dec. 4. Let's fill the place!

Do not forget the Life-Saving Class at 12 o'clock today at the Lilian Massey pool.

VICTORIA WINS 25-7 IN BASEBALL CLASH

The Vic nine swamped St. Mike's team by the score of 25-7 in last night's women's baseball clash.

Gretta Maxwell for the Scarlet and Gold, played a brilliant game behind the bat, while Jean Blondell, pitcher, gave her usual stellar performance. Ruby Townsend, on the second sack, displayed excellent fielding.

Vic: G. Maxwell, J. Blondell, R. Townsend, V. O'Neil, M. Eastwood, E. Hart, R. Cook, L. Bull, J. Randall. St. Mike's: P. Simon, M. Mossbaugh, M. McGuire, E. Whelan, P. Schurr, D. Mareh, J. McMartin, I. Allen, V. Lynch, K. Carroll.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

While preparations are under way at Pasadena for the accommodation of something in the neighbourhood of 100,000 fans for the Rose Bowl game there on New Year's Day, another body of men are making preparations for the disclosure of some of the evil practices in which the colleges indulge before they can attract 100,000 people to see their boys play football. Indications are at present that Alabama will be the logical choice for the game with Stanford on New Year's Day. Stanford, of course, have the last word as to who their opponents will be but Alabama, should they defeat Vanderbilt today, will probably get the invitation.

Other possibilities for the invitation are Colgate, and Pittsburgh. The performance of these teams in the next few days, may, of course, change the entire situation. Minnesota have been the most most impressive team to date and would have been the candidates had they so desired. However, they declined the nomination and as a result the opposition for the Indians is still undecided.

Two weeks after the Rose Bowl game, a meeting will be held in Atlanta and the procedure the various universities have adopted in an effort to build up strong teams will come in for discussion. Dissension is rife among many of the faculties, over the conditions which surround the football clubs in particular. There seems to be three particular reasons for the dissatisfaction and the depression give rise to all three.

When things were booming a few years back many of the colleges built themselves large plants for the production of athletic talent and now find that they have to pay for them. The one way to do this is to have a football team of reputation. A football team of reputation does not grow of its own accord and so one must be built up. The building up process and the methods employed thereby, is what is causing trouble.

Another difficulty is that other branches of athletics, while they have to be conducted, fail to attract the customers. The shot has to be paid and as the football club is making money the football club pays. Therefore a football club which can pay is necessary. There is another reason which strikes us as humorous. It seems that in some places they have difficulty in getting students. Not in getting the students to go to lectures, but getting them signed up to go. Again the football team with the reputation is used for advertising the college, and a good football team is again essential.

So the meeting at Atlanta promises much by way of explaining why some colleges have such ferocious looking individuals on the football team. We are not suggesting that ferocious looking individuals could not be students, but it always seemed strange to us that so many unlikely looking students, and likely looking football players, were wearing college uniforms. Anyway the professors are promising a complete disclosure of the situation, so we may look forward to finding out what attracted some of the boys who made good—on the football field—to college.

As far as Varsity is concerned the football season is officially over. The intermediates folded up before the attack of the McMaster Maroons at Hamilton yesterday. McMaster completed a long pass just before half time which gave them a touch and they added two more singles before the whistle ended the game and the campaign. Varsity made a fight of it in the last few minutes but although they had their opponents backed to their own end of the field they were unable to force over the tying points. So ends the football season.

Up until recently it has been conceded that the last 10 yards of a football field form the toughest kind of going, but some members of Trinity College are ready to contest this principle. The Trinity first year last night succeeded in bucking a cake in from about that distance, through into the halls of the house. The occasion was the annual cake fight and first year won, on points, but it took several experts to identify the cake when it emerged from the quadrangle into the hall.

TWO BLUE TEAMS MEET WEST END 'Y'

Senior and Intermediate Tilts Promise Basketball Fans Excitement

GAMES TOMORROW

Tomorrow night will see the opening of Varsity's regular schedule in senior and intermediate basketball when West End "Y" plays host to the two Blue teams. The intermediates will engage in their tilt at 7.30, while the senior game is scheduled to start at 8.30.

Although last week's exhibition game did not produce particularly good basketball, Varsity expects to field well-polished teams in both contests. However, the visiting squads are taking the coming encounters seriously, as the West Enders are reputed to have some exceptionally good players.

The men who will probably compose the first team of Varsity's seniors will consist of Connelly and Gold on the defence, Munro at centre, and Marks and Meagher on the forward line. These men have been showing excellent teamwork in practices of late and are expected to be the big threat to the "Y" team, six of whom are reported to be over 6 feet in height. Bodrug, Gordon, Crowley, Levy and Mensel compose another well balanced team which should prove a source of trouble to their opponents. Newman, Willis, Vandercreek and Fitton will round out the team.

CODY ADDRESSES TRINITY ATHLETES

Speeches, Toasts, Songs, and Prizes Feature Banquet Last Night

COACH BLACKWELL LEAVES

"An inferiority complex", "The outlook of a pessimist", and "A thorough discontent with things as they are", were the principles that Archdeacon Cody, President of the University, laid down in his speech last night at the annual dinner of the Trinity College Athletic Association. Other speakers at the banquet were the Provost of the College, Dr. J. Althouse, Professor MacKenzie and Les Blackwell, Trinity's famed football coach. A variety of yells and songs, toasts to the King, the College and the Athletic Association, and the annual award of challenge and individual cups and prizes made the dinner very entertaining and prepared the men of college for the strenuous Cake Fight and serenade activities to come. The sad side to the banquet came out when it was made known that Les Blackwell had decided that his coaching days were over. Les has coached the Trinity team for four years now and has produced some of the finest teams on the interfaculty campus.

McMASTER MAROONS WIN FINAL GAME

ing exchange in which first one team and then the other had the advantage. Varsity first took a slim lead, midway through the second period when Edwards hoisted one to Apps, who was rouged. They hung to their slim lead for the brief space of five minutes, when a Moore to Palmer pass was completed for a touchdown. The convert failed, and the halfway mark was reached with McMaster four points in front.

Varsity made one brilliant effort in the second half which netted nothing at all. Yielding ground steadily before Palmer's consistent kicking, the Blue team looked to be in position for a major, when Ripley took a lateral pass and dashed 90 yards before being downed. The advantage was lost, however, when the referee ruled that it was a forward pass and the Blue team, instead of gaining an additional five points, lost yards.

The teams entered the last quarter with the score still reading 5-1. It was a hard fought session, but the winners were just a shade stronger and twice forced Varsity to yield singles. The last came when Cox intercepted a Varsity forward at the Blue 40 yard mark. Brown picked up 20 more yards on a fake kick and then kicked for a rouge.

Sid Jackson led an attack in the last few minutes, fighting his way to mid-field from the 25 mark. He again went for a long gain in the last few minutes and then a long Miller to Buck pass, over the McMaster line, failed by inches. Varsity lost possession and their last chance went wild with the next attempted forward pass. McMaster held on till the whistle ended the game.

McMaster: Flying wing, Pitt; halves, Cox; snap, Palmer; insides, Hibbins, Apps, Palmer, Moore; quarter, B. S. Palmer; middles, Lennie Septon; outsides, Hodd, Gathercole; subs, Low, Peters, Laughren, Turnbull, Benson, Brown, Barry.

SAINTS DEFEAT VIC IN SEMI-FINALS

Victors Fight Hard for Gains Against the Powerful Defence

St. Hilda's came out on top of a 17-13 tally last night when they clashed with the Vic Juniors in the first game of the semi-final basketball series. The Scarlet and Gold squad did some lovely ball handling and their plays clicked beautifully. The Saints gave a more ragged exhibition and had to fight hard for every gain.

The Vic defence held solidly throughout the game and in the first few minutes had the Blue and Grey forward line dazed.

Vic Juniors: M. Best (1), M. Beaton (7), E. McIntosh, M. Sedgewick, D. Henderson (5), B. Jenkinson, R. Young, A. Bassnet, S. Brown, G. Kipper.

St. Hilda's: E. Ardagh (3), M. L. Carre (11), M. McDonald (2), J. Kirk (2), I. Wallbridge, E. Palmer, K. Grubbe, E. Wilson, M. Dignan.

EMMANUEL WINS VOLLEYBALL TILT

Emmanuel College succeeded in defeating Knox College two games out of three in an interfaculty volleyball game in the little gym yesterday.

Knox were successful in winning the first game by the score of 17-15 coming from behind to take a hard fought game. In the second game Knox were overwhelmed by 15-0 and looked woefully weak. Emmanuel proceeded to take things very easily and won the final game 15-8. East was the outstanding player on the floor, his terrific spike shots completely baffling Knox and accounting for the majority of Emmanuel's points. While Weir and Jamieson were the pick of the Knox squad.

BLUES SWAMPED BY ST. MIKE'S, 10-0

All Hopes for S.P.A. Trophy Shattered by Last Night's Defeat

O'FLAHERTY STARS

Any hopes Varsity had of capturing the S.P.A. trophy were drastically shattered at Maple Leaf Gardens last night when St. Mike's Majors swamped the junior Blue puckchasers by 10 to 0. The Irish had a big edge on the play throughout and were just a bit too experienced for Varsity's ambitious youngsters.

St. Mike's scored three times in each of the first two periods and four times in the third to build up their ten goal margin, but in spite of these figures, Varsity turned in their best hockey in the final frame and came close to scoring on several occasions. O'Flaherty, with three goals, was St. Mike's leading scorer, while Smith with two and an assist, Crawford with three assists, and Robinson with two goals, were also prominent in the Irish attack. The other goal getters were Mitchell, Hamilton and Corrigan.

The Varsity team showed lack of practice but by the time the regular season gets under way they should be a greatly improved team. The defensive play of O'Leary and Sissons was the most encouraging feature of last night's game, while both McGoe and Campbell gave promise of developing into first class goalies.

Varsity: Goal: McGoe; defence: Sissons, O'Leary; centre: Shultis; wings: Morrison, Fremes; subs: Botterrell, Campbell, Walkey, Willmott, Flingsby, Leslie, Murray, Buton, and Sanson.

law courts is not thought to be typical of Canadian methods.

We must endeavour to maintain the British viewpoint in the exercise of censorship and hope the time will come when we will not have to rely upon New York for an influence which has come to be felt so strongly.

The president of the Dramatic Society, Mr. Norman Nichol, disclosed the arrangements which have been made by the executive for the major production of the society this year.

"The Crime at Blossoms", a modern satirical drama by Mordaunt Shairp, will be presented in Hart House Theatre on the evenings of December 12, 13 and 14. Mr. Nichol emphasized the fact that this year's production is expected to surpass that of former years in quality and interest.

VILLARD SPEAKS ON PERIL OF WAR

Holy Blossom Synagogue Holds
"Forum" Discussing Peace Measures

"The horrors of the next war would be unbelievable and the civilization of today would be utterly destroyed if the nations were foolish enough to break the peace which they promise to maintain but whose increased armaments deny," asserted Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard at the Holy Blossom Synagogue when speaking on "The Fate of Europe" at the first meeting of the Forum last night.

Europe cannot be saved unless there is a revision of the Treaty of Versailles, and though war is futile to settle disputes war clouds are gathering everywhere and the spirit of nationalism was never so intense.

Leading statesmen agree that armaments are greater than ever, that they do not guarantee but menace peace, that they are driving the world into bankruptcy, but that every country with the exception of Germany and other countries which were disarmed after the war must increase their armaments. Only yesterday it was officially announced that Britain is to almost double her air force, and in the United States, 85 cents of every dollar goes to pay for past or future wars.

Disarmament, a drastic lowering of tariffs, and boycotting aggressive nations, are the practical methods of retaining peace. The citizens of every country should hold fast to the ideals of great nations, international laws should be enforced and internationalism fostered to such an extent that national flags would become meaningless.

Eaton Auditorium

When an organist, twenty years of age, is of sufficient excellence to make an international concert tour, that is interesting, but when that organist is a woman, it is amazing. Such was the case at the Eaton Auditorium last night when Renee Nizan gave a brilliant recital.

The programme was also unusual in that more than two-thirds consisted of French music. This choice was quite justified because of the preponderance of the French amongst organ composers of the last fifty to seventy years. Her opening group were selections from Bach. These were not particularly thrilling, but were well done, and at all times, clear.

The balance of her programme was of the modern French school, and in these selections her talent was much more in evidence.

The Finale from the 6th Symphony of Dupre showed the artist's talent at her best. The two movements played whetted the appetite for more.

MANY INDIFFERENT TO QUESTIONNAIRE

Reasons Are Ambiguity and Unfairness of the Questions

STUDENTS ALSO LACK TIME

As everyone knows, the I.S.S. questionnaire was only answered by some 240 students out of the more than 7,000 on the campus. The Varsity set out to find the reason for this apparent indifference to such a vital topic. As revealed by student opinion they were chiefly these: many students could not afford the time necessary to fill out and deliver the questionnaire. Others felt that the questions were ambiguous, inconsistent, or unfair; and still others maintained that present opinion was no guide to future action. Here are some typical opinions:

K. M. Mayall of IV Forestry: The questionnaire covered the topics concerned quite fully. I was definitely interested in it, but I simply had no time to give it my attention.

A. Silverman of IV Political Science, abstained from answering the questionnaire because the questions were inconsistent among themselves, unless one adopted an uncompromisingly pacifist attitude. The same sentiment was expressed by H. D. Bett of Honour Science, U.C.

Fred Branscombe of II English and History, U.C.: "I do not believe the individual can say definitely what his action may be in circumstances completely foreign to him. As an index to the present thoughts of a section of the students, the questionnaire may be reliable; but as a guide to our action in the event of war it may be thoroughly misleading."

Sydney Hermant of IV Law, U.C., stated that he filled out the questionnaire completely but never got around to turning it in. Several others were in a similar position, and Dan Levy of III Meds suggested that a box be placed at a convenient place in each faculty would have multiplied the replies received many times.

Miss E. H. McAndrew, II Moderns, assumed that the questionnaire was limited to men students only; but she deemed it an interesting list covering all the important points.

Miss Freddy Chapman was another of those interested in the list who failed to find time to send it in.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Ottawa—Bennett and Hepburn yesterday agreed on a policy regarding the trans-Canada highway, 135 mile section in Northern Ontario to be begun very shortly. Hepburn also agreed to accept $750,000 monthly grants during the winter months, in lieu of the $4,750,000 he had been asking.

Toronto—A fire of suspicious origin demolished two barns at the Thorncliffe racetrack yesterday.

Corning, N.Y.—The second 200-inch mirror for the world's greatest telescope was completed Saturday at the Corning glass works.

The Maple Leafs' winning streak was broken Sunday by the Detroit Red Wings to the tune of 3-0. It had been stretched to eight games by their victory over St. Louis the previous night.

Washington—United States army tank made record speed by travelling over sixty miles an hour on Saturday. A whole fleet of such tanks is to be constructed during 1935.

Rome—France and Germany agreed Saturday on the price to be paid to France for her mines in the Saar territory, in the event of the plebiscite's favouring Germany.

STUDENTS MUST ACT

There is a possibility that the University of Toronto will send a delegate to the International Congress of Students, to be held at Geneva, Switzerland, on December 29, 30, 31. A meeting will be held at the Women's Union on December 5, and will (Continued on Page 4)

MCGILL ESTABLISHES ANTI-WAR LEAGUE

Announcement of the establishment of study groups has been made by the McGill League Against War and Fascism. The purpose of these study groups is to discuss the causes of war, Fascism, civil liberties in Canada, and college life in Fascist countries.

The name of the League will be changed to "The McGill League Against War and the Suppression of Civil Liberties." This decision was reached as a result of the fact that many students felt that, although they are willing to join and be active in an organization against war, they do not know enough about Fascism to condemn it without having studied it.

The internationally known Professor Salvemini, who, because of his liberal views, was forced to leave Italy after the triumph of the Fascists, will address the next general meeting of the League.

STARTLING CHARGES ARE MADE AS M.P.P. ATTACKS POLICIES

ATTRACTIVE PICTURES FOR SECOND SERIES OF FRENCH FILMS

Tentative arrangements have already been made for the showing of a second series of French talking pictures after Christmas, according to Miss M. B. MacDonald, of the Department of French, University College. The present series will be concluded this coming Saturday when "L'Abbe Constantin" will be the feature attraction.

"The second group of pictures," said Miss MacDonald, "will be shown only if it is thought that adequate support has been given the first series. The second set of films would include Les Misérables, La Dame aux Camélias, and Maria Chapdelaine, the outdoor scenes of the latter being filmed in (Continued on Page 4)

'THE VARSITY' TAKES STAND

"The arguments in the editorial columns of The Varsity at the time women were campaigning for the right to attend Toronto University take you back to the dark ages," said Miss Nellie Spence at the Women's Undergraduate Association's Jubilee dinner last Friday evening. Although at first The Varsity columns were in favour of the admittance of women to the University, they later changed their policy, and became definitely antagonistic.

"The student body, as a whole, however, was most favourable," Miss Spence went on to say, "even going to the length of passing a resolution that the men would welcome women into the University with open arms."

Miss Spence being one of the pioneers of the movement, had been invited to address the gathering consisting mostly of women undergraduates. She gave a most delightful talk in which she sketched the history of those trying to be attended by representatives of the (Continued on Page 4)

FOLLIES MAKE HISTORY AS COLLEGIANS REVEL

Innovations in Historical U.C. Event Prove a Success

The U.C. Follies must be worth while when engineers will go so far as to shave off, at dire risk to their reputation, the beautiful beards that a week's abstinence from razor usage will produce. They were well regarded on Friday evening, however, when the 1934 edition of this historical frolic took place.

The "original singing-dancing pot pourri" produced by Saul Rae and featuring Bernie Schaffer, Frank Beer, Court Benson, Jack and Mervin Mirsky, Buddy Shapiro, Hart Buck, Jack McRea, Don Stewart, The Four Mad Marxes and The St. George St. Girls put on a show in the Great Hall that made history for the Follies and sent the party off to a great start. Three orchestras were necessary to accommodate the sell-out house for the dancing.

Patrons were Mrs. D. G. Creighton, Mrs. W. J. McCurdy and Mrs. J. F. Parkinson. The committee in charge consisted of S. J. Rea, A. S. Lanning, S. M. Hermant, H. L. Rowntree and F. D. L. Stewart.

Fulford Attacks Accounting Practices of Former Government

ADDRESSES CLUB MEMBERS

Startling charges against the accounting practices and irregularities in government administration during the provincial regime of the Hon. G. S. Henry were made by George Fulford, M.P.P., for Leeds, speaking to the University Twentieth Century Club at Wymilwood.

Sixty million dollars has been lost and can not be accounted for, because no accounts were kept, he said. It is missing from the two hundred millions highway debt, and its loss has been discovered only recently by investigators working under the Hepburn government.

Numerous irregularities in the administration of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway were also uncovered, he charged, stating that hereafter all figures for all departments will be tabulated and published in the press.

In reporting the activities of the Hepburn government, according to Mr. Fulford, "The Globe is only the most accurate of the Toronto papers. It is not completely so, by any means. For instance, economies of $1,000,000 a month in the cost of administration were never claimed by the government."

The youthful M.P.P. was fearless in his criticism of Ottawa politics. "Too much of the American system has crept into Canadian affairs. I am not belittling all American politics, but patronage is the most distasteful of duties. (Continued on Page 4)

CRAIG DESCRIBES SLUM CONDITIONS

Guest of Engineering Society
Advocates Building Programme

CENTRAL BANK REQUIRED

Mr. J. H. Craig of the architectural firm of Craig and Madill was the guest of the Engineering Society yesterday, speaking on "A National Housing Programme for Abolishing Slums, Reducing Taxation and Providing Employment." Mr. Craig's plan has been endorsed by Dr. Bruce and by leading economists.

Speaking first of the economic background which makes slum-clearance especially feasible at this time, Mr. Craig stated that the United States has been deprived over three years of 287 billion dollars worth of needed materials which their industrial plants were fitted to provide. Also, 16 million persons were underfed, and sixty per cent are inadequately housed. He stated that re-employment must precede recovery. "We must have a measure of permanent stability," he added.

"In Toronto," said Mr. Craig, "are 3,000 houses below the minimum health standard, leading to disease, immorality and crime." These could be done away with by the Dominion of Canada, through the Central Bank (which was founded for such a purpose) lending money at two per cent for the purpose.

Under this scheme it was demonstrated that most owners of condemned buildings could afford to replace them, repaying the government over a period of years. This work would not have any negative effect on industry, as the buildings could not otherwise be replaced. The building industry has materials, and so is the logical one in which to (Continued on Page 4)

SENIOR PUCKSTERS COLLECT HONOURS IN SMART GAME

Blue Team in Winning Column as Hinde and Dauche Outplayed

3-0 VICTORY

Defence Effective, Charles Features Rushes and Scores

By virtue of their 3-0 victory over Hinde and Dauche in a T.H.L. game played last Saturday afternoon at the Bloor Street Arena, Varsity's Senior "B" pucksters have the honour of being the first Blue hockey team to break into the winning column in a league game this season. Varsity were every bit worthy of their victory, outplaying their weaker rivals in almost every department of the game.

The "Bees", still smarting from a 2-0 reverse that they sustained last Wednesday, played a greatly improved game. The defence, although rather hesitant about stepping into opposing players, checked them effectively and gave Loughed in goal good support. The end to end rushes of Bruce Charles, was one of the features of the game, and the lanky defence man was finally rewarded when he slammed in a goal in the third period.

Both Blue forward lines played well together and each scored one goal. Valquette opened the scoring on a pass from Morgan, after fourteen minutes of play in the first period. Jeffrey added the second, in the next period, on a solo effort, beating Zacher with a hard backhand shot to the upper corner of the net.

In the third stanza Hinde and Dauche put on the pressure and although they threw one or two scares into the Varsity supporters, they were unable to score. With only three minutes left to play, Charles broke up a gangling attack, raced down the ice and gave Varsity a three goal advantage, which they protected until the final bell rang.

Hinde and Dauche: Goal, Zacher; defence, Bowcott and Carr; forwards, H. Cibles, A. Wilson, Clark Heyd; subs, J. White, R. Waddington, Cecil Heyd, A. Graham, Ivy.

Varsity: Goal, Loughed; defence, Driscoll, Charles; forwards, Poupore, Jeffrey, McIlquham; subs, Bigelow, Morgan, Valquette, Burke, Bower.

HISTORY REVEALED BY ARCHITECTURE

Professor Curlely Speaks on Egyptians and Their Customs

PROPORTION STRESSED

"The architecture of any country is determined largely by the raw material at its disposal," stated Professor C. T. Curlely in his lecture on Egyptian Architecture at the Museum on Friday afternoon. Thus, as the speaker went on to point out, since Egypt had little or no timber, the buildings of that country must necessarily be fashioned of stone. Moreover, the free land of the country, having given out at a very early date, labour was both cheap and plentiful.

The Egyptian mind is characterized by simplicity and his work is so natural that it could easily be imagined as the course of action chosen by the ordinary Canadian farmer. Slowly and methodically the Egyptian worked, de- (Continued on Page 4)

VARSLITY LOSES INTERMEDIATE GAME

West End Y Basketeers Win
First Game of Season
32-18

PLAYING LACKEO FINISH

Mac McCutcheon's Seconds suffered their initial loss of the 1934-35 case season when the West End Y basketeers handed them a 32-18 reverse on Saturday night. The game, played at the West End Y, marked the opening of the T. and D. intermediate basketball series for the season.

The contest was marked by play that is typical of early contests in any type of sport, being of the ragged sort. Due to the fact that the tilt was only the second scrimmage for the Blues, their play lacked a finishing touch beneath their opponents' baskets. The Purple and Gold crew, on the other hand, played in mid-season form and dominated play throughout. While the Varsity aggregation passed wildly and missed many opportunities the West End team took advantage of every defensive lapse on the part of the Blues.

A summary of the game shows that the Y crew dominated every department of the tilt. The Blues were only able to sink five baskets throughout the (Continued on Page 4)

STORM ON CAMPUS TREATED AS JOKE

Controversy Raging, Result of Charges Laid Against Staff

NOTHING SERIOUS

Vancouver, B.C., November 30th.—A storm of controversy is raging on the campus of the University of British Columbia as a result of charges of Communistic tendencies laid against the staff and students. The Hon. R. H. Pooley accused professors of instilling radical ideas into the minds of the students through the medium of their classroom lectures. According to information solicited from the members of the staff of U.B.C., these accusations are unjust and absolutely without foundation in fact. The whole matter is being treated by the students as a big joke. They regard the accusation as being unwarranted and no serious repercussions are expected.

as Varsity Takes Initial

SCORE 37-28

Lead Changed Hands Four Times in First Half of Play

Displaying a scoring punch which suddenly came to life in the second half of a very fast and exciting basketball game played at the Y gymnasium on Saturday night, Lew Hayman's Big Six Blues downed the West End Y basketeers 37-28. The struggle marked the initial official victory for the Blues in the 1934-35 Big Six loop, and the second consecutive loss for the Purple and Gold squad.

The tilt started out at a very fast clip and both teams maintained this pace throughout the entire game, neither showing any signs of slowing up as the struggle went on. As a result play switched rapidly from one end of the floor to the other in beautifully executed manoeuvres. However, the methodical style of play which the Y crew employ in their opponents' zone tended to slow up play at times.

A summary of the game gives the Blues a slight edge on the evening's performance. Hayman's crew sank thirteen baskets to their opponents' twelve. Twenty-seven foul shots were handed out during the night, the Blues getting twenty of the free throws. Of these they netted eleven while the West End aggregation counted on four of their seven free throws.

As the summary shows the struggle was close throughout, especially in the first half when the lead changed hands four times. In the final half the lead changed only on three occasions. At seven periods during the contest both squads struggled along on even terms.

At the very start of the game the Purple and Gold team were given an opportunity of taking the lead, but they (Continued on Page 4)

MEN'S PRESS CLUB OFFICIALLY LAUNCHED

Prominent Journalist Gives Timely Address Before
Club Members

Mr. Tim Reid, a former Varsity scribe, returned to the fold after an interval of fifteen years to address the newly formed Men's Press Club at a luncheon meeting at one o'clock Friday. During the interval of fifteen years Mr. Reid has gained a broad experience of newspaper work, having spent ten years as City Editor of the Toronto Star, and he was able to give his audience a very helpful and entertaining address on journalism.

Mr. Reid discussed the various methods by which a newspaper can act as a useful public servant, and illustrated his address with numerous anecdotes from his own career. "It is the duty of the newspaper," he declared, "to let the public know whether its government is performing its duties in the proper manner, without fear or favour, and for this reason newspapers often run afoul of the government. However," he added, "after the tumult has died down, the press usually is credited with having acted in the best interests of the people."

Staff Meeting

There will be a meeting of the entire staff of The Varsity in the Women's Union, 79 St. George St., at 5 p.m. today. Tea will be served at 4.30. All reporters are expected to be present.

An Interesting Experiment

Today sees the beginning of the second week of the two-week course of training for young men from rural communities which is being held in the Economics Building. The University of Toronto is justly proud of the fine work carried on by the Extension Department each year, and surely this is a further indication of the splendid work which is being done.

This course is the result of a desire on the part of the directors of the Extension work, to meet an increasing demand in rural districts for adult education. There are great numbers of young people in the country districts who want more education and who are doing a lot of good thinking, but who need some direction for their thinking.

The young men who are at present attending this training course are receiving instruction in economics and other subjects of current importance with the idea that they will return to their own localities and use this material to organize further study groups. During the slack season on the farm, the Extension Department aims to establish schools, which would last from one to three months, with the co-operation of the High School principal and the leading men of the community and with the assistance of those who are attending this course.

It seems most fitting that the Extension Department of the University of Toronto should lead the way in this work. It is to be hoped that each of the young men who are here will carry back the ideas and enthusiasm to make this venture a real success.

TO WHAT ENO, THE FRATERNITY?

To say the fraternity has no influence in campus activities is a broad statement which no doubt could stand qualification. Their influence is not direct but it must be remembered that the leading students in these activities are, to a great extent, fraternity members. This is not alarming. It is to be expected because the fraternities seek to have their memberships consist of the outstanding students or as many of them as it is possible to secure. The distribution is not centred in any one fraternity nor in a few fraternities and as a result one or a few fraternities cannot influence any activity unduly.

Under the system that exists here and in most universities, membership is by invitation only. As a result, even though every avenue of contact is utilized, men and women who are prepared to join cannot do so unless they have some means of contact with present or past members. Some means of securing this contact could easily be provided. In most universities, official recognition makes possible the solution of many problems of this nature. At the same time rushes around who have no intention of joining any house, yet they do not hesitate to sponge on fraternity hospitality as long as possible for entertainment and board. This condition is deplorable at this University and probably exists elsewhere as well. The financial stress of present times to some extent forces fraternities to tolerate this situation. It is now that the efficiency of the organization of fraternities is being put to a test.

Some are being sorely tried and some have faltered. The assets of fraternity membership here are limited and by no means indispensable. They are an advantage but under no consideration a necessity. The fraternity provides a circle of friends for those whose opportunity of securing same is limited. Likewise it is possible for the same need to be fulfilled to as satisfactory a degree by other organizations and activities. Many misconceptions of fraternity life are prevalent, both favourable and unfavourable.

In summary it may be said that prejudices against the fraternity as an institution, in truth, are evidence of a lack of knowledge of the subject. On the other hand it may be said, and equally in truth, that the fallacy and sophism is repulsive that emanates from those who place a value, which is artificial, on fraternity membership because it denotes the privilege of wearing a jewelled pin and signifies social distinction.

REFORMERS! YOU'RE A WASHOUT!

Reformers are wont to complain, with a certain amount of truth, that virtue has a very difficult time of it in making any considerable headway against vice, and that wrong-doing seems to carry with it more appeal. Partly this may be blamed simply on the contrariness of human nature, but a great deal of it can be justly blamed on the reformers themselves; for, in their anxiety to be effective they overstep the line, dressing up virtue and goodness, figuratively speaking, in some of the drabest, ugliest, most unattractive clothes imaginable. Let us consider three classes of professions whose main work is that of leading people, young and old, into righteous paths: 1, the preacher; 2, the social worker; 3, the teacher.

No one will doubt that, with few exceptions, most preachers are really in earnest when they appeal to the better nature of people, especially the younger set. And yet, in what an unskilled manner they go about it! As the young man or woman listens to the foibles, the weaknesses, being so mercilessly exposed, as she or he hears what is the speaker's ideal of fine youth, they realize that what the speaker expects is a plaster-saint, and not a human being who, whatever the faults may be, is at least interesting and amiable. What is the result of such a speech? The exact opposite of what the speaker expected. The youthful listener tends to become resentful, or what is even more destructive in effect, cynical and indifferent.

Now let us consider the social service worker. Since her work (generally it is a young woman) gets her into contact with those who are either socially, financially, or morally maladjusted in society, one rightfully expects these social service workers to be gifted with an extraordinary amount of sympathy, tact and gentleness, in dealing with these unfortunate. How often does this expectation come true? Seldom. Thousands of girls who have been forced through circumstances to ask for charitable help have remembered their experience with the greatest humiliation; have writhed at the memory of workers who regarded them with the contempt one has for a worm; have remembered with bitterness the attitude of these workers, as if they were afraid of becoming contaminated by the touch of the unhappy and hard hit.

On how many of these workers' faces are there expressions of sweetness, of kindness, of friendliness, such as to encourage trust and confidence, and yes, even affection? Few. On the faces of many is an expression which tells to the onlooker one thing only—that the milk of human kindness has long been dried up; their faces look bleak, cold, and distant. They study their "cases" with the same impersonality as the scientist who examines an insect under the microscope. This is not a figment of the imagination. The writer remembers well the surprise experienced in reading the life-story of one of America's most famous inventors; the terrible poverty of his boyhood years, when the fatherless family was forced to ask for help from one of the organizations; the contemptuous attitude of the official who came to "investigate"; an attitude so mean that the boy preferred to go to work though he was only ten years of age.

Lastly, let us consider the teacher. To the average school child what does the word "teacher" conjure up in his mind? The picture of a prim, grim, cross, cranky man or woman who is always saying "no", and seldom "yes"; who seldom praises and generally criticizes. Why do so many teachers assume the airs of an oracle? Why do they try to give the impression that they are always right and never wrong? Why don't they act as if they were ordinary human beings? It would make them appear more lovable, anyway. In fact, one might forgive them many faults, carelessness, occasional bad temper, and yes, even a few indiscretions. Why don't some of the women teachers dress more attractively? A little powder, lipstick skilfully and judiciously applied, well-fitting clothes. As an able speaker once put it, one is almost tempted to send them on a spree once in a while, for it might make them understand the minds and hearts of the growing youth much better. At any rate, they would obtain the confidence of the young pupils; for, nine chances out of ten, if these pupils could put their thoughts and reactions into words, what they would say would run something like this:

"Guess we will do what teacher suggests; she's a good sport; besides, she knows what she's talking about."
—McGill Daily.

Surely one of the firmly founded traditions of Canadian society is butter in pound prints. Ever since grandmother gave up the baking-bowl mould for the wax paper sheets with their legend, "Fresh Dairy Butter", this pastoral product has been sold only in the familiar slice of butter. With dire misgivings the other evening can therefore be well imagined, for upon pulling our chair up to the dinner table in the York household we found before us a circular piece of butter. With dire misgivings we investigated, hoping to find the culinary staff had been getting fancy with a paring knife; but our worst fears were well founded.

In the refrigerator we discovered, not just one freak pound of butter, but three or four neat cylindrical prints, and we are informed that a local chain store is now selling them like this all the time. We think the Big Business Probe should investigate the entire situation.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Hart House Theatre

The Playwrights Studio Group presented an evening of four original one act plays at Hart House Theatre on Saturday night. The range was from a psychological study to a satirical comedy. The audience seemed satisfied with each of the productions despite their several defects.

A Tea Time Tale by Lois Reynolds takes place in a tea room on any given Sunday. Five women, who are or have been enamoured of the sole male in the cast, are put on the stage. Peggy Shepherd gives a fair performance as the divorcee who has gone back to stenography. But when she sits down beside Deborah, after ordering a sandwich (which she makes no attempt to eat) and begins to discuss problems of love and marriage with a woman whom she has never seen before, realism suffers.

Crash, by Virginia Coyne Knight, relates the experiences and thoughts of two men injured in an airplane crash which killed a third. The scene is in the northern Quebec bush. This play was spoiled by feeble sound effects and scenery that tried to be more than simple. The actors did not seem able to put across the idea that they were stranded in the bush with little hope of being discovered.

Let's Go Places

There seems to be a love of the fantastic in the French nature which crops up occasionally, notably in the popularity of Jules Verne, and the building of the Eiffel Tower (both of which, in their day, were considered fantastic). Le Tunnel, the French presentation at the Hollywood on Saturday, has all the grotesque elements of a Jules Verne story, and is strictly modern. The tunnel referred to happens to be a little burrow reaching from Long Island to Cherbourg and drilled through bedrock 4,200 metres (not twenty thousand leagues) under the sea. This thriller is replete with all that could be expected of a tunnel picture; floods, explosions and fires, and there is certainly never a dull moment, even if you don't know what they are talking about. The last of the current series, L'Abbe Constantin, will be shown next week, and if the results of the series are sufficiently encouraging, another series will be brought to the theatre in the near future.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

Well, we have quite a week ahead of us in the way of women's sports. Vic and St. Mike's clash in what will be the final game of the basketball series if Vic are the winners. However, if St. Mike's peps up and comes out ahead in the contest there will have to be a final playoff at the end of the week. The winner of the best two out of three games gets the championship laurels. Incidentally, this game comes off at 6.30 this evening at the St. Alban's Church gym. Vic has a very neat nine with a battery consisting of Greeta Maxwell and Jean Blondell, which can be counted on to excel. The St. Mike's outfit is not as finished as the Scarlet and Gold heavy hitters, but the fact that this is their final opportunity to snatch the title may spur them on. It will be a real game whoever comes out on top—and let's close the season with a bang as far as a real turn-out of supporters is concerned.

Two big basketball classics are scheduled for this week. At 7.30 tomorrow at O.C.E. Saint Hilda's meets the Vic Juniors in the last of the semi-final games. The first game of the finals is called for Thursday. The U.C. Seniors are the team holding the bye and are awaiting with great interest the result of tomorrow's play, which decides whom they will have to take on as an opponent. The second and last final game is to come off on Tuesday, December 11. The decision is to be taken by points on the round.

Very few of you saw the first semi-final game last Thursday and you certainly missed a thriller. However, tomorrow night there is another chance to see these two outfits in play, so snap it up. The Saints will enter the contest with 5 points to the good—and they will need every one of them, for the Scarlet and Gold Juniors made it quite clear at the initial game that they are real contenders for the coveted position in the finals. The Vic squad turned in a good performance although they can perhaps better it a little this time. The Saints can certainly improve their game—it is apt to be fatal if they do not.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Varsity's up and coming hockey team broke into the winning column Saturday afternoon at the Arena and close to 3,000 fans saw them do it. It was the intermediates who put on the winning act, and they selected as their opponents the Hinde and Dauch team, a member of the Commercial series. To us the interesting part of the performance was not that they won, but that 3,000 fans saw them win. Why the customers should turn out to see intermediates play commercial hockey and not to see the O.H.A. teams, is something which will take some explaining, and in the explanation lies the answer to what is wrong with amateur hockey.

The one reason that this league should attract the paying guests while the non-commercial teams should play to empty houses, is the difference in the price. While the difference at Varsity Arena is slight there is a marked difference at the Arena Gardens where the powers play. The management still adhere to the absurd idea that it is worth twice the price to see the same men play O.H.A. as it is to see them play in the major commercial series. For the past year, the Gardens have been charging a minimum of 50 cents admission to the O.H.A. games twice a week, while on the two other nights, they are admitted to the commercial games for half the price. The fact that the teams are for the most part made up of men who play O.H.A. hockey would indicate that all games would be equally attractive, whether the players had signs on their backs inviting people to buy hot water bottles, or whether they were bearing ordinary names like Lions, Bear Cats or something of that sort. The fact remains that the prices are different, and the difference means several thousand customers for every game. What this form of logic is doing for hockey remains to be seen.

Varsity seniors opened the cage season with a comfortable win over West End Y Saturday evening. The addition of Marks and Connelley to the team was reflected in the additional scoring punch the Blues possessed. However, the intermediates fared not so well, although they did show promise. Both games were real crowd pleasers, and everything points to a successful season for the cagers this year.

The football war is not over yet although it has long since been settled by the seniors. Saturday the Argo Juniors kept themselves in the hunt for the Ontario title by squeezing out a slim 26-5 victory over St. Kitts here. The round score stood at 65-6, which is quite some margin for a football team. The Argos will now meet Woodstock for the Ontario title, and the winner of this series will probably meet a team from Winnipeg.

Foresters Losers in 8 to 4
Score—McConnell's Play Brilliant

DECIDES GROUP WINNERS

The Jr. S.P.S. box lacrosse team, winners of their group in the interfaculty league, had little difficulty in turning back the Forestry outfit by an 8-4 score in a rather slow game played in the big gymnasium in Hart House on Saturday morning.

The first period produced decidedly insipid playing, each team garnered one lone goal and preferred close checking and occasional slashing to a speedy passing game. The engineers hit their stride in the next session when they sank four tallies to their opponents' one.

The forward line on the Forestry team was disastrously weak and only the brilliant work of McConnell in goal prevented the Schoolmen running up a greater score. For the winners, Brough, who accounted for 3 goals, and Ballagh and Walky, who each got 2, and the cool-headed Stroud in goal, were outstanding. Heggie was the star for the losers, while McConnell and Crossley also turned in creditable games.

FATHER BULGAKOFF SPEAKS ON RUSSIA

Religion Being Worn Down Subtly by Communist Government

PRIESTS PERSECUTED

Minus the far eastern locale, the life of Father Sergius Bulgakoff looms like one of Conrad's tales, told through the intermediary voice of the passive Marlow. Born the son of a Russian Orthodox priest, Father Bulgakoff studied law in Moscow and London, was a professor in the University of Moscow, took active part in the second Duma, withdrew from the doctrines of Marx, and later became a priest. He was banished from Russia in 1923 and went to Paris, where he is now the Dean of the Russian Theological Academy, and leader of the Russian exiles.

Of strange, oriental appearance, with full beard, flowing hair, it was nevertheless the eyes, large, expressive and very much alive, of Father Bulgakoff that captured the imagination of his audience.

On Saturday evening Father Bulgakoff spoke in the Music Room on "The Church in Russia". He told of the subtle way in which the church is being persecuted. He told of how they have abolished Sunday as a holiday, and in its stead let each day be a holiday for some of the workers. Sunday for some, Monday for others, and so on. "The government observes," he said, "if the workers come to the factories on holidays, especially on Christmas and Easter." If they are absent it is taken as a sign that they are not true citizens and cannot be promoted. "Religious life is gradually being worn down in many ways," he said. "By the prohibition of all literature of a religious nature, by anti-Christian teachings in the schools, by persecution of priests."

Mr. Paul B. Anderson enlarged upon the statements of Father Bulgakoff. An American, Mr. Anderson has worked with the Y.M.C.A. in Shanghai and as a member of the Student Christian World Work was sent to work with the Russian colony in Paris. He told of the careful planning of the government to gradually do away with all religion. "Churches," he said, "are permitted to function only so long as they do not go beyond confession." All other activities are forbidden. Taxes and insurance are so high that many churches have been forced to close. If a church seems to be growing powerful the government demands that the priest send in weekly reports on the attitude of his parishioners toward Communism. The priest is then faced with the alternative of being an informer or being banished to Siberia, and thus letting his church go to ruin.

A matter of interest was brought out in the discussion which followed the two addresses when Mr. Anderson defined the place of sin in the Communist outlook. "The idea of sin," he said, "does not exist for the Communist. Most of sin is derived from man's sense of property. Property taken away, much of sin disappears. What we consider the sins of sex they regard as natural. They submit to them as not being sins at all."

Lectures on France

"The French are the Chinese of Europe," was the parallel drawn by F. M. Walter in his lecture on "France" Saturday afternoon at Trinity College Chapel. In describing the France of today, he stated that she is now facing a crisis which involves a fundamental political change if it is to be remedied.

The year 1906 saw the last struggle and the triumph of political revolution. Social revolution was to have its turn but the advent of the war sponged the internal problem from the slate and the application of reason and logic to the problem of peace occupied the French minds until 1929 when they were left free to return to their accustomed revolutionary state.

The general feeling in France is that there is "something rotten in the state of Denmark", but just what it is or what to do, has not been fathomed. Fascism has already been tried under Napoleon and later under Napoleon III. Both experiments ended disastrously in Waterloo and Sedan respectively. The French feel as they did in 1789 that both legislative and administrative failed to do so. The Blues then took matters in hand and chalked up a five-point lead. The Y crew then became very active and tied it up on two baskets and a free throw. The half went on with first one team ripping the twine to take a momentary advantage, which was quickly eradicated by the other. At the half-time whistle the score remained tied at seventeen all.

The Y crew started the final half with a burst of speed to quickly score a five-point advantage. The Blues soon whittled this lead down and both teams struggled along on fairly even terms for ten minutes. Half way through the period the Y crew were carefully nursing a single-point lead when Levy sank one from centre to give the Blues the job of defending their momentary edge. Mr. At this point, however, Marks took it upon himself to change the nature of the struggle by going on a rampage. Levy, Gold and Bodrug immediately followed suit and Varsity soon had a pretty fair advantage for the first time during the tilt. With three minutes to go the Y crew started to shoot from centre and attempted to net the rebounds but Gold and Connolly rose to the occasion and the final whistle found the Blues with an eleven-point edge.

Throughout the contest Hayman's squad showed a great deal of fight and aggressiveness and this more than anything else carried them to victory. The playing of Hugh Marks was by far the outstanding feature of the game. The St. Mike's star turned in a wonderful performance on the offensive but was a little weak on the defensive. Joe Connolly, also a St. Mike's addition, turned in a nice effort but had tough luck around the Y basket. Gold, who partnered with Connolly on the Blue defence, turned in another of his good efforts. Levy, who replaced Munroe at centre in the second half, shared the scoring honours with Marks.

Varsity: Munroe 1, Bodrug 7, Marks 10, Connolly 2, Gold 7, Gordon, Levy 10, Himel, Newman, Vanderleek. West End Y: Baird 4, Paterson 1, Goble 3, Butler 10, Cameron, Patterson, Hedges 8, W. Delabough, G. Delabough, Valentine, Sellers 2, Martin.

various student organizations throughout the University. The purpose of the meeting is to decide whether or not a delegate will be sent to the Congress, since such an action depends on the extent to which the different student bodies contribute to the expenses that the trip would require.

The Congress itself will be held for the purpose of discussing the general aspects of war, the general attitude taken by students towards war, the position of Fascism with regard to peace and war, and other similar matters.

"It's up to the students of this University to realize that their interests are closely linked to those of students at universities in other countries," Mr. Woodsworth stated. "Without some convention of this sort, it is impossible to expect any real success in a move for international peace."

"All during last year there has been a growing evidence that students are taking an active interest in merely an academic interest in national and international affairs," Mr. Woodsworth continued. "Our Canadian delegates at the League of Nations have been strong in their appeals for disarmament. We have seen by the answers to the recent anti-war questionnaire that the majority of the students are pacifists, and we can expect better results if we take our duties as international citizens seriously while we are students."

veloping his first architectural modes from a necessity to facilitate the extraction of water from the very deep wells so typical of Egypt. Then, gradually, the religious rite of preserving the body gave birth to the idea of the tomb, and a tomb wide at the bottom and tapering to a point, became known as the pyramid. Years were spent in their construction and since their tools were of the simplest, the Egyptian chose the only obvious method—to pile up earth so that he might always work on a level.

The Egyptian temple again shows the simplicity of the native mind, for it was almost the exact replica of the home. The home had three chambers, the inner one for the women of the family, a second one into which male members and immediate relatives were admitted and an outer one which was the only room into which friends could gain entrance. Thus the outer room of the temple was for the worshippers, the second, the domain of the high priest, and the third, the sanctuary of the goddess into which the high priest alone was admitted.

The most prominent idea of Egyptian architecture is therefore embodied in their ideas of proportion. They took full advantage of the time and the material at their disposal and put the best they had to offer into all their work.

entire struggle, while the West End squad netted thirteen. Mac's crew sank eight out of nineteen fouls while the Y squad netted six out of fourteen free throws.

In the first half of the game the Y crew took the lead after only three seconds of play when Shortt sank a free throw. The Blues never threatened this lead although they tried hard enough. A little humour was added to the game when it was discovered that the timer had rung the half-time bell five minutes too soon. Both squads were brought out again to complete the half, the score being 21-9 when the gong again stopped play for the intermission. Magwood accounted for six of the Blues' total points in the first half.

In the final half of the struggle the Blues managed to hold the Y crew in check. However, the West End lead weathered the storm and emerged safe and sound at the final whistle.

Several lads on both squads turned in good performances. For the Blues Magwood, Kinsey and Sullivan turned in nice efforts, while Shortt, Taylor and Whelpdale played well for the Y crew.

Varsity: Sullivan 1, Magwood 7, Vanderleek 1, Carey 2, Fitton, Kinsey 3, Gibson 1, Archibald 1, Ronson 2 and Faux.

West End Y: Mockford 4, Whelpdale 6, Crosland, Henderson 2, Thompson, Shortt 7, Cunningham 3, Gillespie 2, Johnson, Proughton 2, and Taylor 6.

ECONOMIC LIFE NEEDS GUIDANCE THROUGH CHURCH

Middle Ages Against Freedom Associated with Capitalism

"RELIGION IN PIE"

Society and First Christian Principles Shocking Contrast

"We face the challenge to make the Church once more the guiding power not only in our cultural life but also in our economic life," stated Professor King Gordon in an address on "Christianity and Capitalism" yesterday afternoon in Emmanuel College. He traced the growth of capitalism from its start in the decline of the feudal system to its own decline during this last decade.

The middle ages was an integral church society but it was directly opposed to the various forms of economic freedom that are associated with capitalism, such as freedom of market and money lending. There was, however, a new trading class coming into power which was aligning itself with the religious reformation. This is shown by Calvin's statement that usury was no more in the wrong than charging rent for land. Also the qualities outlined by Calvin as those which a good churchman should possess were those usually associated with a good businessman.

Professor Gordon then went on to tell how much more easily the church would have adjusted itself to the new society if the philosophy of Adam Smith had been correct. Adam Smith had stated that if a person acted towards his own business advancement, he would be acting in the best interests of the state, which unfortunately did not work in practice. Thus the Church was faced with the need of reconciling this new social order with Christianity. They tried to do this by comforting the oppressed and through philanthropic work. Because of this any communist will say that all religion is "pie in the sky".

The inequality that grew up between the classes was responsible for the rise

The broadcasts are part of an attempt to provoke intelligent and unbiased thinking on economic, social and political problems of the day, both national and international, among the students in universities and colleges. The speakers on the programme represent different approaches to the problem of security and are expected to arouse greater stimulus in discussion groups across the country. Study out.

Professors and students, interviewed by The Varsity regarding yesterday's editorial from the McGill Daily, entitled "Reformers! You're a Washout!" frowned on the writer's attempt to create a generalization from a few examples.

"The writer is correct in a few cases where the exceptions have occurred," said R. Gray, I.S.P.S., "but he is wrong in trying to make these into generalities."

Dr. R. M. Saunders of the History Department, hastily glancing through the editorial for the first time, remarked, "As regards university professors, the trend is decidedly in the other direction. I can only generalize. I should say that there are two distinct categories—(1) the few examples which compose the editorial, (2) the great many cases that have been omitted."

Replying to the criticism of teachers as he glanced up from a game of chess, C. A. Ashley, Assistant Professor of Accounting, humourously said, "I don't

HIGHLIGHTS OF FOLLIES WILL BE REPRODUCED

On Tuesday, December 4th, at 8 p.m. the University College Literary and Athletic Society and the Women's Undergraduate Association are holding a joint meeting in the Junior Common Room.

The evening promises to be an enjoyable social event, for some of the highlights of the successful University College Follies are to be reproduced. "Louie the Route", the song hit of the Follies, is to be again presented to the audience, together with some of the other stage attractions.

One of the interesting features of the evening is the debate, "Resolved that ignorance in a man is bliss, but unattractive in a miss", starring the Minsky twins. This is to be a joint debate with the girls.

There will be dancing and refreshments will be served later in the evening. Everyone is urged to come and enjoy themselves.

As Our Sport is Stopped by Snow Now Trip We on Fantastic Toe

Classes in ballroom dancing are an innovation at Victoria College. Because stormy blasts interfere altogether too much with archery, the adherents of the bow turn to this gentler diversion during the winter months. The gymnasium of Annesley Hall is the scene of such elegant instruction.

For those who have been wondering when the Lillian Massey swimming tank is available for their use, the hours are from three until five o'clock every afternoon; the conditions, that they have either paid their four dollar swimming fee or purchased one of the new "three swims for a dollar" cards. There is no exception for first year women, as swimming is no longer compulsory for them.

Fencing has attained unusual popularity this year. The Lillian Massey reports that its fencing classes are considerably larger and more enthusiastic than ever before.

Ballroom dancing as an art to be studied is also flourishing at O.C.E. for the first time this year. Every Thursday afternoon a class is thrown open to the entire college by Miss Bryans, the P.T. director, wherein our future teachers are instructed in the intricacies of the waltz, the tango, and many more like graces. The purpose of such appearing frivolity is nothing less than to raise the standard of dancing, one of our most necessary social arts, and to fit our teachers to be able to instruct their charges to "trip the light fantastic" in a commendable and dignified manner. This class which is patronized with zeal by the stronger as well as the weaker sex, is evidently "going over".

STUDENT HEALTH INSURANCE AT WESTERN AND QUEEN'S

University Medical Officer

NOT FOR CHRONIC CASES

(Special to "The Varsity")

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 3.—The Trustees of Queen's University, by arrangement with the Alma Mater Society have, since 1924, administered a health insurance fund for the benefit of students registered in the winter session. The fund is derived from a special fee of four dollars paid by each student on registration and is used to provide medical and hospital care.

The plan provides that the services of the University medical officer, Dr. W. Ford Connell, are available to the students without any charge. Dr. Connell has special consultation hours in the General Hospital and makes house calls where necessary. A student may choose another physician or obtain the services of a specialist, but the University does not pay for charges incurred in this way.

The University bears the cost for seven days at either of the local hospitals. This includes payment for room, food, ordinary medicines and treatment. For a longer period the student pays a fee of five dollars a week from the date of his admission until his discharge. Admission and discharge must be ordered by the University medical officer; the obligation of the University.

VERY NOMINAL FEE

(Special to "The Varsity")

London, Ont., Dec. 3.—The health insurance scheme at the University of Western Ontario was inaugurated in order to protect the person who may be so unfortunate as to meet with a serious accident or a prolonged illness. It is also part of the plan to maintain the health and efficiency of the student body.

The scheme is administered by the University without cost, the total fees are transferred to the assurance company, which does the underwriting. The fee for the academic year is six dollars, which is paid to the Bursar.

The plan is modelled after the model of the Workmen's Compensation Board and the maximum charges for physicians and surgeons' fees must not exceed the scale of tariff charges laid down by that organization. The total liability must not exceed seventy-five dollars for any one student during the term of the contract. This does not include charges for surgical operations resulting from chronic or congenital conditions.

For those students engaged in competitive sport the University Athletic Directorate contributes an extra premium of two dollars, which allows the maximum liability to be raised to one hundred and fifty dollars for any student who suffers from accidental bodily injuries.

The hospitalization is limited to certain hospitals in London and St. Thomas, but if the facilities offered are not acceptable to the patient he must pay the difference in price and any extras. Any physician or surgeon in the city of London or district may be called by the patient.

Professor King Gordon, who gave a lecture yesterday on "Capitalism and Christianity", is the son of the famous "Ralph Connor". He was born in Winnipeg, thirty-four years ago, and received his education in that city, taking his Arts degree at the University of Manitoba. He continued his studies at Oxford, where he was granted a degree in Philosophy, Politics and Economics in 1921.

He then went to a lumber camp as a student missionary. A year later he returned to Winnipeg to take a course in theology; he was ordained in 1927. He preached for some time at Pine Falls, where he "observed the industrial system".

Then he attended the Union Theological Seminary at New York, where he was the assistant to H. F. Ward and Reinhold Niebuhr (whom he considers to be the greatest intellectual in the United States).

He was appointed to the chair of Christian Ethics in Montreal, which post he held until this year when the University was forced to discontinue the professorship "because of economic pressure".

REBIRTH OF ART REALLY EVOLUTION

Fifteenth Century Painting Attempting Realism is Wistful

LANDSCAPES POPULAR

"The most fascinating and useless speculation is what might have happened had there been no classical antiquities to rediscover," said Professor John Alford, in his lecture on Renaissance Art at the Museum on Monday afternoon.

Actually there is no rebirth in art; it is an emergence from former times, and there is a formal carrying on of mediaeval art as much as a revival of classical art. The classical influence is present in spirit and sentiment rather than in actual form.

Fifteenth century art is characterized by a certain wistfulness, a certain hesitancy, reserve and doubt, which does not exist in classical art. There is, too, Professor Alford stated, a growth in realism. The body is regarded as a physical structure, a functional machine, and not merely as a thing of beauty. This interest in realism is carried to portraiture also. The portrait is true to life, reflecting the undesirable qualities as well as the desirable. It is not merely the flattering study that some present day artists make it.

Love of pageantry is depicted in fifteenth century art, and becomes increasingly marked in that of the sixteenth century. There is great courtly pomp and regality, and grand representation of classical mythology.

The Man of the Crowd

Edgar Allen Poe tells the story of "The Man of the Crowd". He describes himself as pursuing through the streets of London a decrepit old man for no better reason than a craving desire to know who the man is and where he is going. His quest is fruitless. The man remains nameless, his destination is nowhere. His sole purpose in life seems to be the hiding of his identity amongst the crowds of people who walk the streets of the metropolis by night. He is, as Poe describes him, "The Man of the Crowd".

There are, doubtless, many people who find themselves poor company. Some are bored with themselves, and these, indeed, are a pitiful lot. They cannot be left alone. With no reserves of experience or education to draw upon, the necessity of remaining alone, even for a short time, is unbearable and they flee from their enforced solitude as from a plague. The character in Poe's sketch may be taken as an extreme example of the man who seeks to escape from his own emptiness by losing sight of his identity among large crowds of people.

Some are afraid of themselves.

The human race is, or prides itself in being, the only intelligent race of beings in the world. Individually and collectively we are conscious that we exist. The burden of individual consciousness is a heavy load to bear; we would often like to lay it down. Being an individual entity man is unable, as a general rule, to look upon life objectively. All things are seen as they are related to individual human life and to individual human experience. It is the common habit of humans when speaking of the evils of human society to refer to them as the evils of the world, as though the terms were synonymous. They are—for us. The function of human intelligence is to interpret the world. Furthermore, the responsibility for interpretation is tending more and more these days to fall upon the individual human being. A tremendous and fearful task surely?

He who seeks to interpret truth to the world in this age finds the solid rock of traditional dogmatic belief seemingly melting under his feet. Old ideas of human importance, of divine interference in the particular affairs of men seem to be vanishing as fast as we lay hold on them. The comforting doctrine of an anthropocentric universe has fallen before the cold realism of an impersonal God, a mechanistic Cosmos. What is man to do?

Never before has the search for Truth imposed such hardship on the individual. Bacon's pleasant thesis that the world is made for us for our pleasure and exploitation no longer holds. He who pursues Truth must look out upon the universe at large and absorb the truth he finds there, whether it be comfortable to the mental security of man or not. If the test is too much for him, if he fears for his personal comfort and peace of mind he can shrink back into the crowd, accept the old standards of human society and vegetate.

There are two men of the crowd. One is afraid of his own emptiness, the other is afraid to face his own fullness. Verily they have their reward...

ANTI-WAR: AN ERROR

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

About a year ago the various pacifist groups on the campus unified their efforts, burying for a time the deep differences which separated them, and, out of it came into existence the Students' Anti-War Society. Frowned upon by the University's authorities and not recognized by the Caput, it did not accomplish much more than the publication of a short newspaper, whose redaction was mainly in the hands of members of the Students' League. This year the society came to life again, holding some meetings, and depositing a wreath at the Tower, on November 11, the delegation being almost uniquely composed of Victoria and Emmanuel College students.

Though I took an active part in the formation of the Anti-War Society I am firmly convinced that it will need to change its name and policy if it is ever to accomplish anything constructive. As Mr. N. F. Langford ably remarked in an editorial of Acta Victoriana: "The Last Post is the Revue of pacifism... pacifism is expressed almost purely in terms of anti-militarism." It is very well to hate and oppose war and all that creates it, but an essentially destructive programme will lead nowhere. To reach a positive programme, however, involves a philosophy of life, and that is where the Anti-War Society reveals its inherent weakness, for it is not possible for a group of communistic students, indifferent or money-seekers, young men and women, as well as Christians, ever to find any common philosophy of life out of which they will be able to build a positive programme. This was amply proven in our committee's meetings last year, when all discussions of any deep conviction, or motive, had to be carefully avoided. True and universal basis for pacifism need to be sought, its implications in the social, economic and political realms have to be established.

First of all, pacifism means fellowship among men and women: therefore class-war is as incompatible with pacifism as the so-called imperialism or capitalistic wars. Secondly, pacifism means fellowship in the economic order, and nobody can support it while still believing in the "profit-motive" in business, or in the "get rich quickly" appeal of the stock exchange. Thirdly, pacifism means fellowship in the national and political life: it must therefore substitute to the rule of one group, (as in any dictatorship) of one party, and replace it by a representative or national government where the various groups, within the nation, will have a voice and responsibility. This would go a long way to make politics a cleaner job than it is now, and put a stop to the lawlessness of the job seekers and the systematic opposition of those "out of power". Lastly, Christianity cannot be side-stepped—it is even my deepest conviction that it alone can give a true and universal basis for any constructive pacifism. On this point I shall again quote Mr. Langford, with whom I agree fully: "The basis of Christian peace is fellowship; and Christian fellowship is founded on despair of the earthly man, and hope in Christ... In the knowledge of the condemnation of all men before God, we shall lose the desire to slay a fellow man... In the expectation of grace through the Christian gospel, we shall abide together in a common hope, which does not pertain to human affairs... The peace is not the peace of goodness attained, but the peace of a recognized common plight."

Such a plan might well reduce the Anti-War Society to a small minority, yet its mere abstinence has enough to catch and hold youth—but how many have been "converted" to its programme so far? An "Anti-War movement" is an error and will never achieve any positive results until it becomes the expression of a new life that will manifest itself in all human thoughts and actions, a new life which is not created by man but is a "given" of God.

Claude de Mestral.

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

In a recent editorial article under the heading "The League and Peace", a plea was put forward for support of the League of Nations. Such generalizations as were set forth in that article are certainly commendable; but most people find it easy enough to agree with generalizations, and yet fail to translate them into particular action. There seems to be no value in advancing wide suggestions, when the individual readers for the most part agree; but remain idle.

There has recently been an appeal from the Anti-War Society through the columns of The Varsity, and by private correspondence, to individuals and organizations on the campus to support it in sending a representative from the University of Toronto to the International Students' Congress Against War, to be held in Geneva this Christmas holiday.

Here is a place in which those really interested in furthering international goodwill have a chance to show their sincerity. One of the greatest difficulties which we students have to face in this problem of internationalism, is that we have no actual contact with students of foreign universities. For a successful international movement, it is fundamentally essential that a very definite bond be made between the different countries. The possibility of such a bond being made between students is easy because of the similarity of interests of all students throughout the world.

Some doubt may arise as to any value resulting from the sending of a delegate from our University. But if a long-run view is taken, there can be no question that the mere presence of a Canadian student at such a convention would go far towards bringing us to a more immediate interest in affairs at Geneva; while on the other hand we would be showing students of other countries that Canadian students are awake to the call of the times for a new internationalism.

We students of Toronto must consider our whole attitude with regard to this awakening spirit. We must be ready to take up our duties as members of a world-wide fellowship of students who are thinking as we are thinking; and preparing as we must prepare, for the crisis which is to come. And an opportunity has come for us to take a part in activities of a world-embracing character. What answer are the students of the University of Toronto to give to the request that they send their representative? The Anti-War Society is making their appeal for all that Student Internationalism can stand for. Other Canadian universities are making efforts to send students. Students of Varsity, we must send a delegate!

Forward passes, in the last few feet of film, Joe Penner, singing to a duck and Lanny Ross just singing, are a few of the features of the picture, College Rhythm, now playing at the Imperial. Jack Oakie also plays a major part, and as the boy who wins for dear old Mildue, is more successful than Joe Penner, who tries but fails to sell his duck.

The entire picture is slightly absurd, but more than usually interesting. The rivalry between a piccolo player, who happens to be Lanny Ross, and whose father happens to own a departmental store, and Jack Oakie, as an all-American, happy go lucky football player, creates some amusing situations which are equalled only by Penner, who sings love songs to a duck called Goo Goo. Of course, the home team wins the football game, the hero wins the heroine and Penner keeps his duck.

Evolution is theory. It is not proven fact and as far as we can see at the present time, there is no probability of science ever being able to prove that it is fact. This does not detract from its value as a theory in the least, but it does make those people appear silly who speak of the "proof of evolution". There is lots of evidence in favour of evolution but positive proof is lacking and will probably remain so. I can respect the intelligence of a man who says, "After considering the evidence I believe that perhaps evolution tells the story of what has happened on the earth." I can't respect the intelligence of a man who states as proof of the theory of evolution evidence which Continued on Page 4)

Eaton Auditorium

Last night the Youth Unit of the League of Nations Society were able to fill Eaton Auditorium for a play called Prelude to Chaos. The authoress, Margot Blaisdell, a Toronto girl, conceived the idea, but her knowledge of theatre is frail, and her understanding of history is discouraging.

This play is definitely a propaganda play and as such it is a forward step for our fair city's amateur dramatic groups. Prelude to Chaos must be criticized as a propaganda play, which means that it is viewed from such angles as the amount of truth in the propaganda and the effectiveness of the manner in which it is put across. In the first case, Miss Blaisdell has created the false impression that wars are made by kings and diplomats; that the Kaiser was a rascal and that Sir Edward Grey was a great, beneficent gentleman, and so on. The economic rivalry, the real producer of chaos, the authoress has neglected and in its stead she has substituted myths of poetical and diplomatic intrigue. Miss Blaisdell Continued on Page 4)

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By B. L. M.

The baseball season closed with a bang last night with Vic's 5-4 victory over St. Mike's. This is the third consecutive time that Vic have held the baseball crown and the players feel that much of the credit for this year's victory is due to Eleanor Hart, their capable manager, who kept things running smoothly and to Ossie Dyke for his fine coaching. He had a good deal of new material to work with and he certainly turned out a smart team.

What a game! It was tough and go until the very last inning, when Vic forged ahead with a home run by Greta Maxwell. Besides being a star catcher Greta swings a mean bat. St. Mike's tried valiantly to tie the score but Jean Blundell's perfect pitching forced them to accept a shut-out. Every player on both teams deserves honourable mention but the Vic battery, Jean Blundell and Greta Maxwell, and Ruby Townsend, their third baseman were the stars. Marjorie Mossbough made 3 of St. Mike's 4 runs and played a neat game throughout, while Justine McMartin, pitcher, and Pauline Simon, catcher, stood out too. Justine pitches a very fast ball and had the Vic players guessing at times. All in all it was the best game of the series and the spectators felt that it was well worth seeing.

The hockey season is just around the corner and would-be puck-chasers are getting out skates and taping up sticks. This year should be a record one for interfaculty hockey as there seems to be no dearth of material. U.C. expects to have two teams, Meds 1 and Vic will have 2, with a possibility of a third. The series will start as soon after Christmas as the weather permits and it is expected that the final games will be played in the Arena. However, before the regular hockey season, that is, before Christmas, U.C. are planning to have an inter-year series. The schedule will be out in a few days, so watch this column for it.

Tonight at 7 o'clock in O.C.E. gym, St. Hilda's and Vic Juniors clash in the last game of the semi-final basketball series. The winners will go into the finals against U.C. on Thursday night in Hart House gym. Tonight's game will be a real thriller because both teams are determined to do or die. The Saints are 5 points to the good but Vic Juniors showed that they meant business in the last game and will be right in there tonight. So if you are keen to see good basketball be sure to come out. The 10c admission is well worth it.

A five dollar rebate on tuition is made to each student who receives grades of all "A's" at the University of California.

TRINITY TRIUMPHS IN LACROSSE FINAL

Game Considerably Enlivened
During First Second Quarter

HONOURS ALREADY WON

Trinity College defeated University College 17-7 last night, in the final game of the lacrosse group, in the big gym. Although the game meant nothing, as Trinity have already won the group, both teams played fast and furiously. The first quarter was rather sluggish with both teams being slow to start, but near the end U.C. came through with some fine pass-work to net three goals.

The second quarter was considerably enlivened when Allison and Burchell took control for Trinity and combined again and again to beat Robb in the U.C. nets.

Trinity continued to hold sway in the third and final period, with Bell a standout because of his rugged checking and accurate passing. Gallow and Williams were best for University College, but the rest of their teammates lacked the finish and combination of Trinity and for that reason they were obviously out-played all through the game.

University College: Goal, Robb; Bissel, Gallow, Williams, Beatty; subs, Martin, Kidd.

VARSITY SENIOR O.H.A. TO ENTERTAIN HAMILTON

Varsity's Senior O.H.A. entry again take to the ice with the odds against them when they entertain Hamilton in their second home game of the season, this evening at the Bloor Street Arena. These two teams met earlier in the season and the Blues suffered a 6-1 setback in the Bengals' home town.

Hamilton were too fast for the collegians and seemed to be in much better condition, but it was only the over-anxiety of the Blues that brought about such a one-sided score. With two or three games under their belts since then, Varsity seems to have remedied these faults, and promise to make it interesting for the boys from the Garden City.

Shipp, as usual, will be in goal, and will be given the able support of Rey Campbell and Fullerton on the defence, that this year shapes up much stronger than last. Varsity has two formidable forward lines, the "veteran" of MacPherson, Hendry and McLelland, which can match paces with any in O.H.A. hockey, and the Ottawa line, which scored the only goal for the Blues the last time these teams met.

Hamilton has yet to be defeated, while Varsity still has to win their first game of the season, and the match promises to be one worthy of attending.

BASKETBALL PRACTISES

The following schedule of inter-collegiate basketball practices will be observed until further notice. Players are requested to observe changes.

Tues. 5-6—Senior, junior.
8-9:30—Intermediate.
Wed. 5-6—Senior.
8-9:30—Junior, intermediate.
Thurs. 5-6—Senior, intermediate, junior.
Fri. 5-6—All teams with games on Saturday.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Friday evening the boys will rally round at Hart House in the annual jamboree in honour of the lads who have done but not died for their Alma Mater in years recently gone by. We refer to the first "T" holders and the annual Athletic At-Home. There has been a somewhat discouraging response to the ticket list, but the next few days should see this condition changed. The cause is certainly a worthy one and deserving of the support of everyone who has taken an interest in the achievements of the boys who have been performing with more than usual success for the past few years around Varsity. It has been the ability of the above mentioned lads which has held Varsity in its exalted place in intercollegiate competition and their one and only "party" should be deserving of support.

Tonight Varsity will meet Hamilton in their return game in the O.H.A. series. Varsity dropped the first encounter, and by quite a margin it will be recalled, but they were by no means outclassed. In fact it was a last period gamble for goals, in which the dice were loaded against the Blue team which made the score so lop-sided. Tonight Warren Stevens' blade artists will be out to avenge that first defeat and we will not be surprised if they succeed. The students are a fast skating, plucky band of players and have been performing better every time out and should be at their peak tonight. For this reason we anticipate one of the best encounters of the season.

Interfaculty sport is rapidly drawing to a conclusion for the fall term. Thursday evening the Trinity and Vic teams will play the first game of their semi-final lacrosse series and this has all the promise of a real battle. Trinity with Birchall and Allison, doing their sharpshooting, are favourites for the crown, but this is merely by way of a surmise rather than a deduction. However, it should be a rare old game. They play their second game Monday.

Tonight the boys who like to say things with their hands (closed) will get their first test in the gym. Te occasion is the S.P.S. assault and this should be one of the best of the season. The engineers always held that this method of persuasion was the best and as a result have become quite proficient in this capacity, even if they are not so proficient in their labs. At any rate the assault should be a good one.

We have yet to hear of any effects of the exposure made by the Globe in reference to the Clancy, Clarke situation, in which they suggested that the two star members of the Argo football team were professionals. The evidence available would indicate that the two Sculler stars, not only did play pro before joining Argos but have since that time played with a pro team. Argos, we know, are a powerful club, and their members probably know the right people, but whether they will discount the charges of professionalism laid at their door remains to be seen. The fact remains that at present the situation demands some action and the form this action takes will largely determine whether or not the Argos may continue to be regarded as strictly amateur or as a more or less amateur club who are willing to make allowances when it comes to good football players.

ECONOMIC LIFE NEEDS GUIDANCE

of protest among the working people. The church as a whole shied off this protest. Because of this in these days of declining capitalism the groups who are endeavouring to change the social order are mainly non-Christian. The Church has a chance as never before to control the economic and cultural course of the world if it will become sympathetic with the new order of things. There are several difficulties in the way. In the first place the Church has large stakes in the present system in the form of well supported missions and social service organizations. Secondly those who are hurt by the capitalist system form a very small part of the Church and exert little influence in its policies.

The present depression is decreasing the number of stakes of the Church in society and the second difficulty could be overcome by educating the people to an intelligent radical opinion. At these moments of great crises the people are seeing the shocking contrasts between the accepted thinking and acting of society and the teachings of Jesus.

The meeting was concluded with a discussion during which Professor Gordon elaborated some of his previous statements. The audience was so large that the lecture had to be moved from the original room to the biggest hall in Emmanuel.

REBIRTH OF ART REALLY EVOLUTION

The sixteenth century, moreover, tends towards secular rather than religious art. Although there are many religious paintings, there is really no religious art.

Landscape painting becomes popular, and in this particularly there is a domination by man of his environment. He is master of all about him.

Renaissance art, is, on the whole, an interweaving of classical art with persisting mediaeval traditions.

THRILLING GAME ENDS BASEBALL SERIES

Last evening St. Alban's Church was the battleground on which Victoria defeated St. Mike's 5-4 to win the baseball cup. This final game was a real thriller with both teams playing top-notch ball. The game was really won in the last inning when Greta Maxwell made a home run and her teammate, Jean Blundell, allowed the Saints no runs.

Vic: J. Blundell, G. Maxwell, R. Townsend, R. Cook, J. Randle, M. Pixley, M. Eastwood, E. Hart, L. Bull. St. Mike's: J. McMartin, P. Simon, I. Allen, M. Mossbough, M. McGuire, E. Whelan, P. Schurr, D. March, U. Lynch, K. Carroll.

BOXING CHATTER

Activity around the domain of the exponents of the manly art of self-defence would indicate a successful season for the Varsity boys. Very little is known of this year's squad due to gaps left by last year's graduation, but it may be expected the lads will be in there fighting.

Dupres from St. Mike's in the heavyweight class is an unknown quantity, but much is expected of him. Of last year's squad only Freddy Smith in the 125 pound class, and Tom Powell in the welterweight are left.

Many of the newcomers are displaying plenty of verve and while it is yet early in the season, appearances indicate that Varsity will be by no means out of the running. Frankie Brown is coaching the team and under his tutelage the boxers should improve daily.

No, he's not in training for the Russian Ballet nor has his reason left its moorings. He's simply registering joy over his first telephone call home. "Make it a regular weekly habit, as I do," says his more experienced room mate, "the cost is a mere bagatelle."

EMMANUEL VICTORS IN CLOSE GAME

Emmanuel A defeated Senior S.P.S. in an interfaculty volleyball game yesterday afternoon by 15-13 15-13. The game meant little to either team as Senior Meds have already captured the group title, but in spite of this fact a close and exciting struggle resulted. With Emmanuel one point from victory, School staged a desperate rally which netted them several points, but they just failed to force the contest into a third game.

The spiking of Dyke and Rapson won many points for Emmanuel, while Farrar, Bryce and Dembitzky played well for School.

Emmanuel A: Dyke, Hart, Stimson, Brown, Taylor, Bath, Rapson. Senior S.P.S.: Dembitzky, Royle.

Depreciation through increased metabolism for every time I miss my car by four inches is equal to two chocolate malted milks ($0.30).

Library fines, through delay on line, twenty-five cents for the winter.

Hospital bills incurred by riding on Bloor car, pneumonia (from sitting in the middle of the car; $35.00. Chills (from sitting next to the stove; five dollars and costs for using abusive language). Nostalgia (from sitting too near to the Coal advertisement cards), many a heartache. As all these ailments are covered by the new student insurance, the total is only $3.25.

As I probably didn't have the carefare in the first place, add interest at 11 per cent (See Car Card on Family Loans for salaried professional men).

On the other side of the ledger comes a chiropractor's bill, and three jars of corn salve, which is also covered by the Student Insurance, which so complicates the otherwise perfectly lucid accounts that I will find it impossible to balance them. It probably adds up to fifty dollars anyway, but I like to walk for the exercise.

The League for Decency has done some good work in forcing directors to give us a better brand of indecent picture in order to compete with the sentimental and so-called decent picture which is supposed to be popular at present. The humour is much more refined and subtle than in former Chevalier pictures, and the film represents a healthy reaction to the extremes that have been reached in the struggle for "decency".

could be otherwise interpreted. Embryology, Comparative Anatomy and Palaeontology give evidence for evolution but the same facts in these sciences which favour evolution could be taken as evidence for a theory of special creation of each species in turn. "Evolution in the individual life" would be admitted as evidence for the theory of evolution by only a few people. Surely no one considers it to be "proof" of general biological evolution.

and her play, Prelude to Chaos, reflect the attitude which has resulted in the decline of the League of Nations and its supporting organizations. The League is so founded that it appeals to the general attitude of the people that wars are stopped or made at stuffy conferences or behind embassy doors. Wars may be delayed or hastened by greyed or bald-headed diplomats, but never will these international politicians be able to say that at a conference they had taken war out of the agenda of civilization. It is a social system where war satisfies greed and governments are pawns of industrialists and financiers, which is the producer of modern war.

On the second point, the production did not even convey its message effectively to the audience. It was slow, in some spots it descended to the trite, it failed to keep a continual intensity, it suffered from repetition and above all, it was not able to work up the audience to any pitch of enthusiasm. On the whole, the players were fairly good and their acting was a tribute to the

"I do not concur with the writer regarding his statement about the preacher's 'plaster saints'", was F.F. Nock's retort to the various questions. "The majority of ministers do not expect youths to be 100 per cent perfect. They, like us, are human."

C. P. Glover, Vic 1: "To a certain extent, I agree with the editorial. I believe, however, that the writer gives us an exaggerated statement of facts. We have numerous ministers today who do not portray 'plaster saints' though some have made me wriggle in my pew by their remarks."

"The editorial is replete with fallacies. Why would a social service worker be interested in social work if 'the milk of human kindness' were tried up? Education does not consist in believing the truth because the teacher is a good sport, but in seeking truth for itself," said D. J. Curzon, II Trinity, between mighty puffs of smoke.

W. G. Greenfield: "In my estimation the writer has never had any experience with what he writes. The charity of individual societies is not received in the manner that the writer would have one think."

With this benevolent remark, R. M. Schieder, I Trinity, concludes this questionnaire, "Teachers are undoubtedly misunderstood. My long experience at collegiate has taught me to respect their sagacity and long-suffering patience."

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Toronto—Two men were burned to death last night in their flat on Oak St. The fire is said to have resulted from carelessness after a drinking party.

Montreal—Hon. H. H. Stevens stated that he will advocate the appointment of a permanent federal trade and industries commission with power of controlling merchandising, at the next session of parliament.

Boston—Before a crowd of 13,000 Charlie Conacher secured the only goal of the game as the Leafs defeated the Bruins last evening.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras—Central Honduras has suffered from a serious earthquake. Little can be ascertained of the extent of the damage due to shattered communications.

Toronto—This year for the first time the value of Ontario's mineral production will exceed the value of her field crops, stated Hon. Charles McCrear in a lecture last evening.

Windsor—It was announced yesterday that Windsor and three border cities would be united to form Ontario's fourth largest city with a population of over 100,000.

Baton Rouge, La.—The four students expelled from Louisiana State University have demanded a hearing before the University's board of trustees. They were expelled for refusing to apologize for signing a petition which protested the censoring of the student newspaper—the Reveille.

Hamilton—The war questionnaire published in the Silhouette, the McMaster Undergraduate Weekly, discovered the fact that the majority of students will go to war only if Canada is invaded. McMaster has returned the heaviest ballot of any university in Canada to date.

HEALTH INSURANCE FINDS SUPPORT

Representatives of Various Faculties Have Begun Investigation

TRINITY INTERESTED

"The representatives are now sounding out their respective faculties," said E. A. Macdonald, interviewed by The Varsity yesterday in the matter of the new Health Insurance project. "The idea seems to be a very good one," was the opinion of T. A. Reed of the Athletic Directorate. "It seems to have met with great success at Western and at Queen's," he added.

Approached on the same subject, neither the Bursar of the University nor Dr. Porter of Hart House would venture an opinion, the former claiming that as yet, the matter had not come before him, and the latter merely refusing to disclose his views upon the subject.

Mr. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., added, in his interview, that several colleges had already ventured their opinions on the project and that among those interested were Wycliffe, Dentistry and Victoria. Trinity, on the other hand, has already started investigations on their own and the Trinity College Athletic Association is hoping to start some type of health insurance among their own members.

FORCED ENLISTMENT INAPPLICABLE HERE LAWYERS PROCLAIM

Compulsory Military Service Thought Unlikely for Varsity Students

APPLIES IN U.S.

Additional Legislation Will Be Necessary to Legalize Conscription

Since the University of California is a college which holds former public lands granted to it by the United States Government, it has the power to compel its students to take military training regardless of their religious beliefs or other conscientious objections which they may have. Such was the ruling handed down by the Supreme Court of the United States on Monday last.

What is the law with regard to this in our own university? Canadian law and that of the United States come from the same source and hence are very similar. The University of Toronto undoubtedly holds land by grant from the Crown and thus the question arises: could our male undergraduates be forced to submit to military training, and if they refused could they be disciplined? ### SOCRATES ACCUSED OF HIGH TREASON

Bernard Shaw and Socrates Are Both Eccentric Exhibitionists

ANCIENT MICKEY MOUSE

Last night at Professor Havelock's home, the Victoria Classical Club held its second meeting of the year. The feature of the evening was a debate, "Resolved that Socrates got all that was coming to him."

Miss Sim, speaking for the affirmative, stated that Socrates was a nuisance, one who liked to bask in the limelight, an ancient Bernard Shaw who liked his eccentric genius to be noticed everywhere.

Socratic irony the speaker said was rather Socratic cussedness. "It was his unholy delight to make his opponents squirm." He capitalized his freak features like Shaw does his silken beard. "The great one's death in a" (Continued on Page 4)

FIRST DOLLAR DANCE SLATED FOR FRIDAY

Honour Science Club Now Recognized as Social Unit

Next Friday evening sees the first of the Dollar Dances for this year sponsored by the Honour Science Club. Nine years ago a group of students in the Arts science courses organized a small social group which they called the Honour Science Club. With increasingly larger registration in the Arts science courses, the club has grown vigorously until it now stands a recognized important social organization on the campus. A number of functions are planned each term for members of the club only and along with these, each year the club puts on two or three "Dollar" dances which are open to student non-members. A well known orchestra has been engaged for the first of these on Friday and the steady progress being made by the club augurs well for the success of the party.

Library School Reunion

The Library School of the University of Toronto has sent out invitations to their graduates to attend a Reunion at the Library School, Ontario College of Education, on Wednesday, December 5. Dr. William Warner Bishop, Librarian of the University of Michigan and President of the International Federation of Library Associations, will be the guest speaker.

Certain Men Prefer Them Dumb However Wisdom Sought by Some

"When it comes to sharp-witted women—gentlemen prefer them blunt,"—thus spoke Zarathustra—in this case Mr. Mervin Mirsky,—in upholding the negative side of the motion, "Resolved that ignorance in a man is bliss, but unattractive in a miss", at the joint meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society and the Women's Undergraduate Association held in the Junior Common Room last evening.

"The dumb girl differs from the intelligent girl in two respects—adaptability and personality", was the enlightening statement from Miss Mary McLean, first speaker for the affirmative. Miss McLean continued her talk, enlarging upon this statement, with numerous extremely witty statements, and succeeded in almost clinching her argument that man prefers an intelligent companion to a stupid one.

Miss Jean Muter, second speaker of the affirmative, continued the arguments of her fair colleague, by outlining the disastrous effects of a dumb wife on the striving young business man, and her plea for the intelligent girl, must have been effective, for despite the remarks of the other half of Messrs.

CITY CO-OPERATES TO INSTALL SYSTEM OF SAFETY SIGNALS

Traffic Lights to be Installed at Queen's Park Crescent Crossings

TUNNELLING SHUNNED

Signals Will Be Operated by Push Buttons at the Roadside

A system of three signal lights, operated by push button, to enable students to cross safely through the heavy traffic of Queen's Park Crescent and Avenue Road, will shortly be installed by the Toronto Police Department, if present plans go through.

In an interview with Dr. Louis F. Barber, Superintendent of Victoria University, The Varsity was yesterday informed that the new system of traffic lights had been promised to the University by the city. One light will be situated on Avenue Road, either at Charles St. or opposite Wymwood to safeguard Victoria co-eds going to and from Amesley Hall and the college. The signal will show a steady green light to motor traffic unless the control button on either side of the roadway (Continued on Page 4)

ICE AGE VESTIGES FOUND IN TROPICS

Authentic Proof of Ice Age is Seen in Polished Boulders

THEORIES INADEQUATE

"The various climates of the world are characterized by strange features that we are unable to account for, and one of the most astounding things is that in almost every tropical country, geologists have discovered positive evidences of vast sheets of ice that once existed there," stated Dr. A. P. Coleman, in his illustrated lecture on Ancient Ice Ages, at the Museum yesterday.

The most authentic proof of the Ice Age known as the Permo-Carboniferous, is to be found in the huge boulders of clay which have been smoothed and polished by the glaciers moving over their surfaces. Dr. Coleman showed maps depicting the distribution of the Ice Age in Africa, South America, Australia and India. By means of coloured slides the audience was taken on a tour through jungles, deserts and mountains of these countries. Dr. Coleman kept emphasizing the fact that here where strange animals and vegetation abound, the nature of the country is entirely different to that of ours. He described his travels through tropics (Continued on Page 4)

INSURANCE THOUGHT AID TO ATHLETES

Benefit to Other Students Feared Insufficient by Most

BEQUEST NEEDED

Student opinion is in favour of an adequate scheme of health insurance, but it is afraid that the student body may be railroaded into a compulsory system which will subsidize injuries received in athletics without any relative compensatory benefits for those who do not take such an active interest in sports.

Mr. H. L. Rowntree, II U.C., declared: "Health insurance paid by the students would be too expensive, but a system of medical attendance such (Continued on Page 3)

SUCCESSFUL DANCE HELD BY SCIENCE FACULTY

Rhythmical music, carefree couples, and vociferous "Toke Olkes" combined to ensure the success of the Junior Dance of the Faculty of Applied Science, which, with Nels Kelly and his Varsity Kampus Katz furnishing the rhythm, was held at Coles' College Street last evening.

The committee in charge of arrangements included G. A. Aitken, R. L. Campbell and G. E. Smith. The patrons and patronesses from the faculty were Professor and Mrs. R. W. Angus, Professor and Mrs. E. A. Allcut, Professor and Mrs. W. J. T. Wright, and Dr. and Mrs. R. R. McLaughlin.

Varsity Greatly Improved Since Last Hamilton Tiger Encounter

BENNETT OUTSTANDING

Early Lead Attained by the Students Overcome in Later Stages

Hamilton Tigers paid the first of their semi-annual visits to Varsity Arena last night and went home very disillusioned as to the merits of the Blue hockey team after being checked to a standstill for the first two periods. However, experience and superior team play gave them a wide margin in the final session and they finally emerged winners by a 5-2 score.

The Varsity squad turned in a much superior exhibition than they had previously. They are the first team to score twice against the much vaunted Tigers and at one stage were leading 2-1. The Hamilton team were fast and tricky. Their team work was much superior to that of the students. Penalties were plentiful and at various times it seemed as if a brawl was in the offing. The Hamilton team exhibited all the qualities that make the Mountain City teams so unpopular here, namely high sticks, quick tempers and a tendency to dispute all decisions.

The front line of McLelland, Hendry and McPherson was called upon to bear the greater part of the attack and as a result they looked very tired in (Continued on Page 3)

SIMPLE EFFECTS TO MARK 'OTHELLO'

Passionate Nature Makes Presentation a Hazard

OTHELLO IS ARAB

"I intend to place more emphasis on sound effects than on visual effects in my production of Othello," stated Professor G. Wilson Knight, who will present this play at Hart House on Dec. 6, 7 and 8. "It is my belief that visual effects should never be too elaborate and I strive for simplicity in my stage settings particularly.

"It is a risky play to produce financially because you cannot always get the schools to attend it, since the passionate theme is not likely to be considered good for young people," asserted Professor Knight.

"I think it is as great a play as Hamlet, if not greater. However, I find the role of Othello much more difficult to play than that of Hamlet, because it is very violent and passionate. In addition there is some difficulty in the presentation of certain strange scenes, such as the strangle scene and the trances."

Mr. Knight is not attempting to make the costumes representative of any definite period. He maintains that the costumes should rather reflect the character of the people.

Mr. Linden Smith, who did Polonius very successfully in Mr. Knight's production of Hamlet last year, is playing the role of Iago. This character is probably the worst villain in all literature and is to be regarded really as a devil. Patricia Murphy, who played Ophelia, is Desdemona, and Mrs. Lucas, who played Juliet opposite Mr. Knight two years ago, is Emelia.

There is a difference of opinion as to how Othello should be presented. "I am presenting this character as an Arab, which is usual in the theatre, rather than as a Negro," stated Mr. Knight in conclusion.

The Forgotten Column

Many times in the past, platitudes of varying length and merit have graced this column, describing, in an editorial way, the usefulness of The Varsity to the students of the University. The unique position that a campus journal holds, independent as it is from political affiliation, and the necessity of maintaining a circulation at whatever cost,—has been discussed from every angle. The fact that a University paper is practically unhampered by "Advertising" obligations and free to fulfil its purpose to the best of its ability, is well known. But what may be more difficult to determine is exactly how such a publication may be of greatest value, what is its real purpose, and what the best method of achieving the desired end.

Some years ago, a striking comment was made about a large American periodical—that, although its articles were always read, rarely more than a third of them were read by the same individual. The publishers made, and still make, an attempt to meet the demands from a varied group of readers, and articles as diverse as the poles have been included under its covers to attract readers whose interests are equally diverse.

A newspaper, from its very nature, must be diverse in the topics it deals with, but should it naturally follow that of those same columns, two-thirds should be of, no particular interest or attraction to the average reader? To a number of students, The Varsity is a source of campus "News". To some, a tabulation of yesterday's sport scores, and a prophecy of the probable results of today's games. To some it is a source of inspiration and thought, to others an opportunity to see their names in print. Some executives, saturated with enthusiasm for a dance, consider it an outlet to thrust their feelings on an unsuspecting public. To the members of the staff, it presents an outlet for journalistic tendencies, and an opportunity to learn newspaper work. To a small number, it furnishes an admirable cover for a filthy laboratory bench.

However varied these purposes that The Varsity fulfils, the fact remains that the undergraduate newspaper is a mirror of the whole of University life. A great deal of the purpose of a college education is to broaden the student's outlook, and increase the scope of his interests. What better opportunity presents itself, than a careful and constant perusal of the daily undergraduate newspaper.

Many people are too prone to pass judgment on The Varsity because it excels or fails in the particular topic in which they are interested. To some, a particularly witty remark in the humour column may win general commendation for the whole publication, while others may condemn it because the particular game in which they figured received brief treatment. Like a machine, a newspaper is made up of many integral parts, each of which contributes its share to the general efficiency.

The editorial page, for example, is lost to many people. This may be due either to a lack of interest on the part of the reader, or the faulty presentation of editorial views. Thoughtful criticism would materially assist in the improvement of the latter, and most certainly have its effect on the former.

Wayne Parrish, through the Association of College Editors, comments on the "Power That Was The Press".

There is more than one reason to believe that the daily newspaper is slipping as a powerful instrument for forming public opinion. Only a few years ago the press pompously held fast to a virtual monopoly in the field of dissemination of news and information. The editorial pages were bottle grounds of opinion.

Mechanically the daily newspaper is today better equipped than ever before. In coverage facilities it excels. But its editorial page has become excess baggage.

Can this be true of The Varsity?

The Right to Criticize

One of the duties and privileges of a newspaper is that of offering commendation, and levelling criticism when either is merited. The University newspaper has an additional responsibility in that it is the only voice of the student body on the campus. For this reason, it is unfortunate that any department of the University should so strongly resent editorial criticism in The Varsity as to unceremoniously dismiss a member of the reportorial staff seeking information of importance to students.

Recently The Varsity published an editorial suggesting a more thorough physical examination for athletes. Attention was called to the superficiality of the present inspection, at the same time congratulating the Medical Examiner on the infrequency of serious injuries to those participating in athletics.

When the gentleman in question was sought yesterday to supply information which would have a bearing on the question of the proposed student health insurance, he refused to talk to the reporter, stating that he objected to criticism in The Varsity, and suggesting that the undergraduate paper has "an awful lot of gall, coming to speak to me after that".

We sincerely regret such an attitude on the part of any University official. The editorial in question was an expression of opinion, and as such, we believe its publication was justified. There was no personal animus involved, and it is deplorable that suggestions on University administration should be followed by such summary treatment to members of The Varsity staff.

City Planning

Since an elaborate scheme for "City Planning" was voted down by the people of Toronto some time ago, the city government has been forced to proceed on its own responsibility in solving an ever increasing traffic problem. The creation of a thorough north and south boulevard, making use of University Avenue and Avenue Road, was the project thus approved and begun three years ago. University Avenue was extended south from Queen to Front Streets, providing a direct outlet to the Lakeshore Highway. Avenue Road, above Eglinton, was extended north to meet the Yonge Street Highway. In between there remained two bottlenecks, at Queen's Park and at St. Clair.

The elimination of the Queen's Park problem was attempted this fall, when the local street widening project was begun without University authorities being notified in any way. Then came the recent "tree crisis" and the resulting conference of city and University representatives,—which should have taken place before the whole project was commenced. The upshot of this conference is that traffic on the fine new speedway being constructed south of Bloor Street now must be restricted by three "push-button" signal lights within a distance of a few hundred feet. Moreover, it will be noted that "rush-hour" for student pedestrians corresponds exactly with the busiest period of motor traffic.

The local fiasco is serious in itself, but is more important as an indication of a far greater mistake. Toronto's dismissal of comprehensive "Town Planning", tempts us to indulge in a little Town Planning.

The Shortest Distance . . .

The shortest distance between two points is usually across the campus. However, as winter approaches and fall rains transform our hitherto verdant sward into a miry menace, the watchword "Keep Off The Grass" once again comes to the fore. Students who are accustomed to taking this shortcut will be well advised to follow the firmer, if more tedious, concrete which circles the campus.

Terra Firma has its uses, but as a floor decoration in a semi-liquid state it has many drawbacks. In addition, next year's lawn will be greatly improved by an absence of traffic at this time of year. Students are requested to co-operate with mother nature to produce next spring a green carpet befitting its surroundings.

The Fountain Club

A new club, formed for the express purpose of producing original full-length plays, opened its curtains last evening in the theatre of the Public Library. The Fountain Club writes or discovers its own plays and produces them so that the authors may learn how exacting the theatre is. The first offering was a three-act play, All the Rivers, by a well known Toronto authoress, True Davidson. This play attempts to contrast English, American and Canadian types. With the general

ACTA

Yesterday morning the halls of Victoria were hushed. Ghostly shadows flickered across the hall where usually happy little groups are busily chattering of some social function. Not that morning did Vic students attend lectures; nay, they sat at home with their noses pressed against the window eagerly awaiting the postman as he merrily tripped up the street with his precious burden. For yesterday was Acta day! That magnificent, that colossal, that stupendous epitome of literature, Acta Victoriana, yesterday made its November appearance on December 3.

C-C

Exciting rumours have been rife during the past two weeks as to the contents of this issue of Acta. Some say there will be three book reviews instead of the customary two. An unconfirmed report states that Neilsons will run one of their yummy-yummy ads that created such a furore last winter. One page will be blank, which is a Virginia Bare ad properly censored. The keyhole went to the dry-cleaners this month, and will come forth with some startling revelations regarding the grape vine telegraph that exists between Burwash and Annesley Hall.

C-C

As an illustration of the influence of the Acta on individuals let us consider what occurs to The Varsity staff when they leave the monastic precincts of the Hart House rest room and adopt the classical robes befitting Methodist Scribes. ## THE SPORTSWOMAN

The curtain has been rung down on the baseball for this year and is just going up on the final act of the basketball series. The St. Hilda's squad added a 22 point lead to the 5 they had stored away and so quite decisively won a position in the playoffs. As we have said repeatedly, there are to be two final games—the first is tomorrow and the concluding one on Tuesday, December 11. These games are going to be real tussles from start to finish. The U.C. Seniors have a neat squad, but the Saints are quite able to hold their own against them and it is quite impossible at this point to predict the 1934 championship team.

The final tally in last night's game would indicate quite a walk-away for the Saints but such was not the case. The Vic outfit turned in a good performance, particularly their defence line. There was a certain amount of sloppiness and wild passing and they tended to let down after half-time. Betty Jenkinson and Alice Bannett displayed considerable versatility by filling both forward and guard positions and played well at all times. The defence was visibly weaker without them, although Ruth Young held out nicely. Betty's ball handling and intercepting was quite startling. The Scarlet and Gold junior group certainly put up a real fight for the playoff position and give every promise of providing excellent senior material for Victoria next year. Betty Jenkinson has the makings of an intercollegiate defence player already.

St. Hilda's put up more the sort of game one has become used to seeing turned in by a Blue and Grey sextette than they did on Thursday. Their forward line was superior to Victoria's although their defence was perhaps not quite so good. They seem to lack something of the innate ability their opponents have. End Palmer and Kay Grubbe played the best games of their basketball careers. Their sterling work is quite evident from Vic's minute score, for certainly the ball was at the Saints' end a goodly number of times. The Saints' plays were clicking nicely last night, and they made several points on swift plays right down the floor. Edie Ardagh was right in there from the start and Mary Carre spruced up considerably in the second half. A certain amount of fumbling detracted considerably from the general forward play.

May we suggest to the "Sports Writer from Afghanistan" that he or she convey his or her grievances to the Baseball Club. This column does not regulate the women's sports in this University.

VICTORIA DEFEATS O.C.E. IN VOLLEYBALL GAME

After a spiritless and rather poor exhibition of volleyball, the Ontario College of Education hopefuls succumbed last night, to the vastly superior Senior Victoria players. The score of the two games, 15-5 and 15-8, indicates how one-sided the games really were. For the winners Bodrug and Vanderleek showed up very well and Blachford and Henderson shone for the O.C.E. squad.

ST. HILDA'S VICTORS IN SEMI-FINALS

Victoria Juniors Are Downed in Fast Basketball Fixture

CLOSE DEFENSIVE WORK

St. Hilda's basketball team won the second and concluding game of the intercollegiate semi-finals last night at O.C.E. gym by defeating Vic Juniors by a 33-11 tally.

Parts of the game did not exhibit very high calibre basketball, but at certain points both defence lines did some brilliant work, especially Betty Jenkinson of the Scarlet and Gold outfit. There were exceptionally few fouls called on either team. The ball handling and interception on Vic's part was good, and the Saints' combinations worked with fair success.

The Saints led in the scoring from the play throughout, especially in the first minute and had the edge on second periods. Close defensive work by both teams held the score at half time to 15-7, but the lead was too much for Vic to overcome.

There was considerable scrambling and high, wild passing by both forward lines and many baskets were lost by faulty, uncertain shooting.

Vic's defence weakened as the game proceeded in the last period and allowed a piling up of the score by the Blue and Grey squad. The third period almost doubled the Saints' tally, while Vic counted two points. In the final session the Saints had it cinched and topped their then leading score by 6 more points, while holding Vic to one further basket. The game, however, was not the walk-away the final quotient indicates.

St. Hilda's: E. Ardagh (15), M. McDonald (10), M. L. Carre (6), J. Kirk (2), I. Wallbridge, E. Palmer, K. Grubbe, E. Wilson, M. Dignam. Vic Jrs.: M. Best, M. Beaton (2), E. McIntosh, M. Sedgewick (2), D. Henderson (7), B. Jenkinson, R. Young, A. Bannett, S. Brown, G. Kipper.

MODERNS IMITATE STYLE OF ANCIENTS

Georgian Architecture Claimed to be First Domestic Style

FOREST HILL COPIES

"Georgian architecture is the finest domestic style ever developed," stated Mr. Gordon Adamson, B.Arch., in his weekly lecture at the Museum, yesterday afternoon. At the beginning of the Georgian period, the work was comparatively free of ornament. Toward the end of the 16th century and the beginning of the 17th, some features recalled the early Tudor work. Certain characteristics of this Georgian type are the two-colour brick work, an example of which we can see in the woman's residence and in Upper Canada College. In a later type of this architecture Sir Christopher Wren came into prominence.

"The longer a person studies architecture, the more he appreciates the simple and deliberate style," maintained Mr. Adamson. This opinion seems to be well supported, in the delicacy and simplicity shown in the period of Robert Adams, the best known of later Georgian architects. Some of this work reveals the early Greek and Roman, but brought down and adapted to the Georgian style. An even later Georgian period tended to become quite formal.

In conclusion, Mr. Adamson pointed out that Forest Hill, too, seems to be turning to this type of architecture, using brick instead of stucco which for the last few years has been quite popular.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Varsity's defeat at the hands of the Hamilton Tigers did not come as a surprise but the work of the students was a hundred per cent better than that of their first appearance. The Blue team came from behind to take the lead and for more than half the distance they actually looked superior to the Tigers. However, when it came to getting goals when they were needed the more experienced Bengals went about it in a systematic method which produced results. At that they scored the equalizer when Varsity was short handed. That particular goal was more than slightly reminiscent of a gift.

One of the things which stood out about the contest was the interest several of the Varsity men took in the game. This interest, however, was more manifest in their tendency to go skating rather than to play hockey. While we admit that pleasure skating has few equals as a pastime, there are times when this hobby is detrimental to the welfare of a team. One of these times is when the opposing team is charging on the Varsity goal. At such a time it would appear to us to be desirable for the players to return to their own end of the battlefield where they might possibly be of some use. A few of the Varsity men insisted on their exercise and took it out in the form of a nice little pleasure skate around the opposition's nets, while their brethren were left short handed, endeavouring to turn back the thrusts of the attacker.

However, while this fault was evident, the Blue team did, for the most part, play a good brand of hockey. There is not another team in the league who will go in and battle like Varsity and they are at all times colourful to watch. In regard to the Tigers, they seem to have the best team in the circuit and it is our guess that they will be still playing hockey next spring when the Allan Cup is the prize, instead of a point in the race.

Trinity's hopes of an intercollegiate lacrosse title received a severe setback last night when their star forward, Burchell, was injured during a practice game. Burchell was struck on the back of the head with a stick during a practice session. He was removed to the hospital, and it is feared that he is suffering from a concussion.

The first real battles of the season occurred last night in the gym where the Engineers sought to decide who should hold what championship. Many of the battles were of the gory type, but there were no knockouts. The boys were, as per usual, slightly short on condition, and adhered to the custom of making a fast start and slowing down to a walk before they reached the third round. However, there was less of this than usual and more than the usual amount of fight shown during the affair. Knockdowns were frequent, but none of the boys stayed down, although we have a feeling that some of them would have liked to do so. At any rate, it was in our estimation, the best faculty assault to be witnessed since we started witnessing faculty assaults.

FAST BOUTS STAGED BY S. P. S. BOXERS

Result of School Assault Pre-sages Threat for Boxing Title

S.P.S. staged their annual assault in Hart House yesterday afternoon, to pick their B. W. and F. team for the junior intercollegiate assault next week. The Schoolmen won the affair last year and, on the strength of their showing yesterday, are favoured to repeat.

The boxers attracted the most attention, producing fast action and some bloody scrapping. In the 155 lb. bout, King used several wrestling holds, including the flying mare, to take the decision from Gooch in a very gory exhibition. The 118 lb. class produced a real prospect in Carmichael, who earned the only technical K.O. of the afternoon. Bracken made good use of his hard-hitting right hand to take the decision from Boyd in the 165 lb. bout.

All the wrestling bouts were vigorously contested, some of them going overtime. Houle, in the 145 lb. class, displayed championship form, flooring opponents in decisive fashion. In the 125 lb. class, Barber got the decision over Hall.

Lensam annexed the fencing title with Cavanagh only one point behind, and Partridge a close third.

Results—Boxing—118 lbs.—Carmichael def. Piddock, decision; Carmichael def. Turner, tech. K.O. in second.

135 lbs.—Millsen def. Pallett, decision.

145 lbs.—Young def. Ashenhurst, decision; Graham def. Young, decision.

155 lbs.—King def. Gooch, decision.

165 lbs.—Bracken def. Boyd, decision.

Wrestling—125 lbs.—Barber def. Hall, decision.

Extra round.

135 lbs.—Minaker def. Beard. One fall each.

145 lbs.—Houle def. Snitch, 2 falls; Houle def. Rodzik, 2 falls.

Wrestling, Exhibition—Zachanko, 165, drew with Lathrop, 175.

Fencing winners—Lensam, Cavanagh, Partridge.

S.P.S. WIN EXHIBITION GAME

The Junior S.P.S. lacrosse team were victors over the North Toronto Collegiate team in an exhibition game held yesterday afternoon in Hart House gymnasium. The score was 9-4.

WATER POLO TILTS TAKEN BY C.S.C.

Canadian Swimming Club Hand Double Defeat to Varsity

Varsity suffered a double defeat last night when both the senior and junior water polo teams lost to the Canadian Swimming Club in the latter's own pool. The scores 5-2 in the senior contest, and 7-3 in the junior, give a fair indication of the play.

In the senior tilt, which was well played and exciting, both teams exhibited a good brand of water polo. In the first period Varsity, defending the shallow end of the pool, lost a number of opportunities to score as the ball hit the goal posts or cross bar, and they began the second half with the score 2-0 against them. A penalty shot made it 3-0 and Varsity pressed hard. Bancroft scored when the Blue team had a one man advantage. Their opponents came back strong to make it 4-1. Bancroft again scored for Varsity but a nice tip shot at the goal mouth put the game in the bag. Bancroft, Davey and the McCarty brothers all played well for the Blue team, while Rosen and Smart were the standouts for their opponents.

In the junior game, which was a rather splashy affair with a number of penalties for both sides, Varsity entered the second half with a 2-1 lead.

Two goals in quick succession gave the lead to the Canadian Swimming Club entry early in the second half but Varsity tied it up and appeared to have a good chance until three long passes the length of the pool netted as many goals for their opponents, and another point in the dying moments of the game made it 7-3.

Varsity Seniors: Murphy, Culmer, Devitt, Davey, W. McCarty, K. McCarty, Bancroft.

INSURANCE THOUGHT AIO TO ATHLETES

as is in force at Queen's is desirable." A fifth year medical student who preferred to remain unknown, was in favour of the idea, but claimed that unless it were compulsory, it might fall for lack of support as happened with a similar scheme introduced among the medical students several years ago.

"For the average run of student there is not much in it," stated Mr. E. B. W. MacRobie, IV S.P.S. "there is scarcely one in a hundred who will get anything by it, except those in sports. It should not be compulsory as there are too few of us taking part in athletics to make it worthwhile."

An anonymous fourth year C. and F. man doubted if the scheme were practical on an actuarial basis, seeing that it had no fund behind it, and suggested a bequest as a possible remedy, such as has aided various other universities in this respect.

Those taking part in athletics were behind it practically to a man, but even some of them had doubts as to the efficiency of such a new system.

HAMILTON TAKE VARSITY IN HOCKEY FIXTURE

the last frame. As usual Maxie Bennett was the big noise for Hamilton, getting two goals and an assist. This speedy forward was the outstanding man on the ice. Varsity's second line did not go nearly as well and Warren Stevens used them sparingly.

The first period was a close checking affair with each team waiting for an advantage. Hamilton found theirs when Campbell was serving time and Howard shot one home that didn't give Shipp a chance.

After the rest period Varsity looked like an inspired team. McPherson shot from the blue line and Normie McLeland shoved the rebound past Teno to even the score. A minute later Rey took a perfect goal mouth pass from Devine to put Varsity up one goal. Penalties reduced Jeffrey and Sweeney from the ranks and Liscombe scored the equalizer. The play returned to the Hamilton end when both teams were at full strength but the Tigers' defence was working splendidly. Bennett scored a well earned goal to put the Tigers in the lead.

The third period play was very sloppy. Penalties gave Varsity a man advantage repeatedly but they were unable to capitalize on their chances.

Goals by Bennett and Blake gave Hamilton their insurmountable lead and they were content to finish the game protecting it.

Bennett was the outstanding player on the ice while Rey turned in a good game for Varsity.

missed from the University?
The Varsity interviewed three members of the Department of Law on the matter, who gave their decision as follows:

"Universities and education are, by the British North America Act, matters of provincial jurisdiction while militia, etc., come under the powers of the Dominion. In the case before the Supreme Court of the United States there is evidently some agreement between the federal government and the University which would be impossible in Canada. It is doubtful if the University of Toronto could lay down military training as a requirement similar to the present rules about physical training and the only way such a rule could come into being would be for the Dominion Government to imply it from the present Militia Act."

comfortable prison by a painless poison was the answer to an exhibitionist's prayers.
Mr. J. A. Wheldrick, in supporting the negative, averred that Socrates was put to death for his political opinion, that his criticism was concrete and had it been followed the Athenian state would not have perished. "Socrates was the first man to turn Athenian thought from vague speculation to retrospection."

The third speaker was Mr. J. H. Jones. "The real charge against Socrates was not atheism and corruption of youth, it was high treason against the democracy," he said.

Miss R. Giles, for the negative, defended Socrates the exhibitionist, on the ground that every great man is an actor, being a means to an end. In turn Socrates was referred to as the Mickey Mouse of the ancient world—in features only; and that his ugliness was only skin deep.

The negative side was favoured with the decision by popular vote.

cluding Rt. Hon. W. Stobie, Rt. Hon. W. A. Beamish, and Hon. A. G. Rankin. It is believed the line of attack to be taken by the government will be that in Honour Courses, so much time is taken up in doing the necessary work, that there is no time left for education in the broader sense of the word, while the Pass Course lasts only three years. The Opposition will be led by the Rt. Hon. Israel Kaplan, who will be supported by the Rt. Hon. Morris Wayman.

plot of the play one could be quite content. This one must say, however, that a plot is not enough to hold a play together, but should display a general pattern. Miss Davidson may feel that there is a pattern, from which is derived her plot, but it does not appear plainly enough.

The most important factor to be considered is Miss Davidson's inability to cope fully with the technical requirements of the theatre. It is precisely to this point that those aspiring to playwrighting must pay most attention. Long pauses, Shakespearean grouping, superfluous characters on the stage, repetition, tediousness; all these and many more defects must be avoided.

The play can be worked up and smoothed out so that it is very presentable. The lines are clever and the situations are well handled. The cast is to be commended on the manner in which it caught the spirit of the play. Those who took parts were Jack W. Barnes, Joby Freeland, Agnes Thompson, Joseph Poole, Donald Sutherland, Florence White, Jean Cameron, Murray Rosebrugh, Gordon Forbes, David Hytton. The play was under the direction of Gordon Forbes.

Of many Canadian full-length plays, True Davidson's shows the most promise. The Fountain Club will help to emphasize the fact that the stage demands certain qualifications of technique from its playwrights as well as its actors.

It is very difficult to force into words the meaning, the exquisite sensibility, the sincerity of Milne's work. Milne's work has an indelible haunting beauty which could be expressed more easily in music than in

Of the other two lights, one will be placed before the main entrance to the college on the north-east side of Queen's Park Crescent, and the other will be installed near the cenotaph at the foot of Avenue Rd. These two signal will be synchronized so that both will show red or green at the same time. There will thus be less interference with traffic, it is thought, than if all three lights operated independently.

The plan to install the signal system was tentatively decided upon by a consultation of University and city officials, it was learned, after a more expensive tunnelling project had been rejected.

In conclusion the speaker expressed his belief that we are now coming to the end of an ice age and that although about twenty different theories have been advanced to explain the cause of ice ages, none of them seem very probable.

prose—the paint sings on the canvas and the colours vibrate and echo with superb clarity.

The catalogue will tell you that he was born in Bruce County in 1882, studied at the Art Students' League in New York, served in the war and was commissioned as a Canadian War Memorial painter and that he is now living in a shack on Six Mile Lake. The exhibition will tell you that Milne has a remarkably original and sensitive mind, unspoiled by commercialism and uninfluenced by schools or movements.

Milne's work has never been widely exhibited or very widely known—this is, in fact, his first one-man show. His art is too simple, quiet and sincere to appeal to a wide public. Those who like slap, dash and vigour will undoubtedly call Milne anemic and those who cannot accept something new and refreshing will be horrified; but those who recognize greatness and sincerity will be thrilled.

The exhibition is at Mellow's Gallery (Yonge Street just above Bloor) and will be there only until the 8th of December. Much thanks is due to those people who with foresight and taste have sponsored this show. Please go and see this exhibition, it is one of the more important events in Canadian art.

'19TH CENTURY ART BEING LEFT BEHIND'

Professor Alford Addresses
Women's Club on "Modern Trend in Art"

CEZANNE CITED

"Art should give to nature the thrill of permanence with all the appearance of its change," quoted Professor Alford, when addressing the Women's Canadian Club on "The Modern Trend in Art", at the Eaton Auditorium yesterday afternoon.

To understand what has been happening in modern painting we must realize that the late 19th century art which is being left behind and which is usually regarded as normal, is really abnormal. The Industrial Revolution, which destroyed the rustic characteristics of traditional Europe and replaced monasteries with modern buildings, inclined the people to escape from this ugly realism by turning to an imaginary world in their paintings.

Miller and his colleagues, though sincere, were essentially romanticists, and their work was emotional and frequently sentimental. The inevitable reaction to this negative type of art was led by Constable, whose theory of impressionism conveyed the idea that the active life of nature was sufficient material for the artist. Monet, also an impressionist, was one of the first to discover the beauty of Japanese art, which was already aware of how to give the necessary balance to a picture without losing its spontaneity, so that it seemed to be an unpremeditated composition giving somewhat the effect of a snapshot.

Cezanne felt that this business of recording the passing moment was after all a little superficial, a mere record which did not invoke the all-satisfying, so he tried to introduce

A lamp post in front of University College was broken into several pieces when a car driven by a University College undergraduate, momentarily out of control, mounted the pavement and struck it. The post was carried fifteen feet by the impact, and the shattered glass punctured all four of the tires. Except for the tires and a slightly bent fender, no damage was done to the car, and with the assistance of several on-lookers, the car was moved off the lawn and under its own power flopped its way down the crescent to wait for a tow truck. The passengers were not even badly shaken up. The Varsity was informed that a settlement has already been reached with the authorities with regard to the damage done.

"PRECIOUS CO-EOS SAVED"

Two Snow-Covered Geologists
"Refuse to be Quoted in Student opinion generally is favourable to the proposed system of traffic lights on Queen's Park Crescent. Some favour the tunnel first proposed, but agree that the lights are an acceptable substitute.

L. F. Greer, IV Forestry, very naturally was very much upset over the destruction of the trees to widen the street. "Going home," he said, "I frequently have to wait ten minutes and then I dodge across at risk of getting run down." In his opinion the lights would adequately take care of the situation. "It might hold up traffic a bit but after all the pedestrian needs some protection."

Raymond Roach, I St. Michael's College, thought that it was a good idea. A tunnel would be too expensive, although it might be more convenient for both motorist and pedestrian. If an adequate system of Town Planning had been followed, this difficulty would not have arisen, he declared.

This was brought forth by a survey yesterday concerning Tuesday's editorial, "The Forgotten Column", which discussed the lack of interest in this department of the paper. All agreed that controversial subjects made much more interesting reading but realized how much the policy of the editor was restricted.

REHEARSALS STARTED BY PLAYERS' GUILD

Ibsen's Play, "The Wild Duck", is Long and "Occasionally Quite Crude"

On January 27th and 28th the Players' Guild will present "The Wild Duck" by Ibsen, under the direction of Mr. Victor Lange, of the German department, University College.

"This play has not been done in Toronto more than once before. Toronto audiences do not seem to appreciate Ibsen. 'The Wild Duck' is a symbolic play which is occasionally quite crude. There is more to learn than the problems he presents," said Mr. Lange when interviewed by The Varsity.

The play consists of five acts and is quite long. It will require many rehearsals before it reaches even a half-finished stage. Because of the length of passages, a good deal of time will be spent in learning the lines. Unlike the usual Anglo-Saxon play, Ibsen's plays do not contain very much action.

Mr. Allan Jarvis is painting the scenery for the play. There are several difficult scenes which will require quite intensive work.

Among the members of the cast will be Miss Lucy Jane Graybell, Miss C. G. Laidy, Mr. Gordon Robertson, Mr. Jack Graham, Mr. Fergus Tobin, and Mr. A. W. Fanger.

Christmas Literary Issue

The Christmas Literary Issue of The Varsity will appear on Friday, December 14. Manuscripts or sketches will be accepted until 5 p.m. next Tuesday, and may be handed in to the Men's News Office in Hart House, or the Women's Office, Room 42A in University College. All contributions must bear the full name, faculty and year of the student.

Eight prizes, totalling $36.00, are offered as follows: prose, first prize $5, second prize $3; poetry, first prize $5, second prize $3; humorous prose $5; humorous verse $5; for the best sketch of a campus subject $5; best sketch of a general subject $5. All fully registered students are eligible to compete for the prizes. Manuscripts should be typed or written clearly on one side of the paper only.

Judges will be announced tomorrow.

First Term Fees Must Be Paid

The Varsity has been requested by Simcoe Hall to publish the following University regulation:

"Students must have paid the fees due in the first term before proceeding with the work of the second term."

It is the intention of the University authorities to enforce this regulation in all faculties. Students should, therefore, make the necessary arrangements for the payment of all fees for the first term before the opening of the second term on January 3rd, 1935, in order that they may be eligible to continue their registration for the second term.

Student Congress Against War and Fascism to be Held

A general meeting organized by the Anti-War Society to decide upon the sending of a delegate to the International Student Congress Against War and Fascism, assembled at the Women's Union last night. There were representatives there from several societies around the campus who were interested in lending support to this movement. The necessity for immediate action was pointed out as the Congress is to convene on December twenty-ninth, thirtieth, and thirty-first of this month.

It was brought out at the meeting that the tendency in Canadian universities is toward provincialism. A spirit of internationalism was stated to be definitely lacking in Toronto University. It was felt that by sending a delegate to the Student Congress, Canadian students could get first-hand information about world affairs.

Three delegates were nominated at the meeting, but further nominations will still be accepted. Ken Woodsworth, Peter Sandford, and Claude de Mestral were named as possible candidates.

A committee of seven was appointed to make plans for, and to carry on the campaign.

"ESCAPE FROM UGLINESS"

Speaking on the reaction of the 19th century to commercial expansion, Professor Alford continued his series of sketch room lectures Wednesday.

In the eighteenth century, he said, the English countryside was kept as in the Italian and Romantic school of paintings at the will of the landed aristocracy.

Later the middle-class became supreme, and they, without traditions, turned the cities into places of ugliness. As a result, an escape from drab reality was needed, and we got romantic sentiment, oriental scenes, romance and emotionalism in painting.

Impressionism was an honest kind of naturalism until Cezanne demonstrated what was in himself with the scene secondary, giving a particular effect of the scene under certain conditions.

NIGHT TUTORING CLASSES ARE ON INCREASE

The enrollment in the evening tutorial classes, conducted by the Department of Extension, is 2609 up to date, an increase of one thousand.

The enrollment in the Workers' Education Association classes, held in the evenings in the Economics Building, is 663. In the Teachers' classes there are 350 taking instruction at nights towards the B.A. degree. This makes a total of 3622 adult men and women attending the University this session in the evenings.

WOMEN AND WAR

Is the attitude of women toward war to count for nothing in the prevention of another world cataclysm? Why should they not make their voices heard above the tumult of those who support war as the only and inevitable means of settling international disputes? Women have been guilty of glorifying the heroic and sacrificial in war. They have been too blind, too cowardly, perhaps, to denounce the futile waste, the insanity, the hideous brutality of war, whatever may have been the pretence put up for its necessity; they have been too slow to expose the real causes of war, too eager to join in the cry, "My country right or wrong", and to lay the blame at the door of so-called aggressor nations, rather than to condemn the racial prejudice, the greed and imperialism of every country, not excepting our own.

There is an imperative need for women to make a definite stand against war. We have a right to speak, for in the event of another war, we, too, are going to suffer, as women must, as they did from 1914-18, its mind- and soul-destroying torture. We cannot permit men to say that it is their business only. If merely to prevent a more horrible repetition of a state of hell on earth, women are, or should be, vitally concerned in the cause of world peace. Moreover, as women, and as so-called Christian women, we should be even more concerned in the doing of our share in the name of common humanity, in the name of the brotherhood of all men. We are too prone to say that the weapons of women are powerful to calm the passions in the world that are breeding war. We must rouse ourselves from our lethargy and awake to the realization of our own power, our own influence. The trouble with most of us is that we are too indifferent to the fact that it is our urgent duty to take up the fight against war. The world needs women, who, wherever they may be, in the office, in the home, in the school, in every kind of social contact, will seize their opportunities and seek to inspire in the hearts of others a positive and practical will to peace. The sphere in which women should be particularly prominent is in the training of the young, the new generation. What is going to be their attitude toward war? We have a heavy responsibility for that attitude whatever it may be. Our influence will not always be obvious, but if we are sincere in our effort, our words and example can spread like a leaven of peace throughout our country, throughout the world. Let us no longer shirk our task. There is a call to women to arm in the cause of peace. Let our weapons be our constant striving against the hatred of nations and the economic greed of men, and toward the creation of a spirit of international good-will and co-operation. H.S.

Reports come in consistently at this time of year, calling attention to the fact that overcoats are being stolen. In one building three overcoats were stolen one morning recently, in another there have been nine lost so far this year. No building is exempt from the seasonal activities of the coat-snatcher.

The loss of overcoats constitutes an expense to students amounting to hundreds, if not thousands, of dollars each year, an expense which is avoidable to a great extent. In Hart House, for instance, there is a check room for clothing, or valuables may be left with the Hall Porter after hours. At many lectures the class does not fill the room, and coats are left at the back of the room where they are comparatively safe.

Whatever measures may be necessary, students will be well advised to keep as close a watch as possible on their hats and overcoats.

The Literary Issue

A notice appears on the front page today, drawing attention to the Christmas Literary Issue of The Varsity which is to appear on Friday, December 14. Prizes amounting to $36.00 have been offered by the Students' Administrative Council for the best work in the various classes. Literary efforts of any kind may be entered by any undergraduate of the University, and all unused manuscripts will be returned.

We sincerely hope that there will be a considerable response to this appeal for literary aid, particularly since the Literary Issue last year was cancelled due to a lack of any active interest, and the complete absence of any material worthy of a prize. Short stories should not exceed an absolute maximum of 1500 words, and general articles should be much shorter than this. Generally speaking, reasonable brevity will be an asset.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

The M.C. Players' Guild

When the Players' Guild presented scenes from Men in White yesterday afternoon, the general standard of the Guild productions was decidedly raised. It was a good bit of drama, well played, and it pleased an audience which filled the theatre of the Women's Union. Not only was the presentation a success as an example of good acting, good staging and a fine choice of material, but it brought forth a more interesting discussion than the Guild has heard for some time. The one main criticism is, that, as with most amateur productions, the acting lacked the coherence which results from correct timing and steady but speedy tempo.

Don Stewart as Dr. Ferguson, Dorothy Upjohn as Laura Hudson, and Jack Graham as Dr. Hochberg, displayed a finished acting which promises to put them quite high in the roll call of amateur actors of that amateur actor-full town.

Eaton Auditorium

Grace Moore, lately sprung to fame through her singing in "One Night of Love", filled a return engagement, last night, at Eaton Auditorium. When Miss Moore appeared in this city some weeks ago, it was as soprano of the Metropolitan Quartet, and in that role it was scarcely possible to form an opinion of her singing as a solo artist. Now after hearing a full length recital it seems only fitting to say that as a movie actress Miss Moore is a fine singer.

With all the histrionic arts of the screen at her command, the possessor of a commanding and vivacious stage presence, Miss Moore naturally creates a certain quality of enthusiasm in her audience. But among the ranks of great artists with outstanding voices, it must be admitted that she is not far removed from mediocre. Her musicianship is lacking in the breadth and depth that

VEGETARIAN DISGUST

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:
Throughout my somewhat checkered career I have been a faithful and, I hope, intelligent follower of the drama. As such I cannot but have a deep reverence for the "Little Theatre" movement (the noble efforts of amateurs, surely the highest-minded of all artists) as it expresses itself in our fair country. But this should be, I maintain, a vehicle for our national ideals—it should be a voice yelling from the hearts of the people.

It must depress me then, to see that the Victoria College Dramatic Society—a society for which I had always felt the greatest respect, for which I had held the highest hopes—is proving traitor to this "Movement". What greater treason could there be than to debase in this manner, the standards of such a movement. They are producing an ordinary, low, crime play. My disgust can find no further expression, sir.

Vegetaire.

Are the Women to Blame?

The advent of another Women's Intercollegiate Debate reminds us bitterly of the ignominious defeat suffered last year by Toronto at the hands of both McGill and Queen's. The fact that Toronto is the centre of much brilliant debating among the men makes our position all the more humiliating. Of course, women are suffering from centuries of repression while the men enjoy the heritage of a long tradition of oratory. This may account for our having only one woman in our House of Commons, but it does not account for the lack of interest in Toronto specifically. There is a lack of interest, not of talent. For while we have any number of intellectually gifted women undergraduates, the mournful fact seems to be that the majority of our women are still uninterested in the subjects that make debating interesting. Try to talk to the average University girl of questions of national or international importance, and she will turn in a bored manner to discuss her new party dress!

Why? Because she has found that she can make a far greater hit with the gentleman friend by making cooing sounds at him than by displaying her knowledge of the situation in Europe.

And if men are possessed of greater oratorical accomplishments, they are in no way disposed to be generous with them. Last week one of the men's debating clubs discussed the question of admitting women to their debates. The motion was defeated. They were afraid the presence of women would turn their meeting into "pink teas"! Gentlemen prefer ingenues.

Women from other colleges come here, no more intelligent, no better informed than our own, but buoyed by the knowledge that it means something to their University whether they win or not. It is one of the events of the year. Here, out of a possible six thousand, perhaps one hundred undergraduates are even aware that an intercollegiate debate is taking place. When our women come to speak, they represent the interest felt by the University and the result is inevitable.

What we need is more complete realization of the value of debating for women, more work put into it, greater co-operation from the men. Then we may get somewhere.

Health Insurance

Considerable interest has been shown in the proposal for students' health insurance here. The fact that such insurance is in force at Queen's University, and at Western, seems to make it a question well worth considering in connection with the University of Toronto.

We have no intention of sponsoring or condemning the idea. It should be pointed out, however, that students at the University of Toronto have been made a better offer, financially, than at either Queen's or Western. At Queen's, a fee of four dollars must be paid, which entitles the students to the services of the University doctor, and hospital fees for periods of less than one week at a time. For illnesses of a longer period, payment must be made at the rate of five dollars per week, from the date of entering the hospital. At Western, the service is much the same as that offered here, except that the cost is higher.

Despatches we have received from other universities have refrained from stating whether or not the insurance is viewed with favour by the student body there. Probably ninety per cent of the under-

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

We'll be seeing you all at 7.30 tonight at the Hart House gym—at least we hope we will see a goodly number of you. Of course it is not necessary to mention what the big event is, but anyway we repeat it is the first of the Interfaculty Basketball Finals. St. Hilda's won their position in the play-offs on Tuesday night when they ousted the Junior outfit from Vic. The U.C. Seniors held a bye and so it is these two squads who will clash tonight.

U.C. has a smart team and we are looking to Kay Brown to do big things. But she will have her difficulties if Enid Palmer and Kay Grubbe, of the Blue and Grey sextette, put up the game they did against Vic. Edie Ardagh is St. Hilda's star forward and Mary Carre plays a real offensive game; but Jean Atkinson and Billy McGarry of U.C. are strong guards and will give them a tussle for every point.

Trinity showed some real spirit at the game on Tuesday. The Saints inaugurated a new cheer which went over well, but could still stand a lot more supporters to lend volume. U.C. certainly has it all over Trinity as far as numbers from whom to draw supporters are concerned—how about making a real showing U.C.? This game will be very close and cheers from the crowd will make a big difference in the outcome.

U.C. badminton is still coming right along. The first "Round Robin" was very well attended. Last week there was no practice, but one is scheduled for 3 p.m. on Friday at the York Club. (Incidentally, it is a real opportunity to be able to play there.) The "Round Robin" which is planned is definitely part of the practice for U.C.'s team. If you are at all interested in badminton you can not afford to miss it.

How about getting badminton under way in the other colleges? With the head start they are getting, U.C. is going to be well on the way to clinching the title. The time after Christmas before the tournament is played off really is not long enough for adequate practice.

U.C.—TRINITY VOLLEY MEN PLAY UNINTERESTING TILT

Nothing Depending on Result, U.C. Leads Scoring Throughout

Junior U.C. finished the scheduled volleyball season undefeated, when they outplayed Trinity 15-7, 15-9, in the upper gym yesterday afternoon. U.C. had already won the group, so neither team displayed much interest, resulting in a rather dull game.

The U.C. squad played well individually and worked combination plays very nicely, in the first game. Trinity lost the game through lack of teamwork and slowness in going after the ball. Neither side displayed much spiking ability.

A few good plays relieved the monotony in the second game, which neither team deserved to win. U.C. finally collected fifteen points because Trinity

MEDICAL ASSAULT IS INTERESTING

Preparation for Junior Interfaculty Assault is Exciting in Its Own Right

CROWDS ATTEND

Last night the men in Meds monopolized the boxing, wrestling and fencing rooms in Hart House, when the brawny aspirants for their B. W. and F. team punched, puffed and parried before crowds of excited spectators. This served as a first and fearsome test for those planning to enter the junior interfaculty assault next week. The senior biff and bang affair next term and for the superlative athletes who make the intercollegiate team.

The wrestling events attracted the largest number of entries and the fewest onlookers, but the grapplers gave stellar exhibitions despite the lack of support. Trimble turned in the finest exhibition of the day. He was given stiff opposition in a preliminary bout, but heaved his way to victory in the finals by winning from Crossland in straight falls. Mackenzie won the heavyweight affair via the decision route. In the 135 lbs. match E. L. Davey turned in a sparkling display, pinning McCaffrey's shoulders to the mat twice.

There were but three boxing bouts, yet they provided nine rounds of first-rate ringcraft sport. In the welter jab with a fast two-handed attack with tenacious event Green combined a long such telling effect against Procurrier, that Referee Brown stopped the fight, giving Green the decision by a technical knockout. The scrappiest fight was that for the 165 lbs. honours which Krakauer won from Woodhouse. This get-together was featured by sudden rushes and as sudden retreats, occasional wild slugging, the winner's stiff punches and the loser's clever counters and bloody mouth. Krakauer dropped his opponent for a no count knock-down in the first round, and again for a count of 8 in the third. Fulton earned a close decision over Sheffer in the 175 lbs. affair, while Allan foiled the hopes of four rivals by winning the fencing.

The results were:

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

One of the things which has come to our attention of late is the fact that many people are mistaking the intermediate team, operating in the commercial series, for the senior O.H.A. team. It should be understood that these are two separate and distinct teams. While the performance of the seconds has been in no way unfavourable it is somewhat embarrassing for members of the senior club to be accused of dropping games to the stick wielders of the commercial league who operate at Varsity Stadium. The difficulty seems to be that they are billed merely as "Varsity" and as such are mistaken for the Varsity intercollegiate and O.H.A. team.

The game which was scheduled for Friday evening with Oakville has been transferred to later in the season. To be exact the dates have been switched with Port Colborne and the students will be playing the Oakville team in January, of next year (after the Xmas Xams). This move was necessitated when the date was set for the Athletic At-Home. As the boys were not going to miss the party and refused to go forth to play hockey in boiled shirts, it was necessary to change the date of the game. There is still an opportunity to get tickets for the At-Home, so anyone desirous of joining the "T" holders at Hart House Friday night will be able to secure accommodation by dropping into the athletic office. It should be a good party, and is certainly worthy of support.

Saturday evening the water polo team enter their first two-game intercollegiate series with McGill. The Blue team were dethroned last season and are anxious to repossess the title. It is customary to hold a dance in the gym following this annual event, which has become very popular in recent years. Whether this procedure will be followed this season or not has yet to be determined.

Tonight the lacrosse artists will start the final round in the drive for an interfaculty title. Trinity and Vic meet in the first game of the semi-finals and will play their second game Monday. The injury to Burchell, the Trinity star forward, has somewhat shortened their chances. Burchell is still in the hospital as a result of an injury received in a practice game Tuesday. Vic, however, have a strong team, and should now be favourites to win.

Last night at the Arena the Blue hockey team sustained a severe loss when Maxie Fullerton, star player, sustained a broken leg. It will be remembered that Max suffered a similar accident last summer when he broke his leg playing lacrosse. It is a sad blow to the team and an even sadder blow to Maxie himself, as he was just beginning to hit his old time stride. He was taken to the hospital immediately following the injury and at a late hour last night was reported to be resting comfortably.

For An Anglo Saxon Club— What Say You, Beowulf?

The study of the Anglo-Saxon tongue is at present more or less thickly pursued by undergraduates in Modern Languages and English and History. Mostly they bother to pursue it only in respectful proximity to examination-time, when it eludes them cunningly.

Interest in this ancestral language is unhappily obscured by its antiquity and practical uselessness in commercial correspondence. Contributory defects, I am told, are its really prehistoric uncountness in speech and print. An additional defect, I am informed, is the lack of (shall I say?) the modern note in Anglo-Saxon literature. For Anglo-Saxon has a literature, of sorts; it has this advantage over Gothic, which is a language studied by intending Ph.D.'s in English. (After this is over they invariably forget their Gothic in favour of Twentieth-Century English, which also has a sort of literature.)

Anglo-Saxon, he it repeated, really has a literature. There is a long alliterative epic poem called Beowulf, which concerns in part somebody's adventures with a bear, and thus corresponds to the Iliad. Anglo-Saxon has also, not Thucydides, but the Venerable Bede, whose Ecclesiastical History flows like a babbling brook beside an Anglo-Saxon monastery wall; not Herodotus, but the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, which flows like acon in an empty void. Nor yet Pindar, but Caedmon, whose beginning as a sacred rhapsodist is more legendary than his sacred rhapsodies.

Sadly antiquarian in short is Toronto undergraduate interest in this ancestral lingo. In private I have long and earnestly discussed plans for its practical disinterment. My solution is an Anglo-Saxon Club.

A model to copy would be the University College French Club, except that ours had better be an inter-college affair at present. A meeting of that sublime institution is entirely conducted in French, even unto post-prandial (?) conversation: the sotto-voce intrusion of an English word there makes the perpetrator feel like a bootlegger. At the Anglo-Saxon Club, minutes and announcements would be read in Anglo-Saxon; a little skit would be presented, in Anglo-Saxon; songs would be sung in common, in Anglo-Saxon (I should suggest the heaven-inoculated waltzes of Caedmon aforesaid); refreshments, including mead, would then be served, in Anglo-Saxon; conversation in Anglo-Saxon would counter-irritate the rawness of the preceding; and afterwards the party would dance, in Anglo-Saxon, to the music of home-made horns and harps. Members would come dressed, of course, in the single unfitting homespun garment that Anglo-Saxons wore if they were serfs, or perhaps in the more primitively resplendent apparel that Anglo-Saxons wore (in conjunction with long hair) if they were in the Upper Ten. Good guides might be certain illustrations by C. W. Jefferys.

Of course the Anglo-Saxon Club would annually present in Hart House a long play in which the actors' personalities would cover their histrionic disabilities; knowing off-hand nothing of Anglo-Saxon dramatic literature I differently suggest that the club could concoct its own. That brings me to an admirable point that Aldous Huxley made in Those Barren Leaves, albeit about Etruscan; that is, that new and really contemporary literature be written in Anglo-Saxon, whose air of obscurity and age would tend weight to the solemn banalities (it would have the advantage here of Greek or Latin, and would be second only to Gothic.) Consider "On Our Way" or "Looking Forward" in Anglo-Saxon, or "Cavalcade" in Anglo-Saxon, or "Manhattan Transfer" in Anglo-Saxon. And Anglo-Saxon does lend itself to the formation of new words, by a sort of agglutination of basic ideas after the German fashion, so I am informed. A great literature in Anglo-Saxon might grow on the ruins of Beowulf.

I think this idea is a good one. It is more honest than the Classical Society, which holds its meetings in English and thus gets at its subject only from without. Incidentally, a suitable meeting place might be the front door of University College (which is Norman, but lends some atmosphere of English antiquity.) Even better might be the little building on Hart House Campus, with appropriate alterations.

Cyprian.
P.S.—The above is not written in Anglo-Saxon, since I am not familiar with it.

We women do talk too much, but even then we don't tell half what we know.—Lady Astor.

VARSITY SENIOR BEES OVERWHELM SQUAD OF BELL TELEPHONE

Victory is Costly, However, As Max Fullerton Breaks Leg

VARSITY DESERVES WIN

Lougheed, Oevine, MacIlquham and Charles Play Well; Allen for Losers

The fast-travelling Varsity Senior "B" team stepped into the limelight at the Arena last night when they turned back Bell Telephone by a 4-2 score. The win, however, was a costly one, as Max Fullerton, stellar defenceman, sustained a broken leg. This mishap jeopardizes the team's chances considerably, as Maxie was an extremely effective player.

The game commenced at a fast clip and Varsity notched their initial goal in less than 3 minutes of play, when MacIlquham lifted Fullerton's beautiful pass into the upper corner of the twine. Shortly after this Ripley raced in on Miller but with the net minder at his mercy, hit the end of the rink.

The "Hello" boys then put on a gangling attack with Percy Allen the big threat. Lougheed, however, could not see things that way and made several remarkable saves. The period ended with Varsity still holding on to their slim margin.

Bell Telephone started the middle canto with a gangling attack but were trapped down the ice, the play swinging to the other end. In a scramble near the net MacIlquham drilled his second contribution to the cause between the uprisings. Miller looked very bad on the shot. Fullerton was hurt at this time, Driscoll replacing him.

The Telephones began applying the pressure at this time and McArthur lifted one into the Varsity citadel through a maze of players. Spurred on by this success they turned on the heat in grand style, Allen making several dangerous rushes which culminated in Peter slipping in the tying counter on a pretty pass from Allen.

Things looked very bleak for Varsity at this juncture but Doble was penalized and the Blue team lost no time in taking advantage of this break. Devine scoring on an assist from MacIlquham. A moment later Driscoll got the gate for tripping Allen on a play which looked very much like producing a goal.

The game was becoming fast and furious at this stage and the fans were getting their money's worth. Lougheed made a brilliant play when he skated out at least twenty feet to clear.

The final period opened with fast playing, but neither team could get organized. McConvey brought relief to the anxious Varsity fans when he rifled one past Miller from 30 feet out. The Telephone goalie didn't look too good on that one either.

Bell Telephone really turned it on after this counter, and the Varsity defence, which had performed brilliantly throughout the contest, rose to the heights. Lougheed also rose to the occasion and turned aside a constant stream of rubber.

The Bells played four and five men up during the closing minutes of the stanza and only superlative work by the Blue defence saved the day. It was a whirlwind finish to a good game and the crowd appreciated it.

The Varsity team thoroughly deserved their win on the night's play, and their opponents were by no means push-overs.

The back checking of the forward lines and the rugged display put on by the defence duo was pleasing to the eye and if the boys keep on at their present gait they won't be far from the upper tier in the standing when the curtain is rung down.

Lougheed played a sensational game, and the victory was due largely to his efforts. Devine and MacIlquham worked smoothly up front and Charles performed well for the rearguard. Percy Allen was a standout for the losers.

Varsity: Goal, Lougheed; defence, Fullerton, Charles; forwards, Devine, MacIlquham, Kieft; subs, Poupore, Ripley, McConvey, Driscoll, Morgan, Valiquette.

OPINIONS VARY ON CENSORSHIP OF CINEMA

Some Consider it Overdone to Point of Making "Whitewash"

PUBLIC SHOWS DESIRES

Present 'Feebleness' of Movies Due to Being Still in "Adolescent Stage"

"The movies might have matured as an art. Never having passed the adolescent stage, they are still in need of correctives. Censorship is really necessary," was the opinion of one Arts student when questioned by The Varsity on the subject of cinema censorship.

"Movies are feeble," stated Art Young, V Meds, "but censorship should build up a higher morale, and therefore it is to be commended."

Miss Edna Gray, II English and History, said, "Most hackneyed plots have been ratched so often that apparently they need vice thrown in to make them intelligible. At present we are being gently mocked by such films as 'Girl of the Limberlost', 'Mrs. Wiggs'. The movies need cleaning up, but not whitewashing."

PICTURES IMPORTANT IN DECORATING

note to the personality of the occupant of the room.

Pictures fill a big place in the decorativeness of a room. Many people are capable of choosing a fine picture, but they do not pay sufficient attention to its suitability. This is the first thing to consider and it includes the question of size, framing and subject matter. If you are furnishing a girl's room you don't put in a Rembrandt; if you are furnishing a man's room you don't put in a Gainsborough. Black and white are suitable for a man's room because it gives it a definite character.

A very beautiful effect is derived if the same movement and rhythm of the picture is repeated in the frame. Mats are used in framing in such a way to offset the illusion of the eye and they may be made in any material to match the room.

In her concluding words, Miss Home remarked that many pictures have no art value, but they pep a room up and make it inviting. The lecture was illustrated with slides and some interesting examples of modern art.

something of the enduring solidity of the old masters into his work. The painters of this period, who bridged the gap between 19th century and modern art, attempted to give the sense of a whole thing, to represent and symbolize a complete state of existence with an intensity of vision which seized the essence of what the subject might mean.

one expects of the concert artist. More serious still is the apparent lack of voice; a tenseness that tends towards flattening and a thinness and strain in the upper register. It may be that Miss Moore was suffering from a cold; a decided voice fog was apparent in the last group, which though sung in English was quite the poorest singing of the evening. The demands on a concert singer are very great and never was this fact more apparent. Still the audience received Miss Moore with keen pleasure and her singing was certainly enjoyed.

The accompanist could have played a more beautiful and sympathetic accompaniment with less gusto. His solo numbers partook of the same ingratiating assurance.

OPINIONS VARY ON CENSORSHIP

Commerce and Finance. "People show the type of film they want by the shows they patronize."

"The picture that really needs censorship does not appeal to the intelligent public in general," stated Miss Eileen O'Donnell, II Arts. "The students with whom I come in contact seem to take the new censorship seriously."

"Movie censorship is a good thing," said Percy Losier, VI Meds. "It is significant of the spirit of reform which is badly needed in so many fields today."

Miss Freda La Plante, I Moderns, said, "There is a gradual improvement evident as a result of censorship, so that the movies are becoming more intelligent."

"The general morale is improved by the use of censorship," said Jim Brennan, I Meds.

Scandals Come and Scandals Go We'll Return To Our Soors

"Miss Soors, a student at Frank'some Hall, yesterday received threatening letters . . . etc. etc." (Daily Star).

"Go get the story," said The News.

So we champed up to Teacup Village and Frank'some Hall. Having arrived we muscled our way into the common-room and surprised a number of girls in various postures, singing the uncensored version of "I'd Rather Die Than Say No."

Our heroine was in the midst of them. For the benefit of the ladies we will describe her dress. She was encased in a form-fitting gown of some light-blue, shiny material, of revealing transparency, which, viewed from any angle, presented a stream-lined silhouette and which featured, we believe, the latest uplift style.

After repeated questioning, we gathered that Frank'some Hall was a place where gay young sub-debs, and insub, were exposed to a little English and French and to face the facts of life. Miss Soors refused to give any details of the case, but the others girls welcomed The Varsity's Scandal Scribe, since this was their first appearance in the column since some time last year, and told what they knew.

It seems that one night about 11.30 they had stepped out on the balcony, arrayed in the snuggest of apparel. (at this point they became rather vague) to acknowledge the songs and yells of a group of men from a certain residence (a common occurrence, they asserted), when someone threw a letter at their feet.

At first they thought it was a proposal to elope, or to at least come down, but the police thought differently—so there was another romance gone on the rocks and sweet young love was again thwarted.

Then we had to answer a lot of questions about the Varsity Date Bureau, in which they were all interested, and promised to send them a few hundred application-forms—with your help, Mr. Editor.

A distant gong summoned the girls to dinner and we took our departure—but not before we heard them sing their school song: "We Are From Frank'some, Frank Girls Are We."

Shocked beyond words, we staggered away—but we will, we will be back.

TRAFFIC SIGNALS FIND FAVOUR

Henry Silverstein, II Medicine, thought that it indicated short sightedness on the part of the City Council not to have followed a scheme that would have diverted traffic from the road rather than increase it. "A park area should not have a speedway running through it," he declared, "but the lights are a good idea and would be necessary even if some of the traffic were diverted. The best thing would be a tunnel." The Varsity hesitantly mentioned the expense, "Hang the expense," he retorted, "think of the precious lives of the co-eds being in danger."

M. Hoover, I Medicine, said that the idea was all right, although this difficulty would not have arisen if an adequate scheme of Town Planning had been followed.

H. A. Taylor, IV Victoria, when the intricacies of the operating mechanism had been explained to him, declared that it was a good idea, as did H. J. Clarkson, II Honour Physics, also of Victoria. However, they thought that a light should also be installed opposite Hart House for the benefit of those who cut across the park, for the traffic was just as bad on the other side of the crescent and it often took ten minutes to cross.

Two snow covered Geologists accosted by your correspondent outside of Hart House glared stonily at the reporter. "I refuse to be quoted in that rag," said one icily. When asked the reason they frostily muttered something about boulders of clay and a Geologist named Bennett Smith and, turning a cold shoulder to The Varsity, they slid on their way.

ditions and time. When successful this was obviously much more convincing than the previous effect of landscape architecture. Cezanne had stability as well as evanescence in his work, achieving this by geometrical form.

Professor Alford closed his address with a talk illustrated by slides. He encouraged questions, which he answered very fully.

PRESIDENT TERMS PLAY PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY

'Crime at Blossoms' Not Merely 'An Ordinary Low Crime
Play'

"It's perfectly obvious that the writer of the letter in yesterday's Varsity has no conception whatsoever of the theme of The Crime at Blossoms nor can he be acquainted with the work of Mordant Shairp," emphatically stated Mr. Norman Nichol, president of the Victoria College Dramatic Society, when interviewed by The Varsity regarding the letter published yesterday against the society's forthcoming production.

"Far from being 'an ordinary, low, crime play', The Crime at Blossoms is a serious psychological study and a satire upon morbid public curiosity in crime. The play concerns itself not with the actual crime itself, which occurs before the young people return from their vacation to find that a murder has been committed in their home, 'Blossoms', and being in financial difficulties, resolve to capitalize upon the opportunity by pandering to the morbid curiosity of holiday trippers. Their reactions to the situation which thus develops provide a most interesting study and the play ends in a surprising and highly dramatic climax. Mr. Shairp is the author of The Green Bay Tree, which had a long run last winter in London and New York.

"Judging from the rehearsals, this year's production shows every indication of being the most finished that the society has produced for several years. It is being directed by Mr. Frank Hemmingsway, who was director of Toronto's Centennial Pageant.

"College dramatic societies have enough difficulties to overcome in the production of worthwhile drama without being exposed to the silly facetiousness or deliberate malice of such people as the writer of that letter," said Mr. Nichol.

THE FREEDOM OF THE INDIVIDUAL IS FOUNDATION OF CIVILIZATION

Mass System Leads Us Astray
W. H. Moore Tells the Commerce Club

OUR CIVILIZATION TOPPLING

"We have built civilization on the freedom of the individual . . . we will lose our civilization if that freedom is taken away . . . the house will fall when the foundation is gone. It is toppling now." This was the closing note in the speech of Mr. W. H. Moore, M.P., who addressed the annual banquet of the Commerce Club at Hart House last evening.

In speaking on "Competitive Economy" which, Mr. Moore said, could, in his speech, be termed "Economic Liberalism", he stressed the importance of the individual as opposed to mass influence. "It is the mass system that leads us astray," claimed Mr. Moore. After the last election, in which Mr. Moore was elected to parliament, his opponent claimed that he had been elected by better hands—"and he was probably right," he said.

Domestic economy and competitive economy are the two divisions into which the economic life of a country falls. When people are excluded from competitive business there will be an increase in domestic economy. The Canadian west is an example of this, where the people are now making their own sugar and weaving their own textiles. The price level must be sustained or "Your freedom is threatened by destruction of price level. There must be presence of mind on the part of people and students to prevent disaster in this country."

Economic nationalism cannot be the ultimate solution. "I believe in the state, but I do not believe in overloading it. In that case you have a breakdown—democracy cannot take on more work."

Mr. Moore was introduced by Professor Gilbert Jackson. He spoke of the days when Mr. Moore and he were associated. Mr. Moore at that time being a lecturer in Economics. "Yellow Metal" was a book which had been published this week by Mr. Moore and would be of great interest to Commerce and Finance students.

President Cody spoke of the progress of the University and particularly of the Royal Ontario Museum and the David Dunlop Observatory.

"The Museum is attracting throngs," he said, "experts have come there from all over the earth. It is one of the ten finest museums in the world."

Dr. Cody also referred to the appointment of Professor Ashley as advisor to the students in the Commerce and Finance course.

CONSTRUCT NEW ROOF FOR THE OBSERVATORY

With George L. Jennings, a graduate of 217, in charge of construction, the Meteorological Observatory tower is being fitted with a new roof of concrete. What was formerly an eighty foot foundation core is being removed, the reason being that more storage space is required. Due to the length of the base, work is taking place on all floors.

The construction involves general alteration of the plumbing and heating systems as well as the building of a new inner roof.

Since the new roof is being built over the well now caused by the removal of the core, the outer appearance of the tower will not be changed, and, if the glass windows are overlooked, will look like the turret of an old castle.

When the work is finished there will be storerooms on all floors occupying the space that was formerly taken up by the foundation base. Around January 19th the tower will be completed.

ATHLETIC AT-HOME

Parking will be allowed around the front campus, in front of U.C. and the Observatory. "H" holders may park north of the tower and on Hoskin Avenue.

THREE CAGE TEAMS TO BE IN ACTION

Saturday Evening Brings Two Broadview Squads and Yolles Here

TEST FOR SENIORS

On Saturday night, basketball fans around the campus will get their fill of the cage pastime when the three Blue teams entertain very worthy opponents. At seven, the junior squad play their initial game of the season. At eight McCutcheon's Seconds meet the Broadview Y intermediate squad and just one hour later Lew Hayman's Big Six quintette will play hosts to the Yolles-Lizzie aggregation.

The senior game, which is the last on the card of three, is sure to be one of the best games of the year. The Yolles crew, which reports say are going to revert to their old name of Lizzies, are the most colourful crew in the Big Six. Their fast and aggressive style of play has pleased many thousands of Toronto cage fans in the past and promises to do so again this year.

To match the Lizzies' speedsters Lew Hayman is going to show Varsity supporters what he believes is the best Blue team of recent years. Lew thinks that his squad will improve with every game and is hoping for the team's third successive win on Saturday night. When the members of the squad get accustomed to each other's little mannerisms Lew says that his team will be very, very good. The return of Meagher will strengthen the centre position. Munroe and Meagher will look after the centre duties. The guard positions will be very well held down by Connelly, Gold, Bodrug, Gordon and Himel. The Lizzies will have their hands full in trying to get by these lads. Up front Marks, Crowley, Levy and Newman will look after the point-guarding.

In the intermediate game the Blues will be meeting last year's Dominion junior champions in Broadview Y intermediates. The Y crew is reputed to be the pick of the group. Last week they scored eighty-six points against the Danforth S.C.M. team in a regular Y league game. Mac McCutcheon feels sure that his squad will keep the Y sharpshooters in check and at the same time do a little point-getting of their own.

Dunlop Observatory Will Be Completed For Opening in May

The construction of the David Dunlop Observatory at Richmond Hill is rapidly nearing conclusion and the formal opening will definitely take place next May, Dr. Cody announced at the Commerce Club banquet last night.

"Half a million dollars has been spent on the observatory and the mirror will arrive from England this month," the President continued. Today he is making a trip of inspection to the new building. The administration building is now completely finished and all that remains is the arrival of the telescope from Great Britain.

A promising sign in the University life is the fact that library circulation has been increased by twenty-three per cent to date over the same period last year, was another interesting statement made by Dr. Cody.

STUDY INTERFERES WITH EDUCATION

Honour Courses Occupy too Much Time; Pass Students
Miss Contacts

GOVERNMENT UPHELO

The conventional idea that University studies constitute education was definitely discarded yesterday when the Government of University College Parliament was solidly upheld on the question: "Resolved that University studies interfere with one's education."

Leading off for the government, the Prime Minister, Wilfred Smith, abstained from defining education on the grounds that too many great men had defined it before him, and that he had no desire to be included in their number. The honour courses, he contended, occupied far too much time to allow one to attend even the regular courses clubs, let alone the other organizations on the campus. The pass course allows one plenty of time, but the large classes prevent the pass student from enjoying that most important phase of college life, the making of interesting personal contacts.

The opposition leader, Israel Kaplan, countered by saying that "far from University studies interfering with education, the shoe is on the other foot; education interferes with University studies." In elaborating this contention, he maintained that college is simply a training ground to prepare one to earn a living.

At the end, the fall session of the U.C. Parliament was formally closed by His Excellency, the Governor-General, Sydney, Lord Hermon of Health, though only after the Speaker had considerably soiled his knees when he failed to find the Governor-General's speech.

McGILL TO DEFEND WATER POLO TITLE

Varsity Will Endeavour to Win Back Crown on Saturday Night

IN HART HOUSE POOL

Tomorrow night, the Red water polo team from McGill will invade the Varsity swimming pool, in the opening game of a home and home series, goals to count, for the intercollegiate water polo title. McGill took the honours away from the Blue team last season and are back in an attempt to carry home a lead that will help them on their way to their second consecutive title.

Varsity, however, will put forward an exceptionally strong team, featuring the flashy forward line of the two McCatty brothers and Davey, who have been playing a spectacular game up to date. Devitt, Twible and Bancroft complete the Varsity regular line-up, with Culiner and Hardy as alternates. Of last year's team Wince McCatty, Earl Bancroft and Eric Davey are the only ones who are back in the line-up.

McGill, last year's winners, have a strong team and are well up in the senior city race in Montreal.

REQUIREMENTS DIFFER FOR VARIOUS PLANTS

"We may divide home plants into three different classes, each of which requires quite different treatment," said Mr. Henry J. Moore, in his lecture on "The Care of House Plants," yesterday afternoon. "The first group consists of the geranium, the palm, etc., plants which are relatively easy to grow. The second group are those with fragile and tender roots such as the fern and the begonia. Plants of the cactus variety form the third group." Mr. Moore described the conditions suitable for the proper growth of these three groups of plants, i.e., the temperature, moisture, light, water, air and soil required.

Mr. Moore named also some of the common insect pests which attack many house plants and cause them to sicken and die, and he suggested remedies for successfully removing them.

The lecture was completed with the showing of slides of the various plants and Mr. Moore described the specific care which should be given to each one.

McMaster and Varsity Divide
Honours in Intercollegiate Series

HOME TEAMS SUCCESSFUL

(Special to "The Varsity")
Hamilton, Dec. 6.—Upholding the affirmative of the resolution "That women have assumed the responsibility of their enfranchisement", the McMaster home team today won the women's intercollegiate debate with Miss Audrey Saunders and Miss Thelma Hermanson of the University of Toronto.

"Only seventeen years ago women were classed with lunatics and criminals," was the contention made yesterday by Miss Pat Cleland, in her defence of the issue. "Resolved that Canadian women have assumed the responsibility of their enfranchisement," against the opposition of the visiting McMaster debating team. She then continued to give substantial evidence of the evolution of women in the field of politics, and the great power of their vote which has resulted in much social legislation. This situation was compared with that in Quebec, where women have not the vote, and social legislation is decidedly lacking. She also pointed out that the great fear of men in politics is that "women will run the whole show and start grabbing offices."

In disputing women's success in attempts to reconstruct our social system, Miss Joy McLean of the opposition, heatedly asserted, "Suppression of white slave traffic depends upon strong public opinion," but while women are too "squeamish" to discuss this question in the open, this necessary element of public opinion cannot be aroused. In their eternal hunt for bargains, women seem to be the worst offenders in encouraging sweat shop conditions.

"Husbands and families" provided material for controversy, when Miss Helen Carscallen of Toronto, maintained that women were unable to hold political offices because of these "embarrassments."

The fact that "women mayors are not even a novelty in Canada," helped Miss Jean Spidell of McMaster to show the lack of active feminine leaders in Canada as compared to their abundance in the United States.

FUTILITY OF LIFE OENIO AT DEBATE

Motion Overwhelmingly Defeated
Despite Subtle Habbeshavian Wit

The fourth session of the Victoria Sandwich Parliament came through with flying verbiage and life was voted to be otherwise than futile by an overwhelming majority of sixty-four to one. R. H. Habbeshavian, with the characteristic Habbeshavian wit, proved conclusively that life was futile, although seriously handicapped by the obstinate texture of a large je suis sandwich. J. B. McDiarmid, leader of the opposition, cleverly pointed out that if any member of the government thought life was futile, there was only one course open to him, and that Toronto's facilities for this course included some very high bridges.

The following speakers, Mr. Alexander and Mr. Curry for the government, and Mr. Bailey and Mr. Peart for the opposition, carried the argument into fields of philosophy, English and history that were termed by Mr. Ross Munro to be "baldersdash". Mr. Peart pointed out that the futile system had disappeared with all other medieval institutions.

Follow the Leader

Among the saddest words ever heard by newspapermen are the words "You can't print that." In this day of politically-controlled newspapers, and the dependence financially upon advertising instead of circulation for revenue, the words are only too familiar.

An example was called to attention last week, when a member of the provincial parliament, in speaking to a University political club, made some rather unusual and startling charges against the former Conservative government in Queen's Park. He alleged, among other things, that some sixty million dollars are missing from the accounts of the Highways department, because no records were kept. There was no implication of scandal in the charge, merely a statement that the department did not keep adequate books, and that this sixty million could not be traced.

When this statement was made, on a Thursday night, none of the downtown papers would publish it, although they had full accounts of the meeting. The Conservative press would not touch the matter, ostensibly because it discredited the former Conservative government, and the Liberal papers omitted it, probably because they had not been authorized to do otherwise by government authorities.

Last Monday, four days after the statement was made, The Varsity appeared carrying details of the speech. With a precedent set, although only by the insignificant student newspaper, the downtown press took the trail full-voiced. The Star, for instance, copied The Varsity's story almost to the word, playing up the whole matter with a double-column headline because it reflected on the accounting practices of the Conservative government. The Telegram, on the other hand, purposely misinterpreted the whole matter in order to draw an official denial from the Ontario Highways Department.

There is something increasingly familiar about all this. The publication of facts for their own sakes is something virtually unknown to the daily press of today. In the background is always found the influence of politics, or of advertising contracts, or it may be of racial or religious bias.

Some day, it is to be hoped, there will appear somewhere a paper which will print what it believes to be in the interests of the public. This is no doubt a vain hope, but it provides an ideal which we intend to keep before us in publishing this paper. The Varsity holds an extraordinarily independent position, in that it is not controlled by its advertising, has no political or religious bias, and is bound only by limits of decency and ordinary discretion in its editorial policy. This independence can serve some useful purposes.

A New Service

One unique service which can be rendered to the student body as a result of this freedom is the publication of a series of articles giving the chemical analysis, of many of the foods and patent medicines which are in common use by students, and which are actually harmful to health. There is one book, entitled "100,000,000 Guinea Pigs" by Kallet and Schlink, which deals with this question of harmful drugs, and a monthly confidential report is published by a firm of chemical analysts. Apart from these two sources, we know of no other means of learning just what is in the toothpastes, gargles, medicines and soaps in common circulation.

Few people know, for instance, that the well known Pebeco toothpaste contains a deadly poison, a part of one tube having been used on several known occasions as a means of committing suicide. Bromo Seltzer, recommended for headaches, indigestion, the 'morning after' and almost everything else, contains a poison which if taken consistently will cause the loss of life. According to the American Medical Association it has been known to cause several deaths, and has resulted in at least one case of sexual impotence. Most saline laxatives, such as Kruschen Salts and Sal Hepatica, are composed almost entirely of ordinary epsom salts, and if used consistently will surely cause chronic constipation and ruin one's digestive faculties for life.

The list could be continued indefinitely. There is an element of humour in the fact that while cosmetics come under the Pure Food Laws, and are therefore kept free from any poisons, things which we eat and drink as medicines and toilet aids may be unnecessarily dangerous. Because they are heavily advertised in practically every newspaper and magazine, they are never exposed in their true light. Such is the power of advertising.

The only book on this subject is signed up for seven weeks in advance at the University library, which seems to indicate that the subject is of interest to many students. In view of this fact, and since this information can not be readily obtained elsewhere, it is our intention to commence a series of articles on this subject in The Varsity early in the new year. The assistance of University laboratories, and other sources of information will be sought, in order to ensure perfect authenticity. Since The Varsity is frequently read by many parents and others, as well as over seven thousand students at the University, such a series of articles should be of considerable value.

The Tony Wons of Parliament Hill

The guest speaker at the annual Commerce Club banquet held in Hart House last night was Mr. William E. Moore, M.P., a report of whose address appears elsewhere in today's paper. Mr. Moore is a former member of the faculty at this University, and well known for his keen, and somewhat pessimistic, insight into the Canadian economic structure.

Many of those who heard him last night will not agree with either his economics or his politics, but there was one point upon which Mr. Moore received universal acclaim. He prepared a speech on Competitive Economy, a subject dear to the hearts of all Commerce men. It was a good speech, academic, instructive, and detailed. The very inspired action by Mr. Moore was in having the speech printed and distributed to his hearers, and then talking about something else.

The speaker proceeded to give a much more informal talk, delighting his hearers with an abundance of his usual so-called philosophical anarchy, touching only the high spots of his prepared address. We will not necessarily recommend his politics, but we heartily commend the procedure of the rather cynical-humoured, slow-speaking, very human Tony Wons of Parliament Hill.

A Delayed Action

There are many advantages to vacations, but one of the greatest is that it helps the college student to obtain a better sense of proportions.

The University campus often tends to be rather a small universe of its own, completely isolated from the business world. College students often lose sight of their place in the whole scheme of things.

Big shots on the campus discover during their vacation periods that many times they have been bluffing themselves and a few others. A vacation affords a healthy tonic for their bloated egotism.

Therefore, we suggest that the big shots take advantage of all possible vacations. Campus inactivities progress with the same regularity during their absence. To them, this may be a startling fact, but it is nevertheless true.

Or else the movies have been fooling us.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

U.C. picked up in the second half of last night's basketball classic to the win with St. Hilda's when the whistle blew on a 15-15 tally. It was a hard fight from the first throw-in (incidentally the throw-in was used in the first period and the toss-up in the second). At times the game was quite rough, especially in the last quarter. It was Kay Brown's last minute shot which put her team on an equal footing with the Saints. Now both teams enter Tuesday night's bout with a clean sheet, and this is going to be one of the most thrilling women's basketball finals that has ever been staged.

Close checking throughout made it a tough job for both forward lines. Kay Grubbe starred on the Blue and Grey defence and Lorna Reid held up that end for the U.C. squad. To Kay Brown are due the individual honours; she turned in her usual stellar performance and was responsible for smashing the lead which the Saints held until the last minute. Mary Carre led the scoring with nine points, although

By Ken Burn

So much has been written about pseudo amateur sport that it is with some trepidation that we raise our voice to the general outcry that calls for a general cleaning out among the ranks of the simon pures. Perhaps as tonight is the night set aside to pay homage to the first "T" holders, we feel compelled to question the status of the teams with whom Varsity are competing.

The instances of thinly disguised professionalism in amateur ranks are too numerous to mention here. Everyone knows of them, yet no action is taken. The two outstanding sporting loops in Canada, namely the Interprovincial Rugby Union and the O.H.A., are in reality, if not in name, semi-pro organizations. Happily the college unions in Canada have been presented with a clean bill of health and we know that the gentlemen whom we are honouring tonight have attained their "T's" by virtue of playing the game for itself rather than for the sake of a pencil sharpening job at thirty-five per. All of which leads up to what has this to do with intercollegiate sport?

In the first place, if an unbiased investigation was instituted and these teams properly labelled as professional, the Varsity squads which compete against them would also be technically professional. In the second place we do not think it just that the Blue outfits are called upon to face hand picked squads whose main interest is the arena rather than passing final examinations.

As far as hockey is concerned the plausible explanation lies in an intercollegiate loop which would provide the teams with sufficient games to make it worth their while to turn out and practise. Some talk was circulated last fall of an international college league, but it faded as the time for action approached. The big outcry at the time was that the games would not attract enough people to make it profitable. In order to refute this statement we need only point out that Western attracted 8000 people at Chicago the other night. While intercollegiate football is of a much lower calibre than Big Four the difference in attendance is negligible. You can't get away from the fact that John J. Public goes for the Rah Rah ballyhoo. We feel that if the publicity were handled correctly, there would be no fear of such a league paying for itself.

Tomorrow night the McGill water-polo team open up the winter series of intercollegiate sport when they will attempt to defend the splash and carry title against Varsity. To those of you who have not bothered to view a water-polo match, we recommend you take a look at tomorrow night's struggle. The game is fast and requires plenty of skill and condition.

For the first time this year the three basketball squads will entertain their opponents at Hart House tomorrow. The senior team will face their big test when they meet the strong Yvelles outfit. On paper the team look like real contenders for the college title. Their exhibition tomorrow night will demonstrate just how much has been lost, or gained, in the transferring from paper to hardwood.

Edie Ardagh really looked best on the Saints' offensive line.

And may we also remind you of the Life Saving class at 12 o'clock this morning. Up to this point the attendance has not been very satisfactory. Billy Cochrane has very kindly volunteered her instruction and you are missing a real opportunity if you do not turn out. Also how about getting started at the swimming for the inter-faculty meet—it is not any too soon to begin.

VICTORIA SECURE LEAD IN LACROSSE PLAYOFF

Trinity Will Face Five Goal Deficit in the Second Game

By means of a brilliant last period attack, Victoria piled up a five goal lead over Trinity in the first game of the interfaculty lacrosse semi-finals played in Hart House gym yesterday afternoon. The final score was 10-5, and as total goals count in the two game series, Trinity will have to show remarkable improvement in the second game if they hope to avoid elimination.

For the first three-quarters of the game, play was very close, and the eventual winner appeared to be very much in doubt. Victoria led by a single goal at the end of each of the first three periods, but their big advantage in reserve strength began to tell in the last quarter in which Trinity were outscored by 5 to 1. Trinity had four subs dressed but none of them were used, while Victoria changed their players frequently.

Clipperton with four goals and Young with three, were the big guns of the Victoria attack.

Bell and Allison were outstanding for Trinity although the whole team played well until they tired in the final period. Burrell did not play as well as usual as he left a sick bed to play. At that he managed to get one goal, while Allison and Bell with two each were the other Trinity scorers.

Trinity: Goal, Martin; defence, Bell; centre, Grant; home, Burrell; rover, Allison; alternates, Cox, Ford, McCreavy, Millyard.

Victoria: Goal, Dickie; defence, Dyke; centre, Burgess; home, Thompson; rover, McClelland; alternates, Bentley, Young, Clipperton, Wilkinson, Robb.

ST. HILOA'S AND U.C. PLAY TO A DEADLOCK

U.C. Player Scores the Tying Basket as Whistle Blows in Final Game

The first game of the interfaculty basketball finals played last night in Hart House gym between St. Hilda's and U.C. Seniors resulted in a deadlock, the score being 15-15. The game was extremely rough and checking was close at all times.

Quita Mennell opened the scoring for U.C. in the first minute of the game with a free shot. The Saints retaliated with Mary Louise Carre scoring a goal. Neither team was able to get very close to the basket and the first quarter ended with the score 4-2 in favour of the Blue and Grey.

The Saints got away in the second quarter and brought their score up to 10. Quita Mennell scoring for U.C. in three free shots, gave her team a total of 5.

After half time U.C. came back into the fray with new vigour but Kay Grubbe, on the Blue and Grey defence kept the score down so that the Saints led 13-10 at the end of the third quarter.

The last quarter was a fight to the finish. U.C. scored in the first few minutes of play and drew even after a succession of free shots, the fourth of which connected for a point. Edie Ardagh scored again for the Saints and as the final whistle blew Kay Brown brought the exciting game to a finish by shooting to tie the score.

U.C. Seniors: K. Brown (8), Q. Mennell (7), I. St. Alban, L. Reid, E. Kennedy, F. Harkness, P. Pethick, H. McGarry, J. Atkinson.

St. Hilda's: E. Palmer, K. Grubbe, E. Adagh (6), M. L. Carre (9), E. Wilson, M. McDonald, M. Dignam, J. Kirk, I. Wallbridge.

Referees: Phil Griffith, and Ethel Philips.

CHAMPUS CAT

A lady in the Eglinton district recently got stalled on an emergency call of another sort. She pulled an old trick on herself, taking medicine in the dark and then discovering it to be the wrong prescription. The fatal dose, actually, was only a mild antiseptic and she tried not to worry. To make sure, however, she gave the corner druggist a call and told him what she'd done. With a "hold the line" he went away to "look it up,"—while the lady weakly held the receiver for 120 seconds that seemed like as many minutes, with every successive one of which she expected to go into a violent convulsion. When finally the clerk did return it was with glad tidings.

C-C

It later occurred to the lady that the druggist hadn't even enquired her name or address. Now she wishes she had remained silent when he returned to the phone after the two minute wait. Then he would have been worried.

C-C

Taxi companies in the west end have offering to buy their telephone num-bids have been accepted: the folks get a kick out of the number themselves.

Hart House Theatre

It is indeed a smooth production of Othello which G. Wilson Knight is presenting at Hart House Theatre this week-end. Marked by striking dramatic effects and expertly knit scenic tableaux, the whole presentation is a credit to its director and star, Wilson Knight.

Requiring as it does terrific emotional resources, the heavier scenes of the play received handling of an amazingly consistent quality. Gradually gathering sympathetic tempo as it progressed, the intensity of the plot brought out some of the finest acting yet seen under Mr. Knight's banner.
Lyndon Smith's ease of delivery in portraying the arch villain Iago, commanded the utmost in admiration; Barry
Fitzgerald was both a comely and convincing Cassio; and Mr. Knight reached great heights of sincerity, especially in the death scene which was the gripping piece of staging Shakespeare wrote.

The modern treatment in sets and staging in no wise detracted from the coherence of the whole.

The acting of Gordon Robertson in the comedy role of Roderigo showed intelligent insight into the character, and the part shone for that reason.
Vivian Medland was a beguiling Bianca and her grace with the dance struck a new note in stage colour. Margaret Lucas was more than a mere confidante in the role of Amelia; her hysterical scene in the last act was of a professional character. Desdemona, played by Patricia Murphy, seemed to lack the character traditionally invested in the part, although her stage will take place at Farband Institute, 24 Cecil St. Subject: "The Histad-ruth—General Federation of Labour in Palestine." All interested are welcome.

8 p.m.—Meeting of Student Branch of erman of the Medical School, will speak on "National Minorities in the Soviet Union". All invited.

Eaton Auditorium

In the third concert of their series, the Auditorium Management introduced an artist new to Toronto audiences, Nino Martini. This youthful artist seems destined to create some stir in the field of music. It is a comparatively short time since he was a sensation as a radio star and meantime he has achieved the Metropolitan Opera. Mar-tini's success is really not extraordinary considering the great natural talent and the fine voice with which nature has endowed him. Besides these fundamental sine qua non, he has a magnetic personality and an engaging manner entirely without affectation.

It was a double conquest last night, for both artist and audience responded magnificently. What could be more delightful than an artist who loves to sing and can sing!

Martini's voice is somewhat lighter than the usual operatic tenor. You will find no blustering or sentimental sobbing, but rather a fine lyric quality of voice with flexibility and ease of production to spare.

The programme was on the light side but thoroughly pleasing. All the songs were done with genuine feeling and yet with due restraint. The accompaniment lent able support and played two groups of piano soli with taste and technical finish, especially his own compositions. F. B. S.

own. Coach McCutcheon has carefully welded together another good squad and is expecting them to break into the win column on Saturday night.
Magwood and Vanderleek of last year's squad are in fine form and Sullivan, a St. Mike's addition, is contributing some good work. Fitton, last year with McMaster, is slowly rounding into form and the arrival of Harry Newman should give the Seconds a strong defence.

The junior game will mark the debut of Mac's junior squad. The Thirds will have a stiff assignment as Broadview Y is noted for their strong junior aggregations.

All indications point to a thoroughly enjoyable evening and since the price of admission will be only twenty-five cents those in charge of basketball are expecting a rather large turnout for Varsity's home games.

DENTS HOLO ASSAULT

Not to be behind S.P.S. and Meds, Dents held an assault yesterday afternoon in Hart House. Most of the bouts were close, and some of the decisions were of the "toss-up" variety.

Smiling sweetly at each other, the mitt-tossers did less slugging, but apparently were more scientific, than the other faculties' boxers. Only time and the junior assault will prove which system is the more effective. In the

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Belgrade, Yugoslavia—An order was issued yesterday to cease expelling Hungarians from Yugoslavia and tension with her neighbour Hungary was relieved. Prince Paul, head of the governing body of regents was responsible for the order.

New York—An S.O.S. message from the Japanese freighter Victoria Maru was intercepted yesterday by the liner Ascania. Battered by a mid-Atlantic storm, drifting helplessly, her bridge washed away and three of her officers dead, the big freighter managed to send out a weak call for assistance which was picked up by the Cunarder and relayed ashore. Besides the three fatalities listed it is known that at least seven of the Japanese crew are seriously injured.

New York—When his instructor's plane crashed at Baker Field yesterday, C. L. (Red) Murray, well known Toronto aviator, was seriously injured. The student with him in the plane at the time escaped unhurt.

Ottawa—The Federal Government will introduce remedial measures to the limit of their power in remedying the evils disclosed by the Price Search Commission. Although unification of Canada's railway systems does not meet with approval in Ottawa, the railway question will be well to the fore. Insurance is to be provided for the unemployed.

London, Eng.—William Burgess, an employee at the Royal Arsenal at Woolwich, was accused, Saturday, of communicating official information, documents and sketches to outside persons. The "Official Secrets Act" was invoked against Burgess and he was remanded to jail for one week without bail.

WOMEN DOMINATED CRETAN SOCIETY

Wall Frescoes and Paintings Reveal Meekness of Cretan Man

ARTISTRY EXCELLENT

"That the Cretan man submitted to female dictation in the second millennium B.C., can be clearly seen by wall frescoes and paintings preserved in the ruins of the Palace of Minos in Crete," declared Professor H. A. Thompson in a lecture at the Museum yesterday. "Both in religious and political life women were prominent."

Professor Thompson went on to say that the palace of Minos from which has been learned so much of Cretan civilization, was discovered by Sir Arthur Evans, thirty-five years ago and has since been partially restored by him.

The palace was repeatedly destroyed by earthquakes but these misfortunes seemed only to spur the builders of the time on to greater achievements in architecture.

It was built in the shape of a hollow square with its main courtyard occupying the centre, and it rose to a height of three stories. Gently graded, monumental stairways, columns which tapered from top to bottom and porches with broad friezes characterized the palace.

The artistry of the wall frescoes are especially excellent and depict the life of the time so well "that few other artists in antiquity have so successfully bridged the gap between their age and ours."

MARITIME SECESSION IS VERY UNLIKELY ASSERTS DR. INNIS

Possibility of Commission Report as Political Football

HIGH TARIFFS INJURIOUS

Advocates Royal Commission Should be Set Up for Dominion

That Nova Scotia could never exist by herself if she seceded from Canada was the opinion expressed by Professor Innis when interviewed by The Varsity yesterday. Annexation to the United States, he thought, would certainly be opposed by the New England States, whose make-up was the same and who had been instrumental in getting a tariff put on Nova Scotia fish.

In regard to a statement originating in Ottawa to the effect that the proposal for the Dominion to confer with Nova Scotia in regard to lowering the tariff "is not regarded as practical and that it ignores the relationship existing between the province and the Dominion", Professor Innis at first declined to comment; but when The Varsity pointed out the likelihood of the report becoming a political football with the low-tariff Liberals pointing to it to substantiate their claims and the protectionist Conservatives using this fact and the fact that he had found it necessary to put in a complementary report to discredit the entire affair, Dr. Innis

SITUATION NOT SERIOUS

The danger of war arising in Europe from the controversy between Yugoslavia and Hungary was held to be slight by Professor N. A. Mackenzie of the Department of Political Economy, on Saturday. When asked what influence any action of the League of Nations was likely to have on the parties to the dispute, he said this was of less importance than the temper of the people involved.

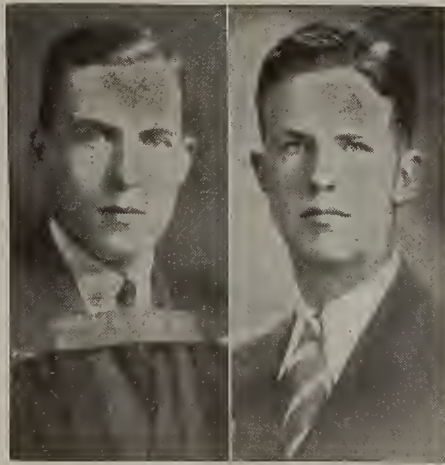

As long as France and Italy kept out of the controversy, there would be no serious consequences likely to ensue. Russia would certainly not wish to enter into the dispute, since she was striving for peace within her own borders. The tension between Japan and the United States was causing hard feelings, but nothing more serious as yet. Though noncommittal on the whole and not desirous of making any prophecies, he felt that the situation at present was not serious.

Dancing to the strains of Romanelli's orchestra, two hundred of the University's athletes and their friends made merry in Hart House Friday night. The occasion was the Athletic At-Home, with the latest crop of "T" holders as guests of honour.

Decorated in Blue and White, with spotlights playing on the dancers, the gymnasium presented a beautiful sight. Supper was served in the Great Hall, where a large replica of the Stadium made out of sugar was on display.

J. W. Magladery (IV Meds), and A. C. Smith (III Pol. Sc., U.C.), are this year's winners of the Rhodes Scholarships as announced by the Selection Committee for Ontario late Saturday night. Once again we are honoured by having both the recipients of this scholarship registered in the University.

John William Magladery is 23 years old; he was born in New Liskeard, Ont., and is the son of Thomas Magladery, deputy minister of immigration and colonization at Ottawa; his present address is 91 St. Joseph Street. Magladery is now in sixth year medicine and has secured first class honours every year in that course. He is president of his year, a member of Alpha Omega Alpha, the honorary medical fraternity, and a past president of Alpha Delta Phi. As president of the University Track Club, President of the Intercollegiate Track Union and a member of the University Athletic Directorate and of the Junior Intercollegiate Football team, he may be said to have taken a very prominent part in University sport.

"The Varsity's proposed series of articles on the chemical analysis of many of the foods and patent medicines which are in common use by students, I think will be very welcome," stated F. J. Sproules, III P.N.B., when interviewed last night.

Mr. Sproules, who apparently has a decided interest in subjects of this particular class, went on to say, "Arthur Kallet and F. J. Schlink, who are at present directors of the Consumers' Research Inc., are doing this particular type of work and thus should be in a position to express an opinion on these matters. Their facts must be true, or, if not, the writers would certainly have been overwhelmed with charges of libel."

Spirit of Self-Sacrifice is Necessary for Good-Will

"There is little hope of a peaceful transition from Hitlerism to whatever may be the next phase of Germany's development," declared Professor Lewis in the last of a series of Saturday afternoon lectures held in Trinity College Library.

The youth of Germany turned to Hitler for relief from unemployment, taxation, and an apparently hopeless future. It is difficult to judge whether the economic condition has improved, millions are still unemployed and wages have not risen with consumers' prices, but Hitler relief has been effective and for the first time the working man has been given a holiday. Cultural activities—the theatre, literature and music—have been co-ordinated and self-respect restored to the nation, but all criticism is sternly suppressed.

Previous to the oratory there was a general discussion on the proposal for student health insurance. When put to a vote the idea was upheld by a large majority.

The results of the recent questionnaire on the attitude of students to war are beginning to come in from the other Universities of the country.

Advent of Women Raises Fears Discussion May Offend Their Ears

A bombshell was thrown into the usual serenity of the U.C. Forum Club last Friday afternoon! Two co-eds, upon reading the announcement in The Varsity of the meeting of the society, and upon learning from the handbook that it is an organization for "the development of self-expression", decided that it was well worth their attention.

Therefore at the appointed hour the two young women appeared upon the scene of action, and being the first arrivals, entered and made themselves at home. They were rather surprised to see several members of the "stronger

Good Condition of Varsity Aggregation Proves Big Factor in Win

PACE VERY FAST

Erratic Shooting Around the Basket Prevents Much Higher Score

Before a very large turnout of basketball fans Lew Hayman's Big Six Blues outsped the speedy Aberley Lizzies squad on Saturday night by a 20-15 score. The game, played in the big gym at Hart House, marked the second consecutive win of the Varsity cagers in the Big Six loop. The Blue squad is as yet undefeated in the current season.

Starting out at a very fast pace which was maintained throughout, the tilt at times bordered on the scramble-ball variety as each team fought desperately for the ball. All through the game, play switched rapidly from end to end and the good condition of the Varsity aggregation had a great deal to do with the win. Lizzies, due to lack of condition, were forced to substitute frequently, and as a result their best men were idle for most of the game.

The low scores registered by both squads were due to bad luck at the hoop rather than poor playing. Easen

The young ladies were rather taken aback, but held their ground nevertheless. They were informed that never before in the history of the club had any woman visited them. One man insinuated that women need no such practice in the doubtful art of self-expression.

A controversy arose, and finally the

We Need . . .

Lately, there has been a great deal of talk about the rebirth of the legitimate stage. Most of those who hold forth on this subject name the amateur drama and the Little Theatre Movement as the most hopeful sources upon which to draw for the dramatic talent of the future. There have been many indications that they are right, but, strangely enough, at the present time the work being done has reached a level beyond which it does not seem able to go. It is true, it supplies charming entertainment for audiences composed of the friends and relatives of the participants plus a meagre sprinkling of the general public. This is not enough. The amateur drama must be something more if it is to supply the material for a real theatre—that is a professional theatre composed of experts who devote the whole of their time to the work. How is this to be achieved?

It seems to us that the fault lies partially with the peculiarities of the age and partially with the amateur himself. In the first place the amateur is trying to build up the theatre in a time which affords him very little inspiration in the form of an exemplary professional theatre. In the second place the amateur is forgetting that he must look to the professional stage, imperfect as it is, for all that wealth of technique and craftsmanship which he will find nowhere else.

This second fault is being corrected in some centres by the establishment of permanent drama schools under the supervision of professionals. In such schools the amateur becomes familiar with all the tools of the trade and is enabled to attain a proficiency which will allow him to make a real contribution to the art. What was once a hobby becomes a serious pursuit and something is produced which the public is willing to maintain financially.

Toronto is one of the finest examples of a city in which amateur dramatics have developed as far as they can on their own initiative. Some provision must be made for taking the existing enthusiasm and directing it into more productive channels. The logical method of doing this would seem to be found in a drama course permanently attached to the University and working through Hart House Theatre. Such a course could last throughout the scholastic year and might be attended not only by students of the University but by anyone desiring the training provided. We might even suggest that students be given credit for this course as they would for any other on the curriculum.

We would have a permanently established workshop affording the necessary basis for the stage of the future. It is only in this way that we can develop the talent necessary for a definite and indisputable rebirth of the theatre. It is being done elsewhere. Are we to be the last to see this great need?

Religious Liberty

The Dominion Executive Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress, meeting in Montreal, has issued a statement commenting on the particularly unfortunate plight of the Jewish people in Mexico. They have serious fears for religious freedom there, where it is reported that in the endeavour to bring about social and political reforms, desirable in themselves, many restrictions have been placed upon the rights of churches to carry on their work, and the rights of individuals to practise religion according to their conscience.

The statement points out that there are places other than Mexico where the great boon of religious liberty and racial tolerance is practised, but says "Notwithstanding . . . it is the desire of the Canadian Jewish Congress to emphasize our responsibility and declare our determination to labour for its achievement everywhere. While refraining from the discussion of the issues in the present controversies in Mexico, we wish to give our moral support to all who labour for the freedom of worship, and to express the anxiety with which we view every threat to liberty of conscience wherever assailed."

Religious freedom, not only for Jewish people but for Gentiles of all denominations, has suffered many set-backs in Mexico, which is traditionally in a somewhat chaotic state at all times. There is little that we here in Canada can do to remedy this situation, we can only sympathize. And perhaps do a little thinking. Canada is not such a bad place to live, after all.

Today's Congratulations

Go to the winners of the latest Rhodes Scholarships, who were named on Saturday. Messrs. Smith and Maglader, by adding this most prized of all scholarships to their laurels, have not only brought honour to themselves but to their University.

The Rhodes Scholarships were founded by Cecil Rhodes as a means of gathering to Oxford each year a group of students who would have as nearly as possible the ideal attributes of a man. Literary and scholastic ability, an interest in athletics, moral force of character, qualities of manhood, truth, courage and devotion to duty, kindness, unselfishness and fellowship, were all listed as qualities desirable in a Rhodes scholar.

The two men chosen will be the only ones representing Ontario universities. It has been four years since both Ontario Rhodes Scholarships have been won by students at the University of Toronto, although previous to that time this was almost a custom. May we offer the scholarship winners, and their alma mater, our best wishes, and congratulations.

NEWSPAPER PROPAGANDA

In the newspapers of New Brunswick the editorial policy is one of peace. These columns cry for world harmony and plead touchingly for the education of the world to a belief in rightness and expediency of peace. Sometimes one can even find a newspaper decrying the movements of arms manufacturers, and munitions merchants in keeping alive national hatreds and jealousies.

It is regrettable that these same newspapers have two hands,—and that they do not allow the right hand to know what the left hand is doing. For, although they love peace and hate war propaganda in their editorial columns, in their news items (and usually on the front page in 60 point caps) they play the game of the munition men.

For a month the newspapers of New Brunswick have played the "war scare". It has been difficult to find an issue without a "war scare" headline.

Why this inconsistency? Surely the editors of the papers of New Brunswick realize that they are playing the game which they decry! Granting the editors of these papers average intelligence, there is no excuse for the front page propaganda of which they are guilty. In New Brunswick we have not even the flimsy excuse of having a manufacturer of arms employing men. We have not one man with "an axe to grind".

So why not have the front page consistent with the editorial page? Why not follow a policy calculated to better humanity? Why play the game of a controlled and misguided world press with nothing to gain from doing so?

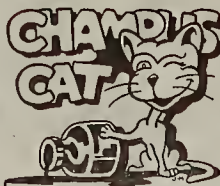

—The Brunswickian.

Eaton Auditorium

The scheduled "Norman Wilks" Salvation Army Benefit Piano Recital to have been held last Saturday evening in Eaton Auditorium, turned out to be a substitute performance, owing to a broken wrist sustained by the artist.

The artists who so kindly substituted for Mr. Wilks were Mr. Elie Spivak (violinist), Mr. George Lambert (baritone), and Mr. Ernest Seitz (pianist). Despite the broken wrist, Mr. Wilks rendered the national anthem single handed, being loudly proclaimed by the small but sympathetic audience.

Mr. Spivak began the programme with the Sonata in E major, being most competently accompanied by Mr. Leo Barkin on the piano.

Mr. Lambert rendered a group of English folk songs, "Drink to me only (Continued on Page 4)

Sergei Eisenstein's World Famous Soviet Film
The Varsity didn't like the first Toronto showing. Read the opinion of other Ontario press:

The Barker:

"To observe how this chap Eisenstein handles crowds of no less than 120,000 makes Mr. De Mille look a bit pallid."

Saturday Night:

"The story as told in pure cinema language; and the brilliant inventiveness of this language as employed by such a director as Eisenstein, leaves one with a sharp realization of what the moving pictures lost with the introduction of sound equipment. As Eisenstein uses it, it becomes capable of expressing every idea, every shade of irony and feeling, every degree of majesty."

St. Catherine's Examiner:

"This whole rapid sequence of events passing before one's eyes made the film an epic of cinematography, creating an indelible impression on the minds of those who witnessed it."

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

Women's sports for this term are pretty well over except the big event—the second game of the interfaculty basketball finals. U.C. Seniors and St. Hilda's clashed last Thursday night to no great avail as far as securing a lead to carry over to the contest tomorrow night goes. It is quite a unique situation in these finals for neither team to have a few points piled up to start them off on the right foot in the final and vital game.

The turn-out on Thursday was quite good but there is still plenty of room for improvement. Take it from us this big game on Tuesday will be one of the best and nothing should keep you from it. What is a mere exam or essay when you have a chance such as this? And surely the 25 cents admission is no great obstacle.

Did you U.C. women see the notice in Friday's paper about your inter-year games? They are to be played off on Friday, December 14 from 12.30-2. If you are interested the only thing you have to do is to get in touch with your year managers: 4th year, Lorna Reid; 3rd year, Helen McGarry; 2nd year, Enor Kennedy, and F. reshies, Mary Burson. These games can be very good—but it all depends on you.

Owing to the absence of Miss Parkes, it has been necessary to extend the limit set for receiving applications for managers of the intercollegiate teams. Anyone still wishing to apply please leave name on Miss Parkes' desk, Room 82, before Wednesday of this week.

U.C. had another good badminton practice on Friday; the continued enthusiasm is very encouraging. Nothing official has been done about this year in any of the other colleges. St. Mike's plans to get started in the near future. Vic and St. Hilda's are going to get it under way right after Christmas. People from Vic have been playing a little at the Little Vic gym, but they want to find more adequate courts before they define definite practices.

CITY INTER-CLUB SQUASH IS OFF TO GOOD START

Hart House squash teams got off to an auspicious start on Saturday afternoon when both "A" and "B" teams defeated teams from the University Club. On the courts of the University Club the A team won 14 games, and lost eleven, while on their own courts the B team garnered 25 points against 5 for their opponents.

These matches were the first played in a city inter-club squash tournament, in which Hart House is entered with the University Club, the Carlton Club, the Badminton and Racquets Club and the Toronto Racquets Club. Each team will play home and home games with the other clubs. The matches will take place on Saturday afternoons during the winter weeks.

Hart House teams were as follows: "A" team—J. Leibel, W. Noyes, M. Goldenberg, A. M. Centner, C. McCutcheon; "B" team—A. H. Crossman, J. Boegel, M. Zimmerman, C. N. Brener, B. Labelle, D. Richmond, B. T. Rogers, M. Pasternak, D. McMaster, B. S. Leibel.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

The Blue and White ices are in for a busy week between now and next Saturday night and we don't refer to their Christmas shopping. Tuesday night they should break into the victory dance for the first time this season when they take on the Oakville squad at the Arena. Not that the Oakville team are a soft spot in the programme, but the students are due for a win right now and, against the Oakville team, they will have more than an even chance. The Saturday night they face the Yale Bulldogs in their annual international home game. Yale, it will be remembered, defeated Varsity here last year and will be out to repeat the order.

For some time now there has been an agitation for the formation of an international league for the college season, and this agitation is becoming more insistent each season. The chief objection to this arrangement has been that the support around Varsity has to date been of the moral variety, which is somewhat inadequate for the financing of a team. Should Saturday's game attract the attendance it deserves, it will be just one more step in the right direction. Intercollegiate fixtures always have a certain something lacking in ordinary games and the international aspect should lend additional interest.

Varsity's unvictorious water polo team have now only to beat McGill by more than two goals in the Montreal pool and they will be intercollegiate water polo champions. This is, however, not a very simple assignment. The Red team looked like winners here Saturday evening and will probably be just as effective in their home town. They will have more support at least, as water polo packs the house in Montreal. The "house", however, has a seating capacity of about five hundred.

They are still playing football, here and abroad. Argos, St. Thomas and New York Giants all scored important victories Saturday. St. Thomas captured the intermediate title, for the fourth time in succession, while the Argos captured the O.R.F.U. junior crown. The Giants also won a title with their victory, the difference between the wins being several degrees temperature, a few inches of snow and 50,000 customers. While the local teams played to empty stands, the above mentioned number saw the Giants defeat the Bears. Football is certainly a big business proposition in any town where 50,000 will spend their laundry money to view the performance. Speaking of football it is interesting to note that at West Point every mistake a cadet makes on the gridiron is placed on record and on file. That should settle a lot of arguments.

WATER POLO SQUAD LOSES TO MCGILL

Drop Opening Intercollegiate Game at Hart House by Two Goals

FINAL SCORE IS 6 TO 4

Varsity seniors lost the first game of the home and home series for the intercollegiate water polo title with the McGill team on Saturday night in the Hart House pool.

The score was 6-4, which gives the Redmen a two-goal lead to take home for the return game next Saturday in Montreal. On the play McGill deserved to win by this margin, their close checking had the speedy Varsity forwards practically helpless during the greater portion of conflict. Both teams missed many opportunities to score and in this respect the Blue team were outluckied more, times than their opponents.

Eric Davey, the Varsity captain, opened the scoring when he tucked away a nice pass from Cres. McCatty. McGill fought right back and Freeman knotted the count when his close in shot had Murphy helpless. Before the quarter ended Davey scored his second goal to put Varsity in the lead.

Freeman again shot and Varsity were playing wide open for several tally. Varsity were unable to score in this half due mainly to Wayland, whose work at times approached the sensational. Near the end of half time McLean, the youthful forward, put McGill one up on the score sheet when he was handed a nice pass right in front of the goal.

Varsity came back determined in the second half and scored two quick goals. Wins. McCatty got the first one when he fought off the checks of three Redmen to bulge the netting behind Wayland. Cres. McCatty took a long pass from Devitt to put Varsity once more in the lead. But their efforts proved futile for Freeman restored the lead for McGill with two quick goals.

The last period was very ragged with Varsity being given little opportunity due to the "water-tight" defensive play of the Montrealers. McGill scored the last goal when McLean took a pass from Freeman.

McGill: Goal, Wayland; defence, Shragovitch, Skinner; rover, Shapero; forwards, Freeman, McLean, Bourne; subs, Elliot, Percy.

Varsity: Goal, Murphy; defence, Devitt, Twible; rover, Bancroft; forwards, C. McCatty, W. McCatty, Davey; subs, Culiner, Hardy.

of the Lizzies, and most of the Blue squad, particularly Marks, had great trouble in getting the ball to ripple the twine.

The Blue and White quintette had a decided edge in every phase of the game. Hayman's crew counted six baskets in the first half to the Lizzies' three, while in the last half the Blues again sank six shots and the Red Streaks accounted for only a single basket. The Blues made good on five out of twelve free throws, while the Lizzies registered on seven out of eighteen foul shots.

At the start of the game Eisen sent the Red Streaks into a single-point lead on a free throw. The Blues soon eradicated this edge and at no other point in the game were the Lizzies in the lead. Crowley, Bodrug, and Levy sank three baskets to give the Blues a six-point advantage. Both squads struggled along on fairly even terms until the half ended with the Blues leading 13-11.

In the second half the Blues displayed the better team play and it was only bad luck around the basket that prevented their score from mounting. The Lizzies were unable to get going due to heavy checking on the part of the Varsity crew. With seven minutes to go the Red Streaks put on their characteristic flin drive and the final minutes, as a result, were the most exciting of the whole game. The Blues, however, took matters in hand and swept the losers' defence aside to sink four more baskets after the Lizzies had come within three points of tying the score.

The work of Hugh Marks during the entire game was a treat to watch. The St. Mike's star was the best man on the floor at all times and but for tough luck would have registered many more points. Joe Connelly and Phil Gold on the Blue defence, turned in sterling performances offensively and defensively. Bodrug, playing in great style, led both squads in the scoring department. The rest of the Blue squad were in the fight at all times and turned in very commendable performances.

Eisen, Shapero and Singer were the best for the Lizzies. The whole Red Streak squad tried desperately and cunningly to outwit the better-conditioned Blue team but found the Varsity aggregation a little too good.

Varsity: Levy 2, Mencil 2, Crowley 2, Bodrug 7, Gordon 1; subs, Gold 6, Connelly 5, Meagher 2, Marks 2, Newman and Munro.

Aberley Lizzies: Eisen 5, Sone, Gandler 2, Shapiro 3, Minovich 1; subs, Sibulash 3, Sniderman, Spiegel, Wagman, Singer and Skurlo 1. Referee: Harry Sniderman.

JUNIOR BASKETEERS DEFEAT BROADVIEW

Intermediates Suffer Defeat in Second Game of the Evening

FOULS OISASTROUS

In the curtain raisers to the Varsity-Lizzie senior basketball game on Saturday night at Hart House, Coach McCutcheon's juniors defeated Broadview by a 26-23 score, while his intermediates were absorbing a 24-19 loss at the hands of Broadview intermediates.

The junior game was close and hard fought all the way, with the Blues garnering a big enough lead in the second half to stave off the last minute rush of the Y team that found them three points short at the final whistle. Both teams showed hard checking defences and only the superior marksmanship of the Blue sharpshooters gave them the margin of victory. Hogg, McGregor, Molsen, Cooper and Harlock were outstanding for Varsity, while Maxwell, Merson and Black were the pick of the visiting team.

The intermediate game found last year's Broadview junior Ontario champions hard pressed to gain this initial win in the higher grouping, as the Blue team were on the top of a 14-11 score at halftime. McCutcheon's boys were handicapped for the best part of the game by the loss of Vanderleek, star centre, through the four personal fouls route. Their superior height and polish around the hoop enabled the Y outfit to overcome the Blue lead in the second half, while Varsity were ruining their chances by wild heaves at the basket from a long distance. In addition, their excessive fouling tactics gave Broadview their win, as they converted 10 out of 21 shots into scores, Varsity only tallying on 5 out of 11 gift throws, both teams scoring seven baskets apiece from the field.

Breadon, at centre for the Y squad, played a star role in his team's victory, scoring eight points, and also being a tower of strength on the defensive. Stronach, formerly of Varsity, Samme and Morris also played bang-up games for Broadview. Fitton and Carey for the Blues put up a stout defence against the invaders and were good on the offence, accounting for two baskets each. Magwood and Sullivan also played

SYMPHONY TO BE NEW DEPARTURE

Weinzweig Conductor of New Symphony Orchestra at University

WIDE SUPPORT NEEDED

A symphony orchestra is to be the newest departure for the University of Toronto. It is to be organized and conducted by Mr. Jack Weinzweig, 2nd year, Faculty of Music.

Mr. Weinzweig states that the students who know of the project are enthusiastic. Up to date there are thirty members, and more will be welcomed. Six of the musicians are girls.

The leader declares that the University band is only of use during certain periods of the year—its field is limited; and the feeling is that an orchestra would be of more universal benefit to the students, and to those in particular whose talents lie in that direction.

There are obstacles in the way, declares the leader. Widespread support will be necessary to success. There have been difficulties in obtaining a place in which to practice—but permission has recently been given to do so at the Women's Union. The first practice will take place today.

The repertoire of the orchestra will range from the light classics to the symphonies.

A date late this winter is likely to be chosen for the first concert.

VIOLENT END SEEN FOR HITLERISM (Continued from Page 1)

A warlike tone and contempt for pacifism prevails in Hitler's book, "My Struggle", though he says he is "a man of peace who has learned the horrors of war." He knows the Germans are an emotional people who respond to violent appeals and has acted accordingly, but his movement is already on the decline. Many people are Nazis because they fear that the alternative is communism, and the fear is well grounded. Last May's clean-up caused great dissatisfaction and the fact that Hitler found it necessary to secretly slaughter several hundreds proves that he was panic-stricken by the thought of revolt; it was not the act of a man who feels settled or of a man with a conscience.

"The end of Hitlerism is certain to be a violent one," prophesied Professor Lewis. "War is not so certain, since the older generation and perhaps even the younger are aware of war's realities and will not succumb to war propaganda. When the Germans show that they are willing to work with the other nations, as they will do within two years, we must not go back to the cynical attitude of 1918 but meet them with self-sacrifice and assure them of our good will."

INNIS SPEAKS ON N.S. COMMISSION

pointed out that his own report had been substantially the same as the main report; that he had fully agreed with the main report upon the necessity for lowering the tariffs, although he had not gone into details of the procedure nor recommended a conference for that end.

In the opinion of Dr. Innis there seemed to be no doubt that the high tariff was injurious to Nova Scotia and that an increase in subsidy was necessary to partly compensate for the effects of the tariff on the province. The Varsity mentioned population as a basis for the subsidy but Dr. Innis declared that population as a basis for subsidy had been abandoned some time ago and advocated raising a subsidy by means of an increased income tax. The difficulty rose, he pointed out, from the fact that Canada is not an economic entity and he agreed that a Royal Commission after the pattern of the Nova Scotia one should be set up for the dominion.

The Varsity mentioned the different stands taken by the two reports with regard to the steel industry, but Professor Innis declared that this, important in itself, was yet unimportant in comparison to the main features of the report, with most of which he heartily agreed.

Both A. C. Smith and D. J. Maglaory are Old Boys of Upper Canada College, Toronto, the former having received many scholarships while there, including the Prince of Wales Scholarship, the First Edward Blake Scholarship in Algebra, Geometry, Trigonometry and problems. He ranked first in the First Edward Blake Scholarship in Latin and French, and also in the Second Edward Blake Scholarship in Greek and Latin, but both these scholarships reverted to the second place students. He was Head Boy, Governor-General's medalist and the first scholar in the province.

Both Maglaory and Smith will continue their studies at Oxford next year, Maglaory stating to a Varsity reporter that he would study anatomy and physiology, "the basis of all medicine." "It is difficult to say what my career will actually be," he said in answer to our question.

APPEARANCE OF WOMEN CAUSES CONSTERNATION

constitution of the club was brought out. One gentleman aptly put it "that since there is nothing in this document barring the presence of women at our meetings it would be ungentlemanly, may even rude, not to permit them to remain." Another retorted that often rather delicate subjects were brought up which might put young ladies ill at ease. He suggested that if girls should want to attend their meetings, they should inform the executive beforehand, so that fitting subject matter could be chosen.

An interesting hour followed in which several impromptu speeches, and one prepared discourse were delivered. They touched upon such highly diversified topics as "The Organization of the C.C.F.," "A train ride from Montreal to Toronto." The latter speech proved to be distinctive in that the audience was able to hear the actual sounds of a train in action, which arose from the speaker's throat.

Will the girls go back? Not knowing women as we do, we would not venture any opinion, but they did assure us that they never had a better time in their lives.

finds his business prosperity sadly blasted by the appearance of Harry Young (George Raft), who muscles in on the racket with his half-white, half-oriental cunning, and a smattering of gangster tactics picked up in San Francisco's Chinatown. Harry effectively eliminates "Pug", and takes the pretty Toni into his organization as a secret operative.

To Tuan (Anna May Wong), Young's oriental lady and dancer in his night club, welcomes Toni with a sinister passiveness that introduces the ancient struggle of East with West. The white girl, trying to be happy in her new life, makes the acquaintance by accident of a young chap, a Canadian who owns a shop in Piccadilly, and the two fall in love. The shrieking of a police siren as revenue cruisers churn up the murky waters of the Thames, the ribald brawls, and silent horrors of the oriental quarter, provide a convincing scene for the working out of an age-old problem. That "half-white, half-yellow," must ever mean "all yellow," is the grim and haunting theme of "Limehouse Blues".

RIFLE ASSOCIATION

To illustrate this statement Kallet and Schlink quoted extracts from the actual court proceedings. Some of these cases have since come to my attention and what the authors have stated is absolutely correct in that respect."

"It is a comparatively simple matter to find out the ingredients of the products but the workers might be mistaken in the interpretation of the results in the physiological effects that they might produce. Kallet and Schlink are chemists but some knowledge of physiological chemistry is required before a proper interpretation of the results can be had."

For the benefit of certain students I might point out that Stuart Chase has written many books along this line."

"Anything of any interest will certainly be of value in The Varsity. I have never given the subjects of food, drugs, etc., any thought before. If such allegations are correct, The Varsity would be performing a great service to its readers," stated J. L. Bradley, II Trinity.

"Better results would be obtained if The Varsity were to direct the students' attention to the 'Consumers' Guide,'" said D. J. Lawson, I Philosophy. "I think that every undergraduate should know something about the ingredients of the prepared drugs and food that they use."

"I think that it will be a splendid idea. With regard to the independent position which The Varsity claims to hold, I believe that it has a radical bias. Matters of a conservative nature are seldom given publicity," replied N. D. Pilcher, II Arts, in answer to The Varsity's questions.

Mr. Seitz played an interesting group of short classic gems—Minuet in E flat, Beethoven's "Prelude in E minor", Mendelssohn, "Ballet Music from Rosamunde", Schubert, and "The Turkish March" by Beethoven. Mr. Seitz concluded his first group with an interesting composition of his own as an encore.

The last half of the programme was featured by a fine group of Chopin by Mr. Seitz and two light but decidedly classic numbers by Mr. Spivak "Adagio by Brush, and Moto Perpetuo—Novacek."

Mr. Lambert's group of solos stayed within the compass of folk song music and was well received, particularly well performed was "Now sleeps the Crimson Petal"—Roger Quilter.

Considering the comparatively short notice upon which the artists had to arrange their programmes it is not saying too much for them that it was an excellent recital. The music was with few exceptions light and popular—thus universally appealing.

Sunday Evening Concert

Mr. Elie Spivak, pianist, and Mr. Hubert Eisdell, tenor, were the artists on the Hart House Sunday evening concert programme.

Mr. Spivak, noted Toronto Symphony concert master, opened the concert with a "Sonata in E major—Bach", which established Mr. Spivak's reputation from the beginning. A faultless technique, together with a thorough understanding of his subject, made this difficult number exceptionally pleasing to his audience.

Mr. Eisdell, the outstanding tenor of the recent "Mass in B minor", put on by the Mendelssohn Choir, began his group with "Dehl love son Fuggiti —Caccini". His second number, "Art thou troubled—Handel", was most expressively sung. Mr. Eisdell showed a convincing control of his voice and a remarkable facility of contrast in both loud and soft passages. Diction also played an important part in the success of Mr. Eisdell's first group. A splendid command of French consonants made "Debussy's—Ces aires joyeux" a pleasure to hear by enhancing the melody thus.

The second half of the programme brought Mr. Spivak's rendition of the "Concerto in G major—Max Bruch", being in the writer's opinion, second in order of appreciation to his first number, both in music value and technical rendition. It formed, however, a delightful melodic control and a fair estimate of the artist's digital dexterity, particularly in the "Allegro energico" movement.

Mr. Eisdell's final group comprised several modern gems, including Vaughn Williams' "The Roadside Fire", also "I heard a Piper by Bax". The latter was very interesting melodically, having a characteristically minor effect, suiting the texture of the song.

The accompanists, Mr. Leo Barkin, and Mr. Weldon Kilburn, were exceptionally sympathetic in their treatment of their accompaniments and at no time infringed on the ground of the artists.

Friday Afternoon Recital

Ettore Mazzoleni, guest artist at the Hart House Friday Afternoon Recital, spoke on the forthcoming Wagner programme of the next Symphony concert, outlining briefly the plot of "Tannhauser" and giving explanatory notes on "Siegfried" and "Isolde and Tristan". After playing excerpts from the Tannhauser Overture and Baccanale (Paris version), and the Prelude and Liebestod at the piano, a photographic recording of a portion of the Overture was played by Mr. Mazzoleni.

The programme was generally of an informative character and of special interest to those who are attending the Symphony next Tuesday. However, Mr. Mazzoleni is a fluent, forceful and well informed speaker and thoroughly enjoyable at all times.

Washington—President Roosevelt called on the nation's crime experts to create an administrative structure which would tie together every law-enforcing agency of the government. Attorney-General Cummings asked for the creation of a criminology institute.

Denver—The probable success of a tuberculosis preventive was announced by Denver experts. Experiments have been made on Colorado convicts who gambled their lives in the tests against a chance of freedom.

Chatham—The Hon. William D. Euler proposed a solution for Canada's railway problem, suggesting a holding company operating the two railroads as one system, each one retaining its liabilities and transferring its assets to the holding company.

New York—Thousands listened to an address given by Dr. Dafoe in Carnegie Hall last night, where he gave the case histories of the five Dime quintuplets.

Geneva—Through the action of the League of Nations, Hungary and Yugoslavia came to an agreement last night, temporarily at least.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP IN HANDS OF POLITICIANS

Sterility of Social Thought in Canada's Leaders Deplored

SOCIAL THINKING ANAEMIC

"Social thinking in Canada today on industrialism and democracy is anaemic," stated Professor A. Brady in his lecture at West Hall Thursday evening.

"Canada's economic structure was fashioned through wheat economy," began the lecturer; and followed this statement with facts to illustrate that as conditions for growing and exporting wheat from the prairie provinces were ameliorated, Canadian industry prospered and became concentrated. Today Ontario and Quebec produce eighty per cent of the manufactured goods of Canada.

From this situation, however, difficulties arise. The prairies are interested chiefly in legislation for their benefit; Ontario and Quebec wish laws in aid of industry while the government, as well as endeavouring to please the two, must legislate with an eye to previous and forthcoming elections.

Social thought is necessary today, yet Canada's leaders are sterile as far as social thought is concerned.

Public ownership as a new factor is beginning to plead its cause but as yet such ownership is in the hands of a group of political leaders. The C.C.F. Continued on Page 4)

PROFESSOR ALFORD SPEAKS AT GALLERY

Describes Nineteenth Century Impressionist Art in France

USED VISUAL IMAGINATION

"The early history of art in the nineteenth century in France is concerned with two movements, the classical and the romantic," stated Professor John Alford in his lecture at the Art Gallery last night. These artists painted landscape and history but little of the life of their own day.

The impressionists, however, set out to use their eyes in a constructive way on the nature about them and devoted an infinite amount of attention to the formation of a pattern of lights and shadows into a coherent whole. Theirs was the art of the passing moment. They used visual imagination rather than the historical or romantic imagination of the degenerative period immediately preceding them. They aimed at a spontaneous record of what they saw in terms of a balanced whole.

Artists following the impressionists believed in depicting the solidarity of things while retaining the freshness of the impressionists. They achieved this by the use of variants of the circular and triangular motives rather than by mechanical repetition.

The expressionists sought to interpret things as they felt them instead of as they saw them. They made records of immediate impressions. The cubism of more modern art is based on an unconsciously satirical outlook on the world.

X-RAYS FOUND VALUABLE IN CANCER TREATMENT

Cancer, when caught in its early stages, can easily be cleared up, and here X-rays play as large, if not a larger part, than radium. Radium is useful in the treatment of small surface cancerous growths but as the physics of X-rays is further developed it is possible to cure even deep-rooted growths almost entirely. Even in hopeless cases of cancer, X-ray treatment has prolonged the life and relieved the pain of the patient.

"The modern X-ray department," was the subject of a highly interesting talk given to the Trinity Science Club on Thursday evening by Mr. A. F. Jeans of the General Hospital. Starting with the elementary theory of the X-ray tube Mr. Jeans went on to describe the uses to which it is put in a hospital; first its diagnostic use and then its therapeutic use. Without becoming too technical the process of observing any hidden portion of the body was described in full. It is possible to produce X-rays of the same penetrating power as radium and here the value of X-rays is obvious because they can be utilized over a large surface whereas radium is comparatively limited in its effective field.

Ready discussion followed the conclusion of Mr. Jeans' talk, while refreshments were served.

Feeling Prevails at Parliament that Public is Easily Influenced

The motion "Resolved that this House approves of the Commercialization of Christmas," was carried by a vote of 34-33 last night at the Victoria College Debating Parliament in Alumni Hall. In speaking for the affirmative, Mr. Arthur Hamilton and Miss Agnes Bruce stressed the fact that without commercialization of Christmas there would be no festivities whatever, the old-fashioned Christmas when the lord of the manor entertained his vassals is too mediocre for the modern generation. The development of the Christmas festival for business purposes is mainly through advertising. Santa Claus has been tracked down and now appears every year, thanks to the shop keepers. They make a profit on the Christmas sales as trade is stimulated and business. (Continued on Page 3)

CAROLS AND NATIVITY PLAY AT CHRISTMAS PARTY

Last night at the Women's Union the Dean entertained the professors with their wives and children at her annual Christmas party. The women of University College were also invited.

The evening's entertainment was opened with hearty singing of the First Nowell, which was led by Mrs. Dorn. The Alumnae Dramatic Society then presented a Christmas play, the story of David—the children's shepherd. It was very effectively and convincingly done by the players. The story was that of how David stayed at home to watch the sheep while the other shepherds went to see the King of Kings, the Babe in the manger at Bethlehem, and how his star from heaven came to earth and sprinkled star-dust in his eyes allowing him to see the wonderful drama as in a dream.

Afterwards Mrs. Dow led in the singing of Christmas carols in which the children played a prominent part and at the conclusion refreshments were served to the guests.

While I went there I worked in various shops. Then I took a pre-legal course at Crane College in Chicago. After that I organized a band, not the one I have now, and after a while at that, we broke up and I went back to the show business."

"Is there any truth in the rumour that you once played the sax for Duke Ellington?" we interrupted.

"No, I have never played with him.

On the north wall are hung many representations of costumes and characters from various plays that have been produced in the theatre. ### DRAMATIC COURSE VITALLY NEEDED IN UNIVERSITIES

Lack of Connection Between the University and Hart House Theatre

GOOD MATERIAL HERE

Permanent Professional Stage is Required as Incentive

"That Hart House Theatre, with all its facilities and equipment, should exist at our doorstep, and yet have no vital connection with the University, is surely an anomaly," stated Professor Felix Walter of Trinity College. Thus he expressed his complete agreement with the editorial of yesterday, which called for the founding of a drama course "permanently attached to the University and working through Hart House Theatre." But he would not follow the Varsity to the extent of making such a course part of the curriculum.

Professor Victor Lange of University College, who is at present engaged in whipping the forthcoming production of the Players' Guild into shape, concurred heartily in the Varsity's assertion that only a permanent, professional stage will give our amateurs sufficient incentive and adequate equipment. "I should very much like to see a course in dramatic art instituted here," he told the Varsity, "and in fact were it not for certain technical difficulties, such a course might be in operation already. To be sure, it would have to be accompanied by a thorough grounding in the theory of drama; and it would have to be so offered that only those genuinely interested in the drama would attend. Such a course on the curriculum might very well be but another filler for those who have to round out their time-tables."

"We have better equipment than most American universities," Mr. Lange continued. "Many American actors and actresses—Katherine Hepburn, to mention one of the most recent—have been given the essentials of acting in their college societies. There is no reason why we couldn't develop some excellent talent here."

Professor Mackay of the U.C. Classics Department, however, saw no need for attaching such a course to the University. "What I should like to see," he stated, "is a revival of the old system at Hart House. Five or six years ago plays were produced regularly and an enthusiastic audience gave them their constant patronage. The required continuity was achieved and some real (Continued on Page 4)

ITALIAN-SPANISH CLUB PLANS NOVEL PROGRAM

Thursday evening at 8.15 the second meeting of the Italian-Spanish Club will take place at the Women's Union. A novel programme has been arranged by the executive.

Don Rolando and his Cuban orchestra, who have won great popularity in clubs around the city, are going to play some of their characteristic Southern music. The Rumba Boys are Cuban students living in Toronto and thus are genuine masters of their various native instruments which include the claves, maraca, and gourd. Their lively rhythm is the only music of its kind in the city and the club feels extremely fortunate in having them present for the evening. Miss Betty Grobba has also consented to play.

Copies of Spanish songs have been procured and later there will be singing by everybody. The evening will end with dancing, probably to the music of los Rubens.

PERFORMS HERE ON FRIDAY

Harold Bauer, who has spent a long lifetime working for movements whose object has been to make music more available to "the people", was branded an opinionated highbrow when he first came to America in 1901. And this was because, of all things, he chose to play Brahms!

In a recent article of reminiscences, Mr. Bauer, who will play in Convocation Hall on Friday evening, December 14, with the Hart House String Quartet, and on Saturday evening in Hart House Theatre, recalled his strange reception in Boston 33 years ago.

"It was a great day for me," he said. "When I learned that Wilhelm Gericke, (Continued on Page 4)

PROF. J. ALFORD SPEAKS ON XVIII CENTURY ART

"The English landscape paintings of the eighteenth century abounded in Italian imitations," said Professor John Alford in his lecture on eighteenth century art in the Museum on Monday afternoon. The landscape paintings are of a formal and architectural nature. Trees were cut and shaped to produce an ordered effect in the landscape.

Toward the middle of the period an increasing reserve in style developed. Paintings were simpler, clearer in form, with more classic and less Baroque influence. The development of eighteenth century Classicism showed a queer mixture of sentiment in the paintings of the period. Signs of the downfall of the old aristocratic order were becoming evident. The self-conscious Classicism and the Romanticism of the eighteenth century ran parallel to each other.

The industrial development of the towns showed itself in the art. In the latter half of the century, however, the art is not representative of the life of the period. Only in the rustic Dutch paintings do we get the relation of man to his world.

FIRE CAUSES EXCITEMENT

A fire of small dimensions but of considerable excitement occurred at 13 Washington Avenue last evening, when firemen were summoned to extinguish a minor blaze that was caused by a defective chimney.

The speedy arrival of the fire department equipped to extinguish a conflagration of any size, prevented the fire from spreading to the adjacent apartment of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, and was confined to the chimney. The damage was estimated at $25.

The Christmas Panhandle

The last mad scramble known as the Christmas rush, is now well under way in the down-town department stores. With the approach of the otherwise happy holiday season, Christmas joins Mother's Day, Easter and Thanksgiving, as a modus operandi for big business to sell more socks, ties, flowers and turkeys.

Victoria College students, in parliamentary session last night voted in favour of this commercialization of Christmas. However, Victoria students to the contrary, we must register regret at this cheapening of human relationships for the sake of sales. In days of old, we are told, the merry yuletide season was the occasion of simple family and community festivities. The peasants hauled in the emblematic yule-log, and remitted some of the year's taxes. Now, to the contrary, Christmas rejoicing takes the form of a spending orgy, and an anti-depression jump in the sales tax.

The vulgar business of installing a plump Santa Claus in every department store, a gruff and jolly Santa Claus slobering sentimental slush over the radio, a scrawny Santa Claus jingling an empty charity box on every busy street corner—all these constitute a ludicrous excess, which cannot but offend the true spirit of Christmas. All these things have no place in an otherwise fairly rational society. Tremendous throngs of people, intent on doing the "right" thing, are forced to join in the rush from store to store, to show that they do not fail to remember their friends at Christmas time—whether they have enough coal in the cellar or not.

Complaints of this kind could be continued indefinitely. The procedure of listing friends by the dozen to facilitate the purchase of Christmas cards, and the necessity of buying a dozen or two New Year's cards if you guess wrong; and the giving of gifts not symbolic of Christmas, but merely advertising schemes, to customers or prospective customers. These are all to be deplored. It may be said, perfectly truly, that Christmas shopping stimulates business. It does, but at the expense of business during other periods of the year. Generally speaking, business is poor during the late fall and mid-winter seasons, largely because of the artificial stimulation of the Christmas season.

Nothing is more desirable at any season of the year than a spirit of good fellowship and good cheer, a mammoth holiday dinner, family reunions, the sending of a few cards and the expression of innumerable good wishes. But Christmas is no longer a season of peace on earth and goodwill toward men. Preparations for war go on apace. Hostilities are apparent between nations on every continent. Nations continue arming themselves to the teeth. Armament builders work overtime.

Meanwhile, we are filled with an overwhelming desire to buy lurid socks, crimson scarves, initialled handkerchiefs, and a knitted tea-cosy for Aunt Sophronia.

WOMEN AND WAR

A WOMAN'S REPLY

It was with great interest that I read the letter in today's (Thursday) Varsity concerning women's indifference to war. I agree absolutely with everything she (I presume your correspondent feminine) said regarding the necessity of women interesting themselves in this question. But the attitude is hardly one of indifference.

It is true that in mixed company women are very loath to express themselves coherently upon any subject whatsoever in case their escorts or their male neighbours should think that they belonged to that class, that awful class—intelligent women. But in places where the only voices that are raised and the only ears that hear are feminine ones, the question of peace and war is discussed, slightly, at any rate. In such discussions the amazing thing is not the indifference—they are quite willing to admit that the topic is a vital one—but the colossal ignorance. When pacifist doctrines are put forth by some member of the party, when someone says that she will have nothing to do with any war of any kind, there is always someone, yes always, who replies "Well, does that mean that if someone (the nationality is usually designated and the favourites are a German and an Arab, why the latter I don't know) came into your house and shot down your mother you wouldn't do something about it?"

Now, as I remarked previously, women are loath to discuss such problems with the opposite sex, but in my very limited experience, I have not heard such a reply from a man, that reaction has been purely feminine. This absurd retort demonstrates a complete ignorance of war and the machinations behind war. Indifference cannot be at the bottom of this ignorance because these self-same women agree that war is a vital topic, that it is a question that forces itself upon our consciousness whether we like it or not.

Before women can do anything constructive for peace, they must have a working knowledge of war. How are you going to bring this about? It is impossible to force knowledge down their throats, you can't compel them to go to the Public Libraries and read the books that contain the truth. Do not berate women for their indifference to war, rather find some way of overcoming their ignorance in the matter.

M. H. Hunt.

Members of Hart House, will give the programme, assisted by Miss Margaret Parsons, who will play the harpsichord.

During the years since the war several attempts have been made to establish a glee club, but it was only last year, under the direction of Mr. Allan Sly, that the experiment was successful. Many will remember the recital given by the Club with Mr. Sly as conductor last February. When Mr. Sly left Toronto in the spring Mr. Charles Peaker, one of the best known of the younger musicians, was invited to conduct the Glee Club, which under his baton has made great progress during the last few months.

This admirable organization deserves the support of all members of Hart House. When the achievements of such famous men's choruses as the Harvard Glee Club are remembered it would seem high time that the University of Toronto arrived at possessing an ensemble of equal merit.

The programme will be given in full in Friday's issue of The Varsity and will consist of carols and madrigals. Miss Margaret Parsons, who gave a brilliant Friday recital a few weeks ago, will play several 17th century compositions on the harpsichord.

Art, Music and Drama

Sketch Room

The exhibition of paintings in oil by Mrs. Elset, her son and her daughter now in the Sketch Room, is a very interesting one. The paintings are all very gay, colourful and very expressive. They are marked by a tendency to high colour, used quite unsparingly and bold, vigorous design. Some of the work, by which member of the trio I don't know, is amazingly dramatic. There are delightful glimpses of snowy landscapes seen through a pattern of branches or oddly foreshortened roofscapes in winter sunlight.

There is a very common feeling running through all of the work. It is almost like a one-man show representing the artist's younger as well as the more mature work.

It is a very interesting exhibition of work by a very talented family.

Brahms Recital

An important and significant recital of chamber music was given Saturday afternoon by Geza and Norah de Kresz. The programme comprised the three violin and piano sonatas of Brahms—Op. 78, 100, 108.

The greatness of this music is undeniable and unquestioned. Brahms destroyed three earlier attempts in his severe self-criticism and this music is as typical of the great composer as anything that he ever wrote. The first two sonatas are lighter than the last, lyric in quality and really beautiful music. They all, however, belong to the mature period of his inspiration. The last sonata, more austere than the first two, is perhaps the best known.

The erudite musicianship of the artists is so great that a fine and understanding performance is taken for granted. Mme. de Kresz handled the difficult piano part with an exhibition of solid and exceedingly well directed playing. The violin against this vigorous background tended towards an obligato with less feeling of direction.

Eaton Auditorium

Toronto has been treated to major concerts in nearly every form of the music art. Many of the individual artists and members of choral societies are Torontonians and their work has given Toronto an enviable position among the music centres of the continent.

Last night, the appearance of a new choral group, the Tudor Singers, at the Eaton Auditorium, filled a long felt gap in the musical activities of our city. The Tudor Singers under the baton of Dr. Healey Willan, presented a programme of music which with the exception of two numbers, was composed entirely of 16th and early 17th century music. More interesting still was the fact the composers were Englishmen. Many people in believing that music began with the German (Continued on Page 4)

LEGION OF DECENCY

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

May I make a few comments on the disparaging remarks that have been made from time to time of late in our undergraduate newspaper with reference to the Legion of Decency.

Are we to understand that your reproduction of an article from the McGill Daily entitled "We Want Vice" implies an endorsement of its sentiments? If so, I do not believe that you can claim to represent the ideas of many undergraduates who, like myself, believe that the Legion of Decency is a "good thing".

The article referred to states that "purity being dangerous to handle implies excesses of painfully serious sentimentality" as if the opposite to "impurity" were (to quote again) "sticky" (Continued on Page 4)

Let's Go Places

Tolstoy's novel, "Resurrection", has received somewhat inaccurate treatment, but has been made the basis of a very interesting picture, in "We Live Again" at Loew's this week. Anna Sten, the glamorous Samuel Goldwyn import, is starred, and given a much better chance to show her good points than in "Nana", her previous vehicle. The picture is based on conditions in the old Russian empire, and the birth of communism. A good story, with infinite possibilities, just a little bit spoiled by the Hollywood necessity of tacking on a happy ending. Well worth seeing nevertheless.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Tonight's the big night, and we'll be seeing you at Hart House gym at 7.30, when U.C. Seniors play St. Hilda's in the second game of the basketball games. It's going to be a good game, so don't miss it.

Fencing is becoming an increasingly popular sport. The Trinity co-eds are particularly enthusiastic, and are turning out regularly for the two classes on Wednesdays and Thursdays at four o'clock in the Lillian Massey gym. If anyone else is interested in joining, ramble round and see Miss Coventry. The costumes were what fascinated us when we saw the class. Individuality and bohemianism are certainly the keynote.

With the first snowfall, the old skates and skis will be brought out and dusted off. Hockey practices will probably not start till after Christmas. There may not be any intercollegiate hockey, but the interfaculty games ought to arouse some enthusiasm, D.V. and weather permitting. Some of them certainly give the boys entertainment and amusement.

As for skiing, we wonder how many of the co-eds are interested in this sport. There was some talk last year of having a Vic Ski Club, but so far as we know, nothing came of it. Snow use skiing without snow. There's no point to this, but perhaps you get the drift.

In case any U.C. women who are interested in the inter-year basketball games missed the game yesterday, we announce again that these games will be played this Friday from 12.30 to 2. For any further information see the Sports Notices.

TRINITY TIES VIC IN SEMI-FINALS

Allison, Burchell and Bell Combine Brilliantly for Trinity

VICTORIA TEAM AGGRESSIVE

Trinity College held Victoria College to a tie 8-8, in the last game of the lacrosse semi-finals played yesterday afternoon in the big gym. Trinity entered the contest facing a five-goal handicap and this margin won the round for Victoria. Trinity played hard all through the contest but due to a lack of reliable substitutes they went down before the superior combination and man-power of the Vic squad.

Dyke and Clipperton came on at intervals for the winners and by fine passing and accurate shooting, beat Martin many times during the second quarter.

Allison and Burchell in their usual brilliant style combined for all the Trinity counters. These two together with Bell were the back-bone of the Trinity aggregation both offensively and defensively; despite the outstanding ability displayed by this trio Trinity were unable to break down the Vic defence and the few rushes attempted in the final quarter were easily frustrated by the capable Vic goalie.

Victoria's reserve power was used to good advantage by Clipperton and the frequent changes had Trinity exhausted by the end of the third quarter. Victoria deserved their win on the aggressive and consistent play which they displayed in both games and if they continue their brilliant form in the coming finals they are sure to make a fine bid for the honours.

Trinity: Goal, Martin; Bell, Grant, Allison, Burchell; subs, Cox, Foord, McCreary, Millard.

Victoria: Goal, Dickie; Burgess, Clipperton, Young, Dyke; subs, McClelland, Bently, Thompson, Wilkison, Robb.

MEDS DEFEAT EMMANUEL IN VOLLEYBALL PLAYOFF

In the first game of the interfaculty volleyball playoffs, Junior Meds defeated Emmanuel B by scores of 9-15, 15-7, 15-9.

Emmanuel played brilliant volleyball to capture the first game, and at this point they appeared to be headed for an easy victory. Meds were badly disorganized during this game, largely due to the fine spiking of Amos and Griffith for Emmanuel.

However, it was a different story in the next two games. Led by Crocker and Shulman, Meds rallied strongly and won in easy fashion. Emmanuel trailed by several points throughout the last two games, and although they showed occasional flashes of good volleyball, Meds' superior steadiness prevented them from drawing up on even terms.

Junior Meds: Krakauer, Wise, Gates, Crocker, Cash, Shulman, Zarsky, Laski, Florin.

Emmanuel B: Amos, Boyd, East, Gordon, Griffith, Gardiner.

VARSITY PLAYS OAKVILLE

After three consecutive losses against the two leading teams of the group, Varsity's Senior O.H.A. entry have an excellent opportunity of sneaking into the winning column for the first time this season when they clash with Oakville at the Blue Arena this evening.

The students, slow in hitting their stride owing to a late start with their practicing, have been improving by leaps and bounds, and have given the highly touted Torontos and Hamilton a real fight in spite of the fact that the score indicates otherwise.

Oakville, moved up from the intermediate ranks where they reigned supreme, have been very impressive to date and are called by many to be right in there when the playoff time comes around. They have the famous Ran Fodder in goal again, as well as most of last year's intermediate squad, with a few seniors to bolster it.

Varsity, however, has two fast forward lines, a good defense and an excellent goalie, and it is about time they were heard from.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

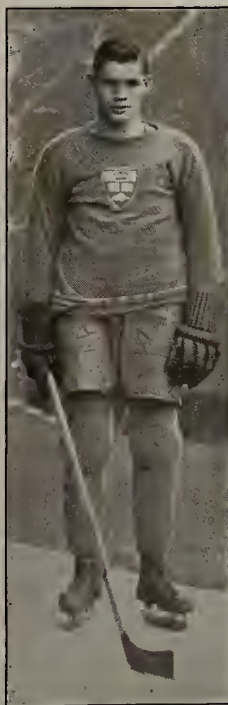

Tonight the Blue puck chasers will tackle the Oakville squad up at Varsity Arena. The broken leg suffered by Maxie Fullerton last week will not help Varsity's chances any, but we still think Varsity should win. The Blue team faced a tough assignment, meeting Hamilton, Torontos, and then Hamilton again, right at the first of the season, but should now be ready for a win. A few victories right now would bolster up the attendance at the students' games, and an increased attendance would be very acceptable for the management. Then Saturday night the Yale team will be here in their second appearance.

Since the football season passed there has been many rumours regarding the location of one Joe Breen, coach of the Mustangs for the past several years. Joe is now in Montreal and is likely to stay there, but whether or not he will coach the McGill Redmen, is still undecided. Should Joe chance to stay in Montreal it is probable that Ross Trimble will be driving the Mustangs for the coming season. Ross has guided the Argo Juniors to two successive titles and would be an asset to the board of strategy of any team.

The Blue basketball team will leave their books behind this week while they make a tour of Niagara Falls and Buffalo. The annual tour will this time require only a one-day stopover and games will be played with the U teams at the above cities. While on the subject of tours, the hockey team will commence their annual visit to the Harvard, Yale and other colleges New Year's day.

Trinity College leather traders took their turn on the local market last evening and produced a period of unusual action and more than one good fight. The Trinity boys in fact were, if anything, more proficient than the other faculties in the cauliflower producing game, all of which points to a good season for the B. W. and F. Club for the coming season.

Wednesday evening the interfaculty boys get their first test, in the preliminaries, with the meet concluding Thursday. The meet will of course conclude for a portion of the contestants the first evening, but that is merely a necessary part of the proceedings. The talent on display to date has been very encouraging and some of the old battlers will have to turn back some handy laddies if they hope to hold their places on the teams.

MARRIAGE PROBLEM AMONG STUDENTS

University of Washington Contemplates Course for Men

IMPROBABLE IN TORONTO

"Is there really a marriage problem among the undergraduates? It seems to me that either they do, or they don't." One naive freshman has a lot to learn. But the University of Washington is taking the question more seriously for they contemplate—and we fear that it can be safely left at that—an entirely new course for senior men ONLY—a course in "Marriage Problems—Before and After."

This very complete course—designed to make not only the present two-thirds but three-thirds of the marriages of university graduates (statistics by Dr. Norman S. Hayner, sociology professor in Seattle) successful—would cover problems of

a. Courtship—all of its angles, subtle or otherwise.

b. Engagements—how to get into them and out of them.

c. The Wedding—a little savoir-faire and accurate timing would make most marriage ceremonies more successful.

d. Adjustments in personalities—too serious a question to be discussed at the moment, but there is always the problem of latent defects.

e. Child training—and this question too can be left to a future date—it would be of little interest to most readers of The Varsity.

f. Divorce—in particular, how to avoid this pitfall, with Hollywood as a case in point.

g. And finally—problems of the unmarried. The real problem for most of them is how to get that way—or to stay that way.

The prospect of such a course, in spite of its possibilities, does not seem to find very much support around the University of Toronto. The professors frown upon it—in their opinion it is "totally unnecessary". It ought to be most beneficial to make the meetings open to male and female alike; it would be a splendid training for those who cannot work in the Victoria Library Periodical Room, — and how about the Trinity men who haven't got rooms facing on St. George St. It might be just as well to segregate the audience,—it is not a course in Applied Science; that would come under the head of cosmetics.

But whether Toronto men will be given a chance to improve their technique, or Toronto co-eds struggle along in the same old way we suggest that in the future the "love life" of the students recede into the dim distance—at least until after the Christmas examinations.

RETURN OF DANCING CANINE

"Jiggy" has come back! The other day the waltzing puppy disappeared from his home on Huron Street, leaving a void in the home life of a University family. Frantic searches in all his favourite haunts were fruitless. Neighbouring mud-puddles failed to render up the nonchalant knight-errant of dogdom. Friendly female dog friends were silent as to his whereabouts.

"Jiggy" was lost! Where, oh where to find the lamented one!

Five days passed. The master of the house went about his business; his lady silently missed the familiar scratching of slithering doggie feet and the almost-human grin of that puppy of uncertain breed.

Yesterday, "Gigolo" (to give him his full name) returned. There was something shamefaced about him — and something utterly triumphant and impish. His five-day debauch is over.

And he needs a bath!

The Legion's sole aim, I believe, is to raise the moral tone of the movies. Surely lack of filth doesn't mean lack of humour to any normal-minded person. If we decry this movement, what do we endorse? Do we want morbid sex problems and gangster heroes held up to school children as the models of our North American culture? Do we want the art of the cinema to be dragged from its high position and prostituted to an invidious propaganda of sex mania?

I think The Varsity might well add its voice to the press of city and province in applauding the movement for clean entertainment. Let the drama and humour of the movies remain an art—but a clean art.

AN APPEAL TO STUDENTS

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

In discussing the possibilities of preventing war with students and others I have discovered one predominating attitude. It is to this effect,—granted that war is undesirable, but human nature being what it is, wars are inevitable. There have always been wars and anything you or I can do would be just like trying to fill a sieve with water. In the first place, I would ask, "What is human nature?" Probably you would not be able to answer that one immediately so I would answer it for you. "You are just as good an example of human nature as I can find at the moment, you have already said that you are not in favour of war, so why place the blame on something that can not defend itself?" To me it does not seem quite sporting.

My object in writing this letter is to encourage people to face the facts. It is not merely an abstract question, we are discussing,—it is a matter of life and death. It is a challenge to our civilization.

If you still think of war as a game played by two opposing teams, according to rules, you are a mid-Victorian and you deserve to be lost in this different Modern Age. As Beverley Nichols says, the word "war" should be left out of Modern Dictionaries and "the wholesale slaughter of civilians" should be substituted, for that is precisely what another world struggle would mean.

My next point has been made so often that it may be put in the, "What every schoolboy knows" class,—that war is the result of misunderstandings between nations and that the surest way to prevent such catastrophes is to understand the point of view of other nations. The best way to do this is to meet them and discuss differences. "How impossible, you say!" Not at all,—an International Conference of Students is meeting at Lyons at the end of December for this very purpose and the University of Toronto has been asked to send a delegate.

Students from Germany, Italy and Japan will attend this conference. If they, living in countries where rumours of war are more prevalent than here are here, think that there is a chance of student opinion influencing governments, should we sit back and let the other fellow do it?

The cost of sending a delegate is only one hundred and seventy-five dollars. This means that if every student gave five cents, there would be enough money. Will you sacrifice the lives of your fathers, mothers, brothers, aunts, sisters and cousins, not to speak of your own, for the price of a chocolate bar?

Yours sincerely,
Marjorie E. Drummond.

school, fail to realize that a vigorous and well developed art flourished in England prior to the advent of the great Bach, and that at one time England led the world with her music. In the Tudor period, music and especially vocal music, held a much more vital and intimate place in the life of the people than it has since. As Dr. Willan explained in his introductory remarks, it was the custom for guest and host alike, to turn to part singing for pleasure and amusement. Every well bred person was expected to be able to take his place as the singers grouped themselves around the table. As customs have changed so this fine music has for a time been forgotten, only to be revived and appreciated once again as people have awakened to the heritage of English music which is theirs.

Morley (1563-1604), Gibbons (1583-1625), Byrd (1534-1623), figured prominently on the programme. The Silver Swan and the Ave verum Corpus were choice numbers of the evening but the level of the singing was uniformly high. The soft blending of lovely tone, delicate pianissimos, balance and precision characterized the performance as a whole.

Margaret Parsons assisted the Singers with two groups of choice harpsichord numbers. These she played with great effectiveness and poise, not in the least confused with the mechanical intricacies of the instrument.

The evening was one of rare delight. From Dr. Willan's point of view it must have been a very successful venture.

Loretto College

Milton's The Masque of Comus was presented last night in Loretto College. The difficulties of production are enormous, and with an all-female cast almost insuperable. The lines must be spoken without break in the lyric structure, and gestures must be restrained and simple in the extreme. Unfortunately, the director did not insist upon uniformly stylized performances, and some lack of harmony was evident. The play was adequately treated as to costume and scenery. The dances were uniformly excellent, and the crew of Comus co-ordinated their performances well.

The Lady, as played by Marie McKinnon, was the outstanding performance. She modulated her voice with remarkable skill and her movements were very graceful. The male parts of Comus and the two Brothers presented difficulties, with which Pauline Schnurr, Ruth Hoberlin and Rita Dwyer struggled heroically and with some success. The Henry Lawes songs were not rendered, unfortunately, and since much of the incidental music was omitted, the effect was rather flat.

After Comus, Brother Wolf—Lawrence Housman's delightful play—was presented. The acting was excellent and the result convincing and lovely.

"All progress," says Newton D. Baker, "is an illusion if there depends over it the possibility of the disaster of world war. Even so vast and intricate and beautiful a thing as civilization can commit suicide like the individual. will precede the main event. Many of The Varsity staff have been swinging the lead for quite some time, and a real battle is expected.

The Senior Intercollegiate Waste Basket throwers will work out at noon on Wednesday in the Debates Room of Victoria College. Only Brown Paper and Wax Paper may be thrown, and weighting the missiles with discarded doughnuts has been ruled out for this practise, particularly Bella's doughnuts from Burwash back door.

A nice piece of puddle-jumping was seen last week when Ross (brilliant but not) Goudy covered the course between the Physics Building and a Religious Knowledge lecture in 174 hops, 19 steps and 6 jumps. Ross has developed a nice long stride and hopes to equal the interfaculty record next thaw-up.

All Chesterfield Rugbyists are requested to get in condition for the approaching season, as a number of serious engagements have been arranged and condition is going to count in the long run. A course in Secondary Defensive tactics will be given in the Lillian Massey building during the Christmas holidays, and a keen struggle is anticipated.

The Athletic Office has ruled that all endurance contests have been ruled out for the coming winter, as the strain is too much for many of the students. The Hart House Hall Committee has been notified, and has been given four days to discontinue their one o'clock line-up. In the interests of true sport, we heartily endorse the move, and sincerely hope that something will be done about the three o'clock line-up in the Library.

STRANGE RECEPTION FOR HAROLD BAUER

the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was willing to engage me for a concert. I had never been to America, and as I had no other engagements here I was risking my whole fortune on this one appearance. It was very important to know what to play. No brilliant virtuoso stuff, I reflected; Boston is too serious for that. Beethoven is probably done to death; how about Brahms? Mr. Gericke answered that a Brahms concerto would do very well. So I came to America for my one engagement with my Brahms concerto. Imagine my dismay when I learned that the Brahms concerto had never been played in Boston, that the public did not care for Brahms' music and that the principal music critic of Boston kept a special vocabulary of venomous and contemptuous expressions solely to characterize this composer's work!

"I became, ipso facto, from an unassuming young artist, an opinionated highbrow, who had come to force the public to accept music it did not like, irrespective of anything else.

"It is certain that Boston did not like the Brahms concerto, but, strange to say, I was acceptable as a highbrow, the last role in my mind to adopt. It was this unusual circumstance which laid the foundation of my long career in America.

"Exactly 25 years later, in 1926, the Boston Symphony Orchestra invited me to repeat the performance of the work with which I had made my debut. I did so under the leadership of my dear friend Serge Koussevitsky and it was a great success, the same well-known music critic commenting on the concerto with the words: 'Time has somewhat softened the asperities of this work!'

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Montreal, Dec. 11—Sixty-one prominent Canadians in five provinces are being trailed by the R.C.M.P. on a gigantic fraud charge. They are accused of a conspiracy to evade the payment of $5,000,000 in customs duties on illegal liquor shipments.

Lansing, Mich.—Forty are believed to have died and thirty more to have been injured in a fire which completely demolished the Kerns Hotel here. Many are believed to be trapped under the ice of the Grand River into which they jumped to escape the flames.

Geneva—A military police force consisting of 1,500 British, 1,000 Italian, 250 Dutch and 250 Swedish troops has been sent by the League of Nations into the Saar area under the command of Major General Brind of the British Infantry.

Toronto—The remarkably high price of 103.127 on its 8-year $10,000,000 issue of 3% bonds was obtained by the provincial Hydro Commission yesterday.

WILL SING CAROLS AT S.C.M. SERVICE

Specially Trained Choir Will Lead Vespers at Knox

REHEARSAL FRIDAY

The Christmas Vesper Service of the Student Christian Movement, which for several years past has been a feature of their yearly programme, will be held in the Chapel of Knox College on Tuesday, 18th December. The purpose of this service is to provide an opportunity to students of the University of singing some of the fine old carols.

A special choir trained by Mrs. John Dow, wife of Professor Dow, will take part, while Professor Davidson Ketchum will be at the organ. The service will be very simple and short, lasting from 5.10 p.m. to 6 p.m. and will consist for the most part of the carol singing. It will be conducted by the Rev. Beverly Oaten, who is the National General Secretary of the S.C.M. of Canada. Attention is drawn to the fact that all students are welcome and that a preliminary practice of the unfamiliar carols, which are to be sung at this service on Tuesday, will be held in Knox College Chapel on Friday, December 14th, at 4.30 p.m., which all interested are urged to attend.

GRIFFIN GUEST SPEAKER AT JOINT PRESS CLUBS

The Women's Press Club held a "working" meeting yesterday afternoon in the Women's Union. After tea, the members read their recent work. The club is stronger in poets than in prose writers, only one sample of the latter's work being forthcoming. The poems were mostly of a high calibre and many received favourable comment. Authorship of the poems remained anonymous and each poem was discussed and criticized by the members.

It was decided that the women should join with the newly-formed Men's Press Club for a dinner meeting with Frederick Griffin as the guest speaker.

"A very sound and practical idea," thought Professor F. H. Walter, when interviewed by The Varsity yesterday for an opinion on the scheme of the Anti-War Society for sending a delegate to Geneva. "The scheme has great possibilities," he stated, "but they are not the ones that most people seem to think. The practical use will be in the experience gained by the delegate from mixing with his fellows sent by the other universities in Europe and America."

Professor Walter, who is an associate professor in French at Trinity College, went on to say that in his opinion "The gesture would certainly possess practical value in bringing about permanent peace. Any such demonstration on the part of a student body, even though a minority, would help."

Professor L. T. Morgan at the Economics Building held very opposite views to those of Professor Walter. A single "No!" was his sharp reply to the question "Do you think that this scheme will have any practical value?" However, he admitted that "It would be a very nice trip for the lucky person who was given the job."

I.O.D.E. PRESENT CONCERT OF CHRISTMAS MUSIC

The various chapters of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, who have given a Sunday musicale every week in the concert hall of the Royal York Hotel, are planning a special Christmas concert on Sunday, December 16.

The musicale will be presented by the Helen R. Bruce Chapter and will be performed by the choir of St. Thomas' Church, singing carols, motets and other music suitable to the Christmas season. The audience is expected to join in the singing of some of the better known carols. The second half of the programme will include some four part madrigals by a small group of boys.

Invitation cards are available at the S.A.C. office at Hart House.

The Victoria College French Club held its Christmas party in the Sun-room of Wymillwood last night. Gladys La Chance, the president, announced the feature of the evening—a group of songs by French composers. The artist was Miss Frances Gregorash and one her accompanist, Madame de Gidonoff. The first number was the delightful "Bereuse de Jorcelin" by Benjamin Godard. This was followed by "Les Filles de Cadix" a spirited song by Debussy. The group closed with "Une Gavotte" by Lemaire, composer of the celebrated "Andantino" or "Moonlight and Roses". Miss Gregorash responded to the club's warm applause with the encore, "La Valselette". All the songs were rendered in French.

"What are we doing to develop musical and artistic life in Canada?" asked Dr. Edward Johnson of the Metropolitan Opera Company, speaking to the Women's Canadian Club in the Eaton Auditorium yesterday afternoon. "In Canada we are accustomed to regard music as the product of highly trained and possibly highly paid artists, but it is significant that in the countries from which music has come, it has grown from roots imbedded among families in the home. In Italy there is a small tax on the movies, football games, prize fights and other forms of amusement, which is used to carry on the musical tradition of their land." Dr. Johnson's subject was "Opera—Grand and Otherwise", and he traced (Continued on Page 4)

Last Meeting of the Sandwich Parliament for the Season Today

Today the Victoria Sandwich Debating Parliament meets for the fifth time and the last before the holidays. The subject before the House will be "Resolved that the pun is mightier than the sword." On this next to incomprehensible subject the honorable members will be invited to speak and to shed thereon the lustre of their brilliance. The Prime Minister will be the Right Honourable Norman Nichol and he will be assisted by a corps of such redoubtable punsters as Charles Joffe and Hugh Peart. The negative side rests in the lap of the gods but it is known that a certain Frank Coburn will address the House from that side. The Speaker will be the Hon. J. N. On the conclusion of the discussion the House will be prorogued until January 9 by the Governor General, the Baron Goudy of Runnymede.

HISTORY OF GOLD TOLD IN LECTURE

Uses Such as Gold Leaf and

Dr. E. S. Moore

"THRILLS HUMANITY"

"Nothing in the material world has so thrilled humanity as gold," Dr. E. S. Moore stated in his Museum lecture Tuesday afternoon. Many have risked their lives and died for it. The metal is precious for its beauty and brilliance but mostly because it represents real money.

"Many substances are mistaken for gold, but gold is never mistaken for anything else." Its glistening colour can be detected in the smallest particle. It has few of the qualities which other metals possess and only units with chlorine and mercury.

The gold leaf, which has been made since very primitive ages, in Pliny's time was beaten to a thickness of one seventy-thousandth of an inch, and can now be made so thin that light will pass through, although the method of procedure is still the old fashioned gold beater. One cent's worth of gold, at the present price, can be beaten out until (Continued on Page 4)

U. of T. Squad Sadly Missing

Varsity suffered their fourth straight defeat in the current O.H.A. series when Oakville handed them an 8-5 lacing at Varsity Arena last night. The game was one of the wildest seen at the Arena in some time with both teams producing scoring bees that kept the crowd in an uproar for the sixty minutes.

Oakville started away to a very one-sided victory in the early stages of the game but Varsity turned in a third period rally that reduced their lead considerably. The Villains piled up a two goal lead in the first half of the initial period but the Blue team tied it up before the end of the period. In the second session Oakville went to town in a large manner and walked off the ice leading 7-2. In this period Varsity's defence was useless against the speedy Oakville attack. Varsity had the edge in the final frame but the five goal deficit was far too large to overcome.

Title

TAKE EARLY LEAD

St. Hilda's came out on the top of a 27-21 tally to oust U.C. Seniors from the women's interfaculty basketball title in the final game played at the Hart House gym last night. Both teams played real basketball and the U.C. squad fought for a win every inch of the way. The Saints were shaky at first but when they cooled down their plays clicked, their passes were neat, and their general attack was more decisive than that of the Red and White Seniors. Kay Brown, the flashy U.C. forward, was the outstanding player on the floor throughout.

Play was even in the first period. The Saints opened the scoring but U.C. soon tied it up. The shifty forwards on both teams capitalized on the rather weak defence lines, and when the whistle blew the Saints had 9 points to U.C.'s 5.

In the second quarter U.C. had a slight edge and were just two points behind the Blue and Grey sextette at (Continued on Page 4)

The necessary certificates will be issued at the College, Faculty or Department Office at noon on December 21st.

On Investigations

There has been a trend in American (Canada and the U.S.A.) politics towards Investigations. It is immaterial whether the underlying purpose is a rising conscientiousness amongst our government representatives, or mass pressure, or merely desire for personal publicity. But it is relevant to know what is to follow the investigations, for a great deal of time and public money are being spent on them.

During the last year, the housing conditions in Toronto were investigated under the special supervision of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. At present in the Dominion of Canada, there is the H. H. Stevens coast-to-coast investigation into industrial conditions, wages, prices, and so on.

A conference for the prevention of crime is being held in Washington. It is distinguished by its ultra-democratic nature, for the delegation is made up not only of politicians, judges, lawyers, and criminology experts, but representatives from social and educational bodies and societies have been invited. In this way the conference is different. But—what of its reception by the public at large? Is the attitude of one radio announcer—"yes, the conference and investigation is a good thing, but can the police be divorced from politics? Will anything be done?"—is that attitude typical of public opinion on other investigations?

The faculty of the University of Toronto have already taken part in these investigations. There is all reason to believe that some of the students will be called on in the future. For we are the coming politicians, professional and academic men, the social and educational workers of Canada. Investigations are to be in our hands.

The question is whether, while we are young and impressionable, there will be built up in us an attitude of cynicism towards reform following investigation, so that when it is our turn to do the investigating we shall do so with a smirk of hopefulness on our lips, and the knowledge of futility in our souls. Or are we eventually to be shown some concrete results, a remedy for the glaring social evils that are being disclosed to us?

The Pulse of the Student Body

The second edition of the Student, the official publication of the Student League of Canada, is scheduled to appear on the campus this week. The Student, although only a few of its editors are undergraduates, serves a useful purpose as a meeting place for more radical student opinion. It is by far the most ambitious, as well as the most outspoken publication appearing here.

A survey of undergraduate organizations, of which the Student League is one, affords an interesting symposium of undergraduate thought. The extreme seriousness of the Anti-War Society, the frothy fervor of the Philistines, the clear purpose of the German Study Club and the garbled objectives of the Post-Socratics cover an entire range of student ideas and purposes. Therein lies their virtue, for the student may consider the whole field and choose for himself those activities which best suit him, and are likely to aid his course

PEACIFISM

Views on War

KNIGHTS OF PEACE

A week ago, an editorial in The Varsity, under the title: "Anti-War: an Error", pointed out that a mere opposition attitude on the part of students in the question of war was insufficient. Many ardent and sincere members of the Anti-War Society have argued that such a view leads nowhere, and certainly not to action. But is this really the case? Is there no way to present the cause of Peace in such a way that young men and women will be enthused and so taken by it that they will readily give the best they have, even the best that is in them, to see it triumph?

Among those who, willy nilly, went to the last war, few are those who still see much glory in it, or who are willing to enlist again. They have realized that the ideals for which they fought were mainly baits; in fact none of them have been realized. However, we must recognize that war enables men to give expression to virtues such as courage, and sacrifice for a cause, while it reveals also how men of a same unit can be linked one to another irrespective of social status. Yet, for all this, we should never forget that the moral harm done to mankind by war, by far exceeds any good that individuals may find in fighting. It is because it negates and destroys utterly all that links men together,—on the international plane,—and kills the best elements in any culture, that we are opposed to war, and that many of us have taken the engagement not to fight, under any circumstances.

The Anti-War Movement, so far, represents a small minority. A great many young people, as well as mature men and women, are in sympathy with it,—yet, they will not join any movement that only opposed physical war. Can we ever expect to enlist these people? It is my deepest conviction that it is possible, but there are some conditions to be fulfilled beforehand. We have seen that a mere "anti" attitude is preventing a great number of men from supporting a movement, for it condemns too sweepingly, some values which seem to rise to their highest in war: "Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori."

On the other hand the word "pacifism" has a rather weak and unglorious flavour, which fails to raise enthusiasm in young people who want action. The reason why youth, all over the world, is rallying under such banners as communism, fascism, Hitlerism, is that these represent daring, dangers, besides being positive in their programme,—however incomplete they may be in the long run. Do we come then to an impasse? Is it necessary to accept the "anti" attitude, which will per se, prevent the movement from ever becoming a majority? I do not believe it, and would suggest that all those want real and lasting peace to be established on this earth,—not only in a far future—could rally under such a title as The Knights of Peace.

Such words imply that we are members of a real crusade, that there is a cause which will ask everything of us, in a word, which is an Absolute. It would enable all those who, while condemning war as a means of settling international disputes, see in it the occasion for men—despairing in life and its futility—to lose themselves in an ideal which asks them to be men in the full acceptance of the term,—to join in this Crusade for Peace which will need heroism, daring, sacrifice, too, linking mankind in a common effort that is positive. The Knights of Peace would be the best reply to those who want war to cease, yet shrink from joining any pacifist group.

War is to be abolished, and all our efforts will be required to achieve this. Let us never forget that war is the result of a wrong mental attitude, a very short-sighted view of life as well as the result of an economic order based on profit-making, i.e., on human greed and a materialistic conception of life. Who will join in the crusade of the Knights of Peace?

Claude de Mestral.

through life. By their clubs shall ye know them. It is not our intention now to comment upon the particular merits or lack of merits of any campus organization. It pleases us to see the Student League publish a magazine not because we agree with its reading matter, for we disagree heartily with several articles in its pages, but because any group of students setting out with a purpose, and accomplishing that purpose, is visual evidence of some vitality in the student body.

The trend which these societies take, whether it be political, social, or academic, shows the general direction in which student views are progressing. They are the pulse of the student body. The pulse is still beating—and, while there is life, there is still hope.

But a disposer whose power we are little able to resist, and whose wisdom it behooves us not at all to dispute, has ordained it in another manner, and (whatsoever my querulous weakness might suggest) a far better.—Burke.

When God gave Adam reason, he gave him freedom to choose, for reasons is but choosing.—Milton. She was tumbled early, by accident or design, into a spacious closet of good old English reading, without much selection or prohibition, and browsed at will upon that fair and wholesome pasturage.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Hart House Theatre

"The Crime at Blossoms" is a clever and exceptionally interesting play. Mr. Shaip is not just telling us an entertaining story, but exposing and denouncing one of the most conspicuous and lamentable features of contemporary England. . . . The play is a satire and a very clever one." Thus wrote Mr. Gilbert Wakefield, eminent critic of The Saturday Night Review, when "The Crime at Blossoms" was produced for the first time in London in May, 1931. The play is being presented by the Victoria College Dramatic Society in Hart House Theatre this evening and on Thursday and Friday under the direction of Mr. Frank Hemmingsway, who directed the Centennial Pageant for the city of Toronto this year.

"The Crime at Blossoms" is an unusual play. It is not, as one correspondent of The Varsity seemed to think, the dramatization of a detective novel. It is a serious study, amusingly satirizing the morbid curiosity of those persons who flock to the scene of any tragedy. The plot has been developed with remarkable ingenuity and the play is brought to a close in a surprising and dramatic climax.

Last evening's dress rehearsal would indicate that the production has been remarkably well cast. The principal parts will be taken by Leith Ferguson as Valerie, Robert McCrae as Christopher, and Helen Carscallen as Mrs. Woodman.

The critic of the Illustrated London News remarks of the play at the end of his review, "Its satire on the foibles of the public may prevent its popularity with the many but it certainly is excellent caviar for the few."

Just east of Spadina Ave.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

St. Hilda's have held the interfaculty basketball title for a second year, but the U.C. Seniors gave them a real run for it. Last night's contest was a spectacular one and thrillingly close up to the last three minutes of play. Both colleges were represented by a squad of smart basketballers. Their coaches, Jerry Wesley for St. Hilda's and Murid Atkin for U.C., deserve a large hand for turning out such excellent squads.

Mary Carre played her farewell match and turned in the best performance of her four-year career. She ran up 16 of the total 27 points her team made, and her floor work and ball handling were right on a par with her shooting.

The Saints also lose Enid Palmer this year. She was only on for the final quarter last night and it is significant that the defence line was weaker without her. Mary McDonald did nice work in stepping into the breach and proved her versatility when her play on the forward line in the last ten minutes was equally good. Edie Ardagh did some fine passing and shifty floor work, but due to an injured ankle and arm her game was not quite up to its usual standard.

Kay Brown, on U.C.'s forward line, is one of the best players Varsity has had. Her game last night was spectacular, and it is to Kay Grubb's credit that she did not pile up more than 11 points. Her ball handling is superb, as is her general floor work. Pat Petrick supported her ably and turned in a fine performance. Billy McGarry looked good on U.C.'s defence, and it speaks well for Jean Atkinson's work that Mary Carre piled up most of her score when Jean was off the floor. Lorna Reid played her farewell game, and did some neat defence work. She was right in there the whole time.

Today is the deadline for applications for the position of manager of the senior and intermediate basketball teams. All names must be given to Miss Parkes in room 82, U.C., before noon.

The notice which has been running all week about U.C. inter-year games has been O.K. except for one basketball which is to be played. And so all U.C. women who play hockey at all are asked to be at the Varsity Arena at 12.30 on Friday. As we have said before, turn in your names to the year managers: IV Lorna Reid, III Helen McGarry, II Enor Kennedy, I Mary Burson. Sorry to have misled any of you who had hoped to have one final fling at basketball!

B. W. AND F. MEET TO BE HELD TONIGHT

Many Entries Received for Interfaculty Assault Tonight

S.P.S. TO DEFEND TITLE

Boxing, wrestling and fencing will make their official debut tonight when freshmen and other unknowns tangle mitts and grips in the junior interfaculty assault. Most of the contestants will be eliminated today and the finalists will fight it out on Thursday.

A few of these youthful exponents of the many art of self-defence have attracted the attention of the B. W. and F. coaches and are expected to win in their respective divisions, but, as in previous years, most of the bouts will be fought at even odds.

S.P.S. may repeat last year's win in this affair, as they produced a strong-looking team in their own assault a few days ago. But three other faculties also looked good in their respective assaults, and allowances must be made for entrants from other parts of the University, so the resting place of the interfaculty laurels for the next year is very much in doubt.

In the boxing section, Carmichael of S.P.S., should cut a wide swath in the 118 lb. division, and Bracken, also of S.P.S., will take a lot of beating before yielding the 165 lb. honours. Krawker of Meds, with his original ring tactics, and King of S.P.S., a hard-hitting fighter, will make things go in the 155 lb. bouts. Pearson of Dents should take the 135 lb. title with his feinting and quick punching.

The grapplers are harder to classify. The faculty assaults have produced wrestlers of superior calibre but their comparative ability is yet to be determined. The 145 lb. class should have the most interesting bouts, with two particularly strong men, Houle of S.P.S. and Trimble of Trinity in action.

U.C. BASKETEERS DEFEAT VICTORIA

Extra Games Result from Tie in the Regular Schedule

CAPTURE LAST TWO GAMES

Yesterday afternoon Senior U.C. came from behind to defeat Senior Vic in an exciting interfaculty volleyball game by the scores of 7-15, 15-11 and 15-6. The two teams were tie at the conclusion of their regular schedule. This game, which was played in the upper gym of Hart House, decided which team was to enter the playoffs. By virtue of their win Senior U.C. will meet Senior Meds in the semi-finals on Thursday, December 13th.

In the first game Vic overwhelmed their opponents and looked like sure winners. The combination of Devitt and Kearns when they were on the front line was superb and accounted for many points. The second game was very close and U.C. were finally able to eke out a win after trailing most of the route. In spite of the score the last game was even closer than the second and each team had to fight for every point.

Chang was the outstanding player for the University College team. He accounted for point after point as the team fed him the ball at the net. Levy and Himel also played an excellent game for the U.C. cause. Bodrug and Vanderlick helped the Victoria team with their fine passing.

Victoria: Bodrug, Devitt, Vanderlick, Kearns, Neeb, Dingman; subs, Irwin and Hazelwood.

U.C.: Murphy, Himel, Chang, Lasikin, Levy, Dansky; subs, Goulding, Haig, Krieger and Lipman. Referee: Crockower.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

We haven't given up hope as yet, and we are still confident that Varsity will win some hockey games. Their schedule called for a win last night but evidently someone neglected to inform the Oakville team, as they went right out and won just as if they were supposed to. And Varsity were so surprised that they did nothing to stop them until it was so late in the evening that their efforts were ineffectual.

This Oakville team know as much hockey as any club in the loop. Despite rumours of weakness, they are a fast shifty squad that knows how to go and get the necessary goals. Many of the rushes they staged were bordering on the sensational, second only in attractiveness to the performance turned in by the mascot.

In fact, the mascot, with his between period play, literally stole the show. The mascot, less than three years old, armed with a stick, bob skates and a puck about half the size of himself, toddled out onto the ice at the conclusion of every session. His efforts as a player were not very inspiring but his consistent attack on the puck, which he could scarcely see over, drew rounds of applause from the crowd. And proudly decorating the back of his Oakville sweater was the number 1/2.

The next active engagement in which Varsity will take part will be the battle with the Bulldogs here Saturday night. Yale have most of last year's team back, and are reputed to be strong. Varsity, despite their defeats, are stronger than last season, and should be able to give the visitors a battle. What the starting line-up will be is still undecided. Last night's team, to say the least, would not have been weakened had Sweeney and Jeffery been in action. True enough, some of the newcomers turned in brilliant efforts, but not all. And if Varsity is to win games, ALL the players must be on their toes.

After it had been decided that Hamilton had the Allan Cup practically sewn up, word came along that both Blake and Bennett are leaving for the Maritimes. We think the Minimum Wage Board should investigate the Hamilton squad if these stalwarts find it necessary to leave for distant points.

The local cauliflower plant goes into action tonight in the first of a two-day fiasco which will produce a wide variety of casualties, victories, warped noses and oversized ears. This junior assault may some time wait for science but never for action. The performance in the gym has been encouraging and it now remains to be seen how the boys stand up under fire. Many boxers look like champions when they are thrashing the bag but when they face something which is liable to hit back their courage wanes. There is also the case where the gym punk is a ring champion. Tonight will see both types in action.

B. W. & F. ENTRIES

The following is the draw for the junior interfaculty assault which starts this afternoon. The competitors will weigh in at Mr. Barton's office before 10 o'clock today. ### WATER POLO TONIGHT

SRS. PLAY ST. KITT'S Y

Tonight in Hart House pool, two water polo games are to be played. The first, at eight-fifteen, is between the University of Toronto juniors and Broadview Y.M.C.A., and immediately following, Varsity's senior team and intercollegiate representatives, take on the boys from St. Catharines Y.

The second game especially, promises to be a feature well worth seeing, as both teams play a smooth, speedy and spectacular type of game. In their former encounter the Blue team were victors by the margin of six goals to four and should repeat tonight in their own pool. They are a well drilled and clever team that will provide an exhibition of water polo at its best.

The two junior teams are meeting for the first time, but on their showing to date, Varsity appear to have a better than even chance of finishing the evening with two more wins to their credit.

TORONTO TENNIS CLUB MEMBERSHIP PRIVILEGES

A letter from the Toronto Indoor Tennis Club bears the information that they are willing to allow a limited number of undergraduates of the University of Toronto to become members of the club, which operates at the Eglinton Hunt Club, for the sum of an out-of-town membership, which is $5.00. The letter continues:

Naturally this is a privilege which can only be extended to a limited number of players. However, the club realizes that the University of Toronto has no facilities for tennis and therefore has extended us this privilege.

If you wish to see the court or play on it before joining, you are at liberty to do so by phoning to the Eglinton Hunt Club and reserving it for the hour. You will, of course, have to pay court fees.

Should you wish to join the club, would you be good enough to send your cheque for $5.00 to Mr. J. deN. Kennedy, 320 Bay St., Toronto.

BLUE PUCKSTERS DEFEATED

the individual stars of either Toronto or Hamilton but are a much smoother working outfit than the favourites.

Varsity turned in a very erratic game. The only consistent man on the team was Shipp, who as usual turned in a stellar performance. This does not seem to tie in with the fact that eight goals were scored against him but at some stages the defence offered him no protection at all. Warren Stevens used a new second line with Devine, Kieff and MacLiquham forming the personnel. Devine and MacLiquham worked well together but Kieff did not seem to fit into the picture.

The Oakville team started with a bang and Varsity were hard pressed in the early minutes. After two minutes Percy Allen broke through and put the Lake Shore Hamleters in the lead. Still Oakville pressed and Shipp made several sensational stops. One of the prettiest goals ever seen at Varsity was scored by P. Allen when Townsley caromed the puck off the back boards directly in front of the goal. MacLiquham then placed Varsity back in the running by scoring twice within a minute. The first came via the solo route while on the second Devine fed him a beautiful pass.

To all appearances there was only one team on the ice during the second period and it wasn't Varsity. Although Oakville didn't score until the half-way mark was reached, they monopolized the play during the whole period. Their play around the goal mouth was near perfect and all of their five goals were well earned.

After the final rest period Oakville came on content to loaf. Varsity, however, gave due notice that the game was far from over and soon had the Villains hemmed behind their blue line. The play began to roughen and penalties weakened both teams. McLellan took a pass from Charles to open the scoring. With both teams playing a man short Oakville caught Varsity flat footed and Percy Allen scored his third goal. Oakville were further penalized and Varsity had five forwards on the ice. This piece of strategy netted two goals but the students were unable to further decrease the lead.

For Oakville, Cy and Percy Allen put on a great brother act, while Shipp was outstanding for Varsity.

Oakville: Goal, Forder; defence, Sutcliffe, Moore; centre, Townsley; forwards, Peer, P. Allen; alternates, Cassidy, F. Allen, Kitson.

Varsity: Goal, Shipp; defence, Rey, Campbell; centre, McLellan; forwards, MacPherson, Hendry; alternates, Charles, Devine, Kieff, MacLiquham.

Referee: Jerry Deniord.

ENGLISH & HISTORY CLUB HEARS OF NOEL COWARD

"Noel Coward holds the most conspicuous place on the English stage of today," stated Miss Margaret Robinson of U.C. at the meeting of the English and History Club, Tuesday evening. "In his dramatic technique he has done some of the most difficult and daring things." Miss Robinson illustrated this point by reading several selections from the plays of Noel Coward. His comedies give a picture of his age, emphasizing particularly the manners of the time. Even if his plays seem immoral and unconventional they give a true picture of the era he depicts. He is convinced that there is something radically wrong with our age, but does not believe it to be connected with virtue and vice at all.

Miss Robinson feels that Mr. Coward has already reached the peak of his dramatic ability and that he is definitely through as a significant dramatist.

HISTORY OF GOLD TOLD IN LECTURE

It covers a surface of almost a square yard. At oriental bazaars gold and silver lace is often seen. This is made by drawing the gold through a very small bore in a hard substance, like diamond or ruby, and the thread produced is then woven into lace.

Twenty-four carat gold is pure—a fourteen carat ring is fourteen out of twenty-four parts gold. White gold is made by mixing fifty per cent of silver with it. The purest gold ever found in the natural state was 99.8 per cent, but it usually contains much more silver or copper.

In times of depression, as now, gold production always rises, and is consequently a stabilizing factor, giving steady employment to many. When prices rose after the war gold production in the United States fell about 50 per cent, and Canada now stands in position of the second gold producing country of the world.

The Transvaal is unique in that it produces 45 per cent of the world's gold from one camp.

Gold in its original state was probably in solution in the molten material far below the surface of the earth. Near the surface the rock solidified and cracked—through these cracks the molten material rose, and in turn solidified. Consequently as the earth's surface wore away gold veins were discovered. These descend until a layer of granite is reached, below which none can be found.

SCOTTISH WAR MEMORIAL IS SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

Dr. Sclater of Saint Andrew's Speaks to Alumni Association

The Scottish National War Memorial was the subject of an address given by Dr. Sclater of St. Andrew's Church to members of the Alumni Association of the University last night at the Women's Union. Dr. Sclater is a graduate of Cambridge and has his degree of D.D. from St. Andrew's in Scotland. He was president of Cambridge Debating Union, which is an excellent indication of his ability as a speaker.

Illustrating his lecture with a collection of slides, he showed the beautiful structure dedicated to the memory of those Scottish soldiers who served during the great war. "The grey forbidding barracks situated on the brow of the hill in the city of Edinburgh, were transformed into something filled with heart and life," he stated. "The old barracks are still there with the original stones dedicated to the memory of Queen Margot, but they are changed into something which is a symbol of hope and peace and light, and the life that is beyond."

Dr. Sclater pointed out that the war memorial is not meant to show the exaltation of one nation over another, but rather to represent and preserve that spirit of love and sacrifice so characteristic of the Scottish soldier. "Although I am a man of peace," Dr. Sclater said, "especially since the war and I do not believe the cause of peace will prevail until people realize the full significance of their flag of liberty and until they are prepared to die."

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS DISCUSS HYDRO ELECTRIC

"The Development of a Hydro Electric Power Site" was the subject of an address given by Mr. O. H. Holden before the student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in Hart House last night. Mr. Holden has had a number of years experience in the work as assistant hydraulic engineer to the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission.

Salte for the power produced is the first essential in developing a power site. In addition extensive studies must be made of the rate of flow of the river to ensure that there will always be sufficient power available to supply the demand. Careful calculations are required to determine the most economical size, number and design of turbine units, water reservoirs, intake channels and countless other details.

Mr. Holden showed a number of slides of hydro developments which showed the features he was describing.

EDWARD JOHNSON SPEAKS ON MUSICAL EDUCATION

the slow growth of the opera through the centuries to the present time. Opera means words, music and action, combined with the use of art and painting, and is, in Dr. Johnson's opinion, moulding itself to meet the exigencies of the modern theatre.

"We need to develop a greater consciousness of what we are listening to. Listening is an art," declared Dr. Johnson. "The ideal listener should be absolutely absorbed in the work he is hearing."

"I am interested in the mass training of children who have musical ability," he continued. "Such training would open up new worlds of beauty and wonder. A sense of colour can be taught to colour blind children. In the same way could children acquire a sense of pitch. Education is not an exact science but an art, eternally unfinished. We are teaching children thoughts, but are we teaching them to think? Few academic subjects make for beauty and spiritual development as does good music."

Dr. Johnson spoke of the radio and films as two great forces which are doing constructive work toward culture and good taste in music. He also mentioned the work of the Toronto Conservatory, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and paid tribute to the Summer Symphony Concerts.

"I, as an artist and a Canadian, am interested in what is going on in the way of musical education. I believe that the day will come when there will be a well defined scheme of musical education in all the schools," prophesied Dr. Johnson, "from the kindergarten through to the University. Such a course would allow credits for music, foster greater interest, encourage talent and produce in Canada a musically cultured people."

VICTORIA FRENCH CLUB HOLD CHRISTMAS PARTY

The entertainment continued with the presentation of three of La Fontaine's "Fables". The first of these was the "Corbeau et le Renard", the second the "Coche et le Mouche", and finally the "Renard et la Cigogne."

The party became thoroughly informal as humorous French games were introduced, after which refreshments were served.

FACULTY MEMBERS TALK OF GENEVA DELEGATE

Members of the Victoria staff who were interviewed were on the whole favourable to the project. Professor E. A. Havelock stated that the greatest value to be derived would be in the message that the delegate brought back. He would gain a knowledge of student opinion on war in the countries of Europe. "Europe is far away," he stated, "and for this reason Canadian students lack a realistic appreciation of European problems. Direct contact, such as that gained in a personal visit, would develop a sense of student solidarity. It would make an anti-war movement on the campus intelligent and realistic," he contended. "No anti-war movement can be realistic which does not face up to the necessity for treaty revision," he explained.

"The trouble is that students don't belong to any definite class these days," continued Professor Havelock. "They are drawn from privileged and underprivileged alike. There is, therefore, no such thing as a united student voice on any problem. One interest they have in common, and this they don't realize, is that in time of war they are expected to do the dirty work. Generals and politicians have a habit of dying in bed," he concluded.

"Indeed they should," exclaimed Professor Arnold of the Department of Moderns, "and I wish that they would send more than one." It was his opinion that the greatest benefit to be derived from sending a delegate would come to the delegate himself in the way of wider experience. "It would be a decisive influence in his life," he said.

"But the greatest problem to be faced in sending this delegate would be to decide what sort of a pacifist meeting this would be," he remarked. "I have been to many anti-war conferences, and many of them have been quite useless and futile. On the whole I find Anglo-Saxon conferences much more to be respected for their serious outlook than continental ones. There are not so many faddists." However, he was of the opinion that an experimental connection would be useful if only for observation. He believed that it would take much longer than the short period of the conference to gain any realistic appreciation of European problems. "It would take them at least six months to do that adequately," he said.

it. To make the occasion even more auspicious, the Toronto Symphony had as its guest artist, Mme. Lotte Lehmann, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The orchestra opened the programme with one of Wagner's earlier works, the overture to Rienzi, leading the way with an impressive introduction to a vigorous allegro and continuing its march like progress with a wealth of colour and reinforcement. The opening strains of the cellos ushered in the beautiful "Forest Murmurs" from Siegfried. This excellent panorama of realistic orchestration displayed voluminous harmonic nuances which were handled with artistic finesse under the brilliant direction of Dr. MacMillan.

The expressive and poignant "Prelude and Liebestod" from Tristan and Isolde, in which Mme. Lehmann sang the "Love Death" song was received with enthusiastic applause. Tristan and Isolde, a peak in Wagnerian opera, written by the composer in a time of stress, displayed with emotional sequences, dreams of a higher and nobler love and its fulfilment in death. . . . here Wagner is again the philosopher. It is the most beautiful of Wagner's dreams. Mme. Lotte Lehmann displayed a voice of smooth lyric quality. Although at times, it seemed as if the orchestra had enveloped her in its dramatic climaxes. One cannot help but deplore the lack of accommodations, such as those provided by the Bayreuth Theatre, Wagner's glorious shrine.

Mme. Lehmann sang the "Dear Hall of Song" from Tannhauser, which, due to insistent demands from a delighted audience, was encoored with "Elsa's Dream" from Lohengrin. The majestic and pompous "Tannhauser" followed by the "Ride of the Valkyries" with its fierce war-cries and ecstatic descriptive orchestration, finished off a programme which may be chronicled as the highlight of the season.

Both defence lines were stronger. The Petrick-Brown combination plus strong U.C. defence, were almost too much for the Saints, who only had a one point lead when the quarter ended.

The St. Hilda's team went on to the floor in the final period with their regular lineup and got away to a good

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

New York, Dec. 12.—Queens of the North Atlantic, such as the Majestic, Paris, Conte di Savoia and Bremen docked anywhere from ten to twenty-four hours late today, sheathed in ice and telling of lashing gales and huge storms on the high seas. Many S.O.S. calls, some so faint as to be untraceable, were picked up by both ships and shore stations.

Havana, Dec. 12.—Army officers were discharged, constitutional rights suspended, pedestrians and vehicles rounded searched for weapons, as Cuba prepared today for a rumoured revolt.

London, Dec. 12.—The House of Commons tonight adopted a motion approving the government's plans for a new constitution for India, involving self-government with safeguards, by a vote of 410 to 127. A Labor amendment to the bill involving provision of eventual Dominion status for India, was rejected.

To add to the Christmas spirit of good cheer, various Christmas entertainments are being arranged by the Deans of the various residences. For the five Victoria College women's residences there will be a Christmas dinner in Annesley Hall, on Tuesday December 18, followed by a Nativity Play and carol singing. The men will celebrate separately, with a dinner for all residents of Burwash Hall. The Dean's annual Christmas party for the women of University College, with its Christmas play and carol singing, has already taken place at University College, but before the end of the term special Christmas breakfasts will be held in the various houses.

First Term Fees Must Be Paid

The Varsity has been requested by Sincere Hall to publish the following University regulation:

"Students must have paid the fees due in the first term before proceeding with the work of the second term."

It is the intention of the University authorities to enforce this regulation in all faculties. Students should, therefore, make the necessary arrangements for the payment of all fees for the first term before the opening of the second term on January 3rd, 1935, in order that they may be eligible to continue their registration for the second term.

ACTION DEMANDED

"The present plight of college papers may be blamed entirely upon the student lack of militancy. . . . Students are once more beginning to realize the value of free opinion. Rights they have lost will be more difficult to win back again. The one way to do this is to force the principles of undergraduate self-government to the point where this will be genuine self-government and that the student representatives will be out for student interests and demands and not mere figureheads."

This concludes an article entitled "The Death of College Papers" by Merwyn Marks, one-time associate editor of The Varsity in the December issue of The Student, the official publication of the Student League of Canada. The article discusses the events leading up to the suspension of three editors and "the loss of journalistic freedom from the four outstanding Canadian college papers," The Varsity, McGill Daily, The Ulyssey and The Manitoban. Mr. Marks discusses the occasions when "free speech" in The Varsity has been interfered with by the Students' Council at various times.

M. Wayman, in an article, "Students Fight War!", describes the Anti-War movements in various countries and urges Canadian students to send a delegate to the Anti-War Congress at Lyons, France, at the end of this month.

Editorially, The Student comments upon the Remembrance Day ceremonies asking that Armistice Day may be made "a day of protest, a day of action, an occasion for demonstrating an active wrath, not passive sentimentality." A further editorial deals with the questionnaire recently circulated by the International Student Service, finding fault with its "absolute passivity". Active anti-war propaganda and support of the international Anti-War movement are advocated.

The meeting started with a discussion of the financial situation and as it was found that the contributions received from the staff, students and interested citizens of the city already totalled more than $75, and more was coming in all the time, it was decided to send the delegate in any case. Modern cubism was the finale reached yesterday afternoon by Professor Alford in his series of talks on art appreciation. In the Sketch Room of Hart House he traced quickly the development which, beginning in the mid-nineteenth century, has produced eventually our modern "public objections".

About the beginning of the last century, stress was laid on emotionally exciting scenes, and some excellent work was forthcoming; but the movement later decayed, resulting in illustrations of purely literary interest—pictures of drab. There were various rebellions against this academicism; for instance, Manet and his school turned to contemporary subjects and interested themselves solely in "values"—that is, tones and colours. ## The Prep School

Are the Prep Schools in this province serving the public to the best advantage? Could they fulfil another purpose, other than their present one, to the betterment of the system of education now in use? These questions and other probable ones, if answered in practical terms, might be worthy of consideration.

In brief it can be said that the average preparatory school in this province was providing an education along with a valuable type of training for a privileged class of people who were prepared to pay well for it. Some social background is supposed to be taken for granted in these schools. A number of other artificial benefits are supposed to have been derived from these schools by the youth in attendance there.

Most of the better known institutions of this kind are, to a great degree, based on the disciplined English public school system. A few attempts have been made by schools, other than those of this type, to set up a modernized system based on psychological experiment to produce the best in scholarship and character without the supposedly obsolete discipline attempted in the others. Although these schools will not admit it, they are not providing the same quality of academic training that they did when times were better and funds and attendances were more plentiful.

Many of the people who were willing and able to send their children to these schools in previous years are no longer doing so, and to an expected degree. An alternative should be and might be discovered. The thought occurs that, in view of existing theories on education, these schools might be able to co-operate with the Department of Education to better materially the system now in existence. Experiments are under way in public schools of the city of Toronto, the Trustee Boards of which agreed to subject their children to these attempts. Further experiments are being planned and the prep schools could fulfil the need of material with which to work.

This idea may prove impractical due to the handicaps entailed in turning over the existing system in the prep school. However, under efficient management and with the necessary amount of oversight and control from the Department of Education, present fallacies in the matriculation system and other problems with which the Department is faced, might be adjusted. The solution of these difficulties, as a result of experiments attempted on a sound basis by the prep schools in co-operation with the Department, would be a contribution to the educational system and the youth of the province worthy of the greatest tribute.

Disillusionment

It is a sad moment in the life of a child when he becomes aware that Santa Claus as an individual does not exist. Hereafter the old Saint must be relegated to a corner of the brain; he becomes one of the many symbols historic and mythical which men use to express sentiments and emotions belonging to the human race as a whole. When Santa Claus ceases to be a real figure to the child and becomes the symbol of our Christmas spirit, then that child has received his first initiation into the realm of abstract idealism.

Santa Claus does not exist as an individual, but he does as a summing up of the whole spirit of the Christmas season. Christmas is the most conspicuous season when the invincible optimism of man expresses itself. Our idealism finds a concrete if belated opportunity of showing itself in action. We are very kind and condescending to the unfortunate poor; we make up baskets of food, we hold Christmas charity drives and spread sob stories over the front pages of our papers. Having done all we can in that direction we forget all about it and wonder who is to be mayor next year.

The child who has an ardent belief in Santa Claus has visions of a whiskered old man with a red suit and a jolly personality. The parents and department stores have seen to that. Even so the child has been exercising its imagination, on a physical object, 'tis true, and therefore on a lower plane than pure imagination. But why not? Does not even a grown man dream of possessing a million dollars? When his mind has been disillusioned he turns it to the realm of pure idealism—he transfers his idea of a personal and material Santa Claus into a universal spirit of Christmas kindness. But he is content to do his little bit to alleviate the temporary distress of the "unfortunate poor" and to sit down to hear the election results on the radio.

"The Poor ye have ever with you." There is no more damning indictment of our social system. What is our Christmas "idealism" but a shoddy sentimentalism. We deceive ourselves at no time more than when we try to cover our inability to face the real necessities of providing social justice for all by temporary expedients every twenty-fifth of December. Our children need to be disillusioned on more than their faith in a real Santa Claus. They should be disillusioned in their blind faith in human pseudo-idealism as well.

What Price Education?

As we rush around in a mad endeavour to gain that elusive thing called education, we often are reminded of that fussy person who rode along with Chaucer's pilgrims. There was no doubt that the sergeant of the Law was a busy person, and yet how Chaucer hit him off when he remarked that "he seemed bisier than he was." Or to come down to more modern times, Matthew Arnold in his calm detached way felt the great futility of much of our lives when he contrasted the present with that more ideal time of the Scholar Gypsy:

"Before the strange disease of modern life

With its sick hurry, its divided aims. . . ."

Since Matthew Arnold wrote these lines our life has been speeded up about one hundred per cent. We no longer walk; we run, ride or fly. And to what purpose?

Probably every intellectually curious young person, when he enters a university, thinks that at last he has arrived in the promised land; that here is God's plenty and that everything is his for the taking. But what he actually finds is this: the present trend in education is so highly specialized for practical ends that it develops those who receive it along one course only. We are all in such a rush to become business men, teachers, doctors, chemists and so on that we have no time to rove around in fields other than our own. Ask an honour English student to tell you something about heavy water for example, or a medical student how he would treat a dangling participle. How many students in Classics know anything about English that is not prescribed for them? Is it any wonder that we come up to graduation without much sense of poise, really at home only in our own field, and even there horribly conscious of our deficiencies.

We realize that talk is cheap and that criticism which offers nothing constructive is beside the point. We submit however that those who sit in the seats of the mighty and control the educational policies of our institutions are faced with problems vastly different from those that were vital to an age in which cultured men took all knowledge to be their province.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Hart House Theatre

The Crime at Blossoms, as presented by the Victoria College Dramatic Society at Hart House Theatre last night, was one of the best student productions that we have been privileged to see. The play, itself, was eminently suited to this type of dramatics. It is a satire with exciting climax at no times too farcical nor melodramatic.

The story centres about the morbid fascination of the mob for the gruesome. A murder in a country cottage is capitalized upon by a young couple in financial difficulties and the love theme is influenced by living in such an atmosphere. The climax is the product of the dramatist's ingenuity in bringing the two together again.

The cast maintained a high level of amateur acting with the four chief characters reaching their high peak in the last act. In the first act Helen Carscallen as Mrs. Woodman, the charwoman, gave a sound performance, slightly shading that of Vol and Chris Meryman, Leith Ferguson and Robert McRae, who warmed up to their parts in the second act.

Miss Ferguson and Mr. McRae combined with Charles Liffie, the Very Late Visitor, to produce a thrilling last act. The disintegration of the heroine's character was admirably portrayed by Miss Ferguson, who combined an attractive appearance with a sense of what her part required. Mr. McRae, after a shaky start, and despite a rather too youthful appearance, made a capable husband.

The character parts, while not distinguished outside the two mentioned, were on a higher plane than is usual in such a production.

"Oh, so you're waking up again!" the Head Gargoyle on the Bank of Commerce building drawled a hoarse whisper in the direction of the Clock on the City Hall Tower.

"Every hour I strike brings New Year's Day just that much closer," exclaimed the Clock, his voice full of fervid hope.

"Trying to kid yourself into enjoying the elections?" the Gargoyle sneered. "Believe me—you'll have the worst headache in town on New Year's Day. Four candidates for mayor already, and maybe Tim Buck, too!"

The Clock ducked, and that one flew over his head to land harmlessly in the parking lot behind Shea's.

"Remember the time Sam McBride called Bertie Wemp a coward? I've learned to take it, since then! This year's campaign will be a pink tea in comparison."

"It begins to look like it,—the way the Pink Tely is piling up the straw vote for that C.C.F. candidate."

"No," went on the Clock, "in spite of the elections this New Year's is going to be a big relief to me. When I strike twelve p.m. on December Thirtieth, Centennial Year 'will be over!'"

"Ah yes," the Gargoyle fondly sighed, "—Toronto, the Senile City in 1934,—I do recall that something has been going on."

"Recall?" groaned the Clock, "—will it ever be beyond recall? Do you realize that I have had to sit here in agony while they held reception after reception and passed out 342 Centennial Medals."

"—and a silver tea service for Mary Pickford!" added the Gargoyle.

Everybody is still talking about the basketball classic on Tuesday night. It certainly was a battle and the team that could come out on top of a contest like that well deserved the inter-faculty title. This game brings women's sports for this term to a close. Taken all in all it has been quite a successful season. Agnes Gardner won the tennis; Vic captured the baseball title; the golf tournament was a novelty event which aroused considerable interest and gives us hope that golf may some day become a recognized inter-faculty sport. Varsity only rated second place in the intercollegiate tennis, but hope to redeem this by retaining the Bronze Baby when the intercollegiate basketball finals come off in February.

Badminton is the next sport for us to be thinking about. U.C. have officially got under way. In the other colleges there has been a certain amount of individual practising. There are still about ten days for further practice before the holidays. Of course we realize that most people are feverishly trying to cover a term's work in these last few days, but don't forget: all work and no play, etc.

What is the general opinion about a Women's Ski Club or some such thing? The idea is quite intriguing and sufficient enthusiasm might produce results. Of course, as anyone who has arranged inter-faculty hockey games can tell you, the weather here in Toronto is a major complication for winter sports. Right now it seems quite promising, but unfortunately there is no counting on it.

Tomorrow we are going to have some definite and final work about the U.C. inter-year games—and remember they are hockey and not basketball. If you want to get in on them you had better turn in your names to the inter-year managers. (If you have managed to miss their names just glance at the Sports Notices.) The games are to begin at 12.30 at the Varsity Arena. These inter-year games are always a lot of fun, even if the hockey is not of the highest calibre.

Liverpool, England, Dec. 12—The second floor of the St. Clement's School concert hall collapsed tonight beneath the weight of hundreds of children and their parents who were attending a concert celebrating the end of the school term. 150 were injured, of whom thirty-six may die.

SEVEN KNOCKOUTS ENLIVEN BOXING IN JUNIOR ASSAULT

GIBSON OUTSLUGS GREEN

Crossley, Robertson, Houle and Bolter Successful in Mat Bouts

Seven knockouts, six of them technical, featured the first round of the junior inter-faculty assault, held in Hart House last night.

The only knockout came in the first round of the heavyweight bout when Scheffer slid to the floor after Poole had applied several hay-makers in professional style. Poole had dynamite in each hand, and the knockout was no fluke.

There were three technical K.O.'s in the 165 lbs. bout. Boyd earned two of them, flattening O'Brien and Bracken in impressive fashion. Bracken had previously defeated Byrne by a technical K.O.

In the 155 lb. bout, Megges wilted under a barrage of punches in the first round, giving Scandiffo the decision by a technical K.O.

In the wildest and fastest bout of the evening, Gibson outsluged Green to win a 135 lb. bout by a technical K.O. Kemp won a similar decision over O'Brecht in the same class. In the 125 lb. division, Millson out-pointed Williams in one of the best bouts of the night.

The wrestlers, for the most part, displayed real ability, and deserved more support than they received. The 155 lb. class provided some good bouts. Crossley won a close decision from Ostrowski after each had won a bout in two straight falls. After being eliminated in the boxing preliminaries, Robertson, at 135 lbs., showed good form, winning two straight falls over MacPherson. Houle and Bolter won 145 lb. bouts in impressive fashion.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Some time ago someone wrote a song entitled "I want to be a Yale man". We are not sure that the song was even written but at any rate they sing it in some quarters. While there may be relatively few men in this vicinity who share these sentiments, there are many who will want to see the Yale men, when they arrive here Saturday in their annual intercollegiate hockey tour. Most everyone is ready to admit that the country we occupy is of quite an age in a geologic existence. In view of this fact and in view of the fact that this is the second time in the geological history of the continent that Yale have played hockey here we must admit that this visit is something of an event.

However, while the Yale men may be here for a visit they are also here for another purpose. This purpose is to show Canadians that they can beat them at their own game. When they arrived here last season with this in mind, few people took them seriously, but the Elis went home with a 5-3 victory. This, of course, was somewhat startling, and rather humiliating to say the least. Varsity partially atoned for letting the Canadian flag fall by beating Yale in the return game when they in turn were visiting in the country of the Elis. Now the Yale team are back again and the result of the contest will be interesting. The U.S. team have not suffered greatly from graduation and still have a chap by the name of Snyder in goal who sees that they "do not pass". In fact, it was Snyder who played the hero role in the last encounter here. Varsity are stronger than last season, although the result could never be deduced by a survey of the statistics. All this means that they may win and then again they may not.

However, despite the result of the contest, there will be something achieved by the appearance of the U.S. college team on Toronto ice. College hockey will in the future occupy a much more important position on the sports calendar than it does at present. The international aspect will lend colour to the event which should have the Arena packed to the roof.

Last night's fistic carnival in the gym attracted some forty leather merchants, intent upon trading their wares with men of the same profession. The result produced an evening of rare action and some real old fashioned fights. True enough, the boys were supposed to be boxing but after the first few punches most of them forgot what the coaches had been teaching them for the past few weeks and reverted to the style they acquired when they went out to retrieve their stolen marbles, several years back. However, while none of the ambitious lads looked like serious contenders to Barney Ross' title, a few of them did look like contenders for the intercollegiate honors.

One of the things which stood out last evening was the fact that while the boxers could get a full house to watch them during the afternoon while the admission was free they had scarcely anyone but the fighters and seconds in the gym for the battles at night. The difficulty seemed to be that while no one objected to watching the boys fight, they did object to being assessed for watching them do it. The result was that they stayed away in large numbers.

MCCATTY BROTHERS STAR

Solitary Last-Minute Goal Avoids Shut-Out for St. Kitts

Last night in the Hart House pool the Varsity water polo team won an easy victory from the St. Catharines squad by a score of 8-1. The team from St. Kitt's were completely at sea in the big pool; along with this their shooting was very erratic around the net, and when their shots were on, Murphy could be relied on to spread his big frame in the way. The McCatty brothers were the whole show at the webbing and scored five goals; Wins was responsible for two pointers. Davey and Bancroft were on the sidelines due to colds and their places were filled by Hardy and Hooper. So far in this inter-city loop Varsity have returned victors three times and have tasted bitterness once.

Bruce Hardy opened the scoring for the Blue team when his close in shot had Baccot helpless. From then on all the scoring was done by the Jamaican brothers. Before the first half ended Cressy helped himself to four goals. Three of these were on brilliant solo efforts by the lanky centre star while Hardy was credited with an assist on the other marker.

Varsity continued to dominate the scoring in the second half. Wins, McCatty took his turn and bagged two counters in quick succession. Cressy

DAVEY, BANCROFT BACK

Next Saturday evening the return game of the intercollegiate water polo championship series will be played at Montreal. The McGill team secured a two-goal lead in the game here last Saturday, which makes the Varsity assignment that much tougher. The Blue team were below par in the first meeting and due to this were unable to cope with the sustained attack of the Redmen. Last year the team from the Quebec metropolis won the championship from the Varsity team and right now appear to be on the correct path to repeat the triumph.

The team will not be handicapped by a different size pool as the McGill tank is about the same dimensions. Nevertheless Varsity will have to play heads up ball all the way if they hope to overcome the two goal handicap facing them and restore the championship to the Queen City.

Davey and Bancroft, two regulars, who were kept in their street clothes last night for the St. Catharines game, due to slight colds, will be back in the game. All in all the game looks up as

In the first game the Medicals had a little difficulty in getting started and as a result the Red and White squad were able to keep up on even terms most of the way. With the score 9-7 the Doctors finally got going and registered the remaining six points to take the game. In the second tilt the Meds team travelled at top speed all the way and easily chalked the necessary points to eliminate the Jr. U.C. squad from further competition.

games, competing against the best teams in intercollegiate hockey. Something of an innovation is the manner in which the college squad go about their hockey duties. A month before donning the accoutrements of hockey the entire squad is put through a series of calisthenics under the eagle eye of Bob Kipphut, the well known Yale swimming coach. The utility of this is seen quite readily, in considering that Coach Holcomb York also has at his disposal Volody Carhart, Andy Gagarin and Warty Crocort, who should prove their mettle in Yale's offensive threats.

Last year in their appearance at the Varsity Arena the Yale outfit startled all and sundry by their clever demonstration of combination plays inside the Varsity defence area, which kept the fans in a high fever of excitement. Undoubtedly this game on Saturday looms as one of the most important on their schedule and the vaunted Yale Bulldogs will be out to add to their hockey laurels.

In Roger Shepard, Tom Rodd and Doug Robinson, the Yale squad have a very formidable forward line who proceeded to disappoint the Varsity hockey supporters in no mean fashion in their game here last year. Their second string line is composed of Colby, Cooke and Jimmy Mills. In Captain John P. Snyder, Yale have an outstanding goal guardian who has held a lease on that position during the last three years. Coach Holcomb York also has at his disposal Volody Carhart, Andy Gagarin and Warty Crocort, who should prove their mettle in Yale's offensive threats.

AN ANTI-WAR REPLY

To the Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

About a week ago, an article appeared in the editorial columns of The Varsity by Mr. Claude de Mestral labelling "Anti-War" an error. Mr. de Mestral holds that it is impossible for different political tendencies "to find any common philosophy of life out of which they will be able to build a positive programme." He concludes by holding that no hope exists for an Anti-War Movement "until it becomes the expression of a new life . . . which is not created by man, but is a 'given' of God."

Many of these statements contradict the very fact that the Anti-War Society exists, which it does. Mr. de Mestral points as proof the difficulties we went through last year in achieving a basis for working together. I was also a member of the Anti-War Society last year, and I would like to point out that the reason why there was this difficulty, in fact, why the Anti-War Society almost died last year, was because there was little serious effort to attempt to find a basis of joint action. All of our sessions last year were spent with senseless squabbling over whether or not the word "imperialist" (as contained in British Empire) was a communist word. Obviously under such conditions little progress could be made. (Incidentally, the statement that the editorial work of Anti-War, the paper published last year, was in the hands of the Student League is untrue, as Mr. de Mestral should well remember.

The experience of the International Anti-War Movement, which reaches almost every country in the world, absolutely contradicts any such statements. The composition, for example, of the Paris Youth Congress of last year, should be carefully examined by Mr. de Mestral. The fact that a Catholic Youth Movement in the Saar is calling an Anti-War and Anti-Fascist Congress for December 16, and that communists, socialists, pacifists, and any other "ist" you care to mention, are coming together to this Congress shows that it can be done!

What has been lacking up to the last few weeks is activity. Obviously if we fight around among ourselves, we are only helping our enemies, the war makers. But let us develop some real activity, and begin to arouse every student on the campus to the real and imminent danger of war, and we shall find that we do not have to wait for divine inspiration to really achieve what we are working towards.

and it seemed that the ideals of the conference met with the vigorous approval of the student body.

The purpose of the conference was outlined as an endeavour on the part of the various students of the world to ascertain the true attitude of the rising generation with whom they will have to deal when they reach a position of political responsibility. One of the best ways of preventing international bad feeling is to meet and talk with the people of other countries. As this is financially impossible for most of us the next best thing is to send someone to represent us and have him tell us what he has found out.

The delegate will sail with the American contingent of eleven from New York next Friday and so the committee has asked that contributions be sent to Mr. Woodsworth before that date.

The importance of the movement was emphasized by reading a list of the famous men and societies who are lending their support. The list includes the Society of International Lawyers, the Doctors Association Against V, the Methodist Student Organization, the Y.M.C.A., and the Y.W.C.A., and numerous peace movements in Holland, Sweden, Germany, Italy, Japan, Mexico, South America and many other countries.

Punsters Revel

The leader of the opposition, the Honorable Member from Coburn, then launched a violent attack upon the motion, to show that all through history the sword has been supreme.

"When faced with a difficult decision on the banks of the Rubicon, Caesar didn't shrink the issue. He didn't say, 'Let George do it,' or 'Rubicon do it,'—he went ahead and did it himself."

"Coming down from the mountains to be faced with the enemy hosts, Hannibal did not stop to sigh, 'So Alp me!'—he drew his sword and went at them!"

The Honorable Member from Peart then took up the affirmative banner. "After his eloquent address," he exclaimed, "I observe that our opponent is just a bundle of nerves."

"Suppose the Kaiser and the Czar were having a squabble over some Indian territory,—say the Punjab. The affair could be settled much better without the sword, for if the Czar charged the Germans with raising trouble in India, the Kaiser could reply 'Was you Czar Charley?'"

Here the Honorable Member from Joliffe again rose, on a point of order, to complain about the excess mirth of the House. "These Kaiser laughing too much."

"Why are Shakespeare, Dr. Johnson, Charles Lamb and Jack Benny all so famous,—because of their ability as punsters. Such fame they would never have attained by the sword,—for their lives would then have been too sordid."

The private business of the session was featured by a declaration pronounced by the Honorable Minister from Munro, that he and the Honorable Member from Cronin had launched a new political party within the house. "The Briar Pipe Party" stand for everything that is radical, and firmly believe, in the Habeshavian mood, all life is futile. The creed of the new party will be, "Briar Pipes ye shall know them."

student came and put the case before him personally, special consideration would be given to him. He would note the circumstances, represent the case to the President, who would deal with it with authority from the Board of Governors.

A new regulation last year required that the full fee be paid at the end of the Christmas term. This was given a great deal of publicity when some of the poorer students were unable to pay. The Student League interceded on their behalf. However, the University has a legal right to demand payment in the Fall term and students are expected to fill the contract that they automatically sign when they register at the University. When this was mentioned to Mr. Fennell yesterday he said that last year was the first that the payment of fees in the Fall term was strictly enforced, and this gave rise to criticism as any new procedure would. "Nothing has been said so far this year as far as I know," he concluded.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

artists are honoured by such diversity of opinion as was evident after his recital. It ranged from one extreme to the other; either you emphatically liked him, or you didn't—and quite as decidedly.

It may or may not be a sign of discrimination that we find ourselves among the ranks of the minority. But Moiseiwitsch was a disappointment. The programme itself was a challenge that not every pianist could meet. The difficulty of such a work as the Variations on a theme by Paganini is proverbial and the Scenes from Childhood present a problem in simplicity. Technically, Moiseiwitsch is able to toss off the most difficult things, but this ability in itself is no measure of a great creative artist. Naturally enough one expects and receives an exhibition of piano playing high above the average but then there is much more to be desired and expected of a great concert artist. The Toccata with which the programme opened, gave promise of some genuinely sympathetic and poetic playing. The Kinderarten showed no special insight into the sunny, romantic character of Schumann. The Carnaval seemed a mere caricature of the whimsical and colourful picturescenes associated in our minds with the gay and irresponsible Carnival extravaganza.

This review is not written thoughtlessly. When you consider the responsibility which any artist assumes as a special interpreter of Schumann and Brahms and the carelessness which typifies much of Moiseiwitsch's best work, some measure of criticism is invited. In all justice we must call attention to the piano which was poor, to say the least.

Massey Hall

La Argentina swept across the stage of Massey Hall last night and in the eleven brief creations chosen to exhibit her versatility, she rated and drew spontaneous and unstinted applause.

So successful were her varied character portrayals that practically every one of them had to be repeated before the delighted audience would release her. With lightning rapidity she dashed from a gawky Aragon peasant to the dignity and sophisticated Madrid courtesan of 1890. Between these two extremes in her always exhilarating art new colour notes were sounded with startling effect.

Endowed with unusual mobility of features, Madame Argentina made her every appearance a gem of character study and many of her numbers were those of a talented diseuse. Co-ordinating her natural grace with a delicious comedy flair which was the joy of the beholder, this mime reached a peak in "La Garterana", a peasant dance from the province of Toledo, which had international significance and appeal. The gorgeous costumes seemed to increase in sumptuousness with each number and the lithe figure of the dancer, who by the way, is possessed of the slimmest pair of ankles yet seen on any dancing stage, flashed through the dignity of the "traditional" or the abandon of the grotesque country wench with equal facility.

RESIDENT STUDENTS
CELEBRATE SEASON

According to Miss Cartwright, Dean of St. Hilda's, there will be no necessity for any Christmas celebration for out-of-town students, who would be unable to get home for the holidays, since any there may be are being taken care of by their friends.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

Chicago, Dec. 12.—The Burlington, Wisconsin, Liars' Club announced tonight it was offering a gold medal, studded with a sparkling diamond, to the world's biggest liar.

Washington, Dec. 12.—President Roosevelt asked a group of powerful federal and industrial leaders at the White House today to prepare legislation for the coming Congress which will take the profit out of war and assure orderly mobilization of American men and resources in the event of future conflict.

Anchorage, Alaska, Dec. 12.—"Hungry, need food and skis." That message, spelled out on the snow by branches of trees they had cut, brought rescue by air today to three men and a woman, forced down themselves by a blizzard, who had fought death and hunger for nine days in a tumble-down cabin.

ALFORD LECTURES ON MODERN CUBISM

ject existed as something that reflects light, and nothing more. Then there was Sisley, who attempted to give the impression of a continued reality in nature in addition to its perpetual flux; and van Gogh, presenting nature as a process. Cezanne painted a solid world, with stress on pictorial structure. A few slides served to illustrate how adept he was at creating unmistakable proportion into his work.

The outcome of the Cezannesque is cubism—which presents the structure and the colour of nature, without the nature. All art is selective interpretation; and long ago we got away from demanding pure photographic reality in painting—but not far enough away, most of us, to appreciate cubism.

426 College St.

By James Dunn

The 400 block in College Street is a gaunt row of old brick houses. They look for all the world like a weary file of old Civil War veterans on parade—great hearts in bodies that never break but just wear slowly out. And perhaps the oldest of these two and three storey buildings, yet certainly the most grand in its crusty dignified appearance, is the place where I eat.

Number 426 College Street is not just the same as the rest of those old-fashioned houses. No. 426 is not only the most disdainful of the poor days which have come upon it but has the least reason for its aristocratic air because it is indeed the dirtiest house in the block, and is the only one whose windows are entirely innocent of blinds or curtains. On the other hand, however, number 426 is unique in that its occupants wish you to enter their establishment, and somewhat diffidently attract your attention by a little sign hung in one of the front windows—

gOOD MEALS
25c

"Good" is spelled, as you may have noticed with a small "g" as if the writers were not sure whether the meals were really good, and as you stand looking at 426 you are rather doubtful yourself. But if you are like myself you cannot afford to indulge in expensive doubts and accordingly, stifling whatever fastidious misgivings you may have, you walk up the uneven, flag-stoned walk, past a few withered lilac bushes and push through a swinging screen door which is supposed to keep out the flies, but doesn't.

You find yourself in a small room which has no windows and whose furnishings consist of three rickety linoleum-topped tables, six chairs, and three pictures hanging on the walls. The wall is covered with a dirty paper whose chief color scheme appears to be a background of yellow (due to age) and a trickling of brown lines (due to water stains). You take your life in your hands as you choose the strongest-looking chair to sit on. You keep sitting a little while longer waiting for someone to appear or something to happen. No one comes and nothing happens. You look around the room several times trying to find something new to look at. You don't find anything. So for the sixth or seventh time you look at the three pictures. One of these is all by itself and endeavors to cover a rent in the wall-paper. The picture is a wonderful collection of luscious fruit—an apple, a pear, two or three bananas

Jessie's Kinda Dumb

Didya hear what Jessie done to Bert last week?

Jessie was brought up a good girl so she's kinda dumb and I guess it was too late when Bert found out he couldn't reform her. They was married already.

Well, anyway, Bert gets kinda sick of sitting' home nights, with Jessie messin' around hangin' on his neck and eecin' "Dya love me Bert?" So he says to me, "Jo," he says, "Let's throw a party. A real swell party. I'll be a hum-dinger!"

Well, we knowin' that Jessie ain't so keen on our kinda parties, because of she don't like licker, I sorta wondered how we could square up with her. Bert said he'd fix Jessie all right. He was goin' to tell her there'd be a lot of fellows in Saturday night for a Pink Elephant Hunt and they'd be makin' a awful row so she'd better go home to mamma for the week-end.

Well, that made Jessie kinda suspicious. She says she never heard of a Pink Elephant Hunt and what was they goin' to do to it. So Bert says "Oh never you mind. You're too young to know. When you got kids of your own they'll tell you better than I can." Anyway, we thought Jessie was all set to go home for the week-end and Bert laid in three forty-one bottles of gin and a lot of rye. He put the stuff in the bottom drawer of the dresser and locked it up for safe keepin'.

In the meantime Jessie figured there

Flight

First Prize, Serious Verse

By Dorothy G. Walker

There must be summer nights hot under starless skies,
White in the moon. Warm winds on water,
Swift feet on grass.

Dart under trees,
Hiding, pursuing, running in half light
Away from the world. Lie under trees,
Under the moon, under soft sounds
Swishing in grass. Clinging and clasping
Long and not looking upward but singing
Strong in our hearts. Clapping and singing
With touch growing stronger and sweet. Growing longer
The night, with us holding and clinging. Not always Like this: in a little time, hurried, at dawn.

Prescriptive Tradition

By Hiram Jolley

From remote antiquity people have felt it incumbent upon them to conceal their emotions. To cry is not manly, to yell is not ladylike. So that, by this time, we have hereditary diffidence, not to say physical difficulty, in showing emotion in speech or even in facial expression. And anyone who appears emotional, or even without decorous self-consciousness, in public is assumed to be trying to attract attention. This is not without advantages. If people habitually showed their feelings in their facial expressions, some horribly distorted visages might be developed. But the fact that we bind and restrain our emotions makes us no less emotional. And every emotion demands expression.

So equally antique methods have been devised, to express feelings privately, as it were, between one person and another, by the use of symbols or cryptograms. Such, for instance, is the handshake, which must have originally, and may indeed still express intense feeling. By the use of such mystical formulae, deep emotion may be expressed privately, in the midst of a great multitude. Unfortunately handshakes, and greetings, and other expressive courtesies, have been stabilized by wear and tear, and have come to be customary symbols of nothing, and are known as manners. Thus symbols which were originally used for private expression in a crowd, have been inverted in stabilization, and are used solely for their effect on the crowd, and in general, mean nothing to the individuals concerned. It is noteworthy that the English, who above everything pride themselves on their reserve, have also developed and still retain a very extensive code of decorous usages for all occasions. So extensive indeed, that an economist, presumably intelligent and more or less sane, has claimed that at the present time manners have no use except as a voucher for the great waste of time, and therefore the abundant leisure, and the abstention from useful effort necessary for their acquisition.

Good friends often see fit to dispense with even the barest minimum of decorous civility. For instance, here and there I can find boys who greet me with such remarks as, "You here again?", "I like to see you a long way off", and, "Drown yourself and give us a break". In which the reader will doubtless concur.

Side Show

By J. A. Macdonald

They informed the world some twenty times a day that she had a tail but I never was so fortunate as to see for myself. Throngs poured in to see and feel superior to the rude manners and appurtenances of the pygmies while I sold an infinity of tickets for the booth next door. I often wondered what she and her silent companions thought of the gaping crowds who passed in review before them all day. Probably very little. Like the captives in the zoo they were too preoccupied with their own boredom and meals to worry about the drab curiosity of the drabber frequenters of the midway.

She went by the name of Mary; why I never knew. Probably nobody could bother to find out and pronounce her real name. Bill was her husband and together with Hattie and Zeke they formed the main attraction of one of the innumerable little sideshows that made the midway. How they left their little African village I could not find out, but certainly they seemed to regret it now as they

Dear's End

"It doesn't seem possible that Ryck is dead."

"More than a year now."

"I know, but still rather incredible."

"No one would believe that he could die, even at the end."

"It wasn't that, Bertha. He did have an immortal quality you couldn't define. He was always so appallingly alive, living so much faster than anyone else, taking in so much more and making such improbable experiments with his own personality."

"That seems to have come rather close to you."

"Perhaps it did."

"Were you ever in love with Ryck?"

"Everybody loved him. You know that."

"No. It isn't true. They only wanted to be loved by him. Ryck's affections were so all-inclusive that it was a social stigma to be left out!"

"He didn't leave me out anyway!"

"You! You're pretty and bright and cheerful. Anyone would like to have you around."

"Ryck did."

"Sure he did. He used to tell me what a soothing vision you were to the tortured eye of an artist!"

"Just like him. You never knew how much he meant of what he said."

"I did, Esther. Or I wanted to believe he meant everything. People were sometimes afraid to take him seriously and he hadn't always the guts to be serious himself, but I knew what he meant."

"Were you in love with him Bertha?"

braved the damp, cold winds from the lake, clad in their second hand leopard skins, through the interstices of which could be seen eye glimpses of winter underwear, cast-off sweaters and such worn-out apparel as the very poor discard.

Every morning Bill and big Ike walk solemnly into the centre of the Halbard, the owner of the show, would midway and while the former performed a slightly censored version of the ancient tribal rites the latter would harangue the straggling forerunners of the mob of thrill seekers that would shortly overwhelm us. They would gather and the crowd that they formed would grow with its own momentum. Bill would perform with surprising enthusiasm considering the hour and the number of previous performances that lay in dismal procession behind him. When a sufficiently large crowd had gathered the affable Ike would shepherd them past the ticket sellers into the show. It was here, and here only, that the mystery of Mary's tail was expounded together with "other weird and fantastic rites of these strange people from the interior of Africa," to quote big Ike.

While the performance went on Ike always talked to them in their own dialect and translated their answers to the crowd. From what I could hear their language seemed to be extremely simple, consisting for the most part of single syllables that seemed to be continually recurring. I later found that this could be easily explained by the fact that Ike used the two words, rhubarb and asparagus, mixing them up until even he could not extricate them. The fact that he could not understand

Odysseus in Ithaca

By Frances Russell

(Odysseus, sleeping, is set ashore at Ithaca, and waking knows it not. Athena in the form of a shepherd approaches him and in answer to his questions tells him he is in Ithaca. Odysseus, glad at heart, conceals his joy, and pretends to be a stranger in the land.)

"Then this is Ithaca, I should have known!
Where else could joyous nature breathe so sweet?
Why, there's a kindly sun at last in heaven,
And here's an honest earth beneath my feet.
That road I know—it had a gate before—
High grass-banks march upon its either hand.
And at a turning, lean away to show
The castle set amid the meadow land.
There sits my lady in her fragrant hall
And at her loom bestows the silken thread
While shrill hope mocks her: "He will come to-day."
And doubt cries, "Never, never! He is dead."
And she has none to comfort, none to help;
Yet my tall son Telemachos is there.
Should he be strong for such a task as this—
Poor orphan, grown without a father's care?
And if his strength and hers were not enough?
O Zeus, be merciful! Let this not be!
Not my own will, but some untiring fate

Phobia Lyrica

By Dorothy G. Walker

Psychologists tell us that writing in verse
Is an outlet for morbid desire,
That incest and murder and rape and revenge
Are fountains of lyrical fire.

When passion's repressed, it's replaced by an act
With symbols significant fraught.
Most people see through it and do something else,
But the glib poet gets caught!

The average human when duly suppressed
Goes out on a spree, to his cost,
But Milton, exposed to a similar state,
Sat down and wrote "Paradise Lost."

If the poems of Marlowe and Herrick and Donne
Are escapes from symbolical hell
And Wordsworth is poison and passion and lust,
Then Browning's too awful to tell.

Conclusions will leap to the logical brain
And set every conflict at rest,
But none can imagine how cheerful I feel
At getting this crime off my chest!

A Happy New Year

OUR LITERARY GENERATION

When the publication of a literary issue is announced in a University which has more than three thousand students enrolled in Arts we should expect to be deluged with contributions. Instead we are fortunate in having the bare minimum with which to produce a literary issue. If you ask the reason people will tell you—too busy, term examinations and so on. But that is no excuse. If we were really literary-minded we should have dozens of efforts on hand, just waiting for an opportunity to have them published! The existence of The Varsity staff and of the Men's and Women's Press Clubs prove that there are many students interested in writing. Our interest does not go far enough, it seems. Where are our Shakespeares, our Miltons, our Dickens, our geniuses?

We read the biographies of great writers and are amazed at the quantity and quality of the work they did while still undergraduates at the University. Burke writing his Treatise on the Sublime and the Beautiful when he was nineteen. Keats and Shelley writing poems that made them famous before the age of twenty-five. Almost without exception the great writers of the past have begun their careers early in life. Apparently in those days, there were and perhaps still are in European universities, groups of students whose main interest in life was literature and they devoted all their energies to it. They read and discussed literature with spontaneous zeal, not driven to it by impending examinations.

What is the matter with us? Why have we no literary clubs devoted to great literature? Does genius burn no more? Is it because the present generation of youth is more immature than preceding ones? Are we too frivolous?

Along with the rest of this jazz-mad world, pleasure is our god. Our attitude towards writing is a utilitarian one. We write what we think the editor will publish. The editor publishes what he thinks the public will read. And there we are. If we were to write what genius dictated we would starve. And it is no longer fashionable to starve for genius. There was Thompson back in the eighteenth century, wandering around London with his "Seasons" in his pockets living on the charity of his friends, waiting for recognition. In the twentieth century he would get a job reporting for a newspaper and genius would soon be killed by drudgery. We are the victims of our age.

Official Logic

By Dorothy G. Walker

I find my state at college here
 Is quite anomalous.
 Far let it be from such as me
 To fret or make a fuss.

In nineteen thirty I arrived
 With Upper School 'eksams.
 Such folk as I'm, 'cannot waste time,'
 Said I, "And here I am."

"Four years of study is too much,
 There shall be only three."
 I bravely said and went ahead,
 The pass course is for me."

Embarked upon the second year
 With three in all, not more,
 This fact I found, though quite unsound
 I was in 374.

In struggling with curricula
 Most dismally I failed,
 Though it appeared that people sneered
 At what the course entailed.

In '31, the powers, I found,
 Had thought a bright new thought
 And would endorse a three-year course
 Just such as I had sought.

I had a second try at this
 And found it very good.
 The next three years I saw, my dears,
 My status understood.

The case of others in my year
 Grew muddled more and more,
 Though ifs and buts drove class-mates nuts
 I was in 374.

When '34 came round at last
 And time to graduate,
 The spring was fair. I did not care
 To work and sit up late.

Examination time drew near
 And still I didn't care.
 The dismal gloom in every room
 I met with blasé air.

My pals were shattered wrecks of men
 And in three weeks grew old.
 The candle, friend, burned at each end,
 Left me entirely cold.

The natural result of this
 Has puzzled me some more.
 We'll soon arrive at '35,
 I'm still in 374.

Rain

In the dead night
 Timid footsteps of the rain
 Followed me eagerly.
 Bird drifting veils of mist
 Hid from men's peering eyes
 What even stars cannot see.

So I hurried through the drifting dark,
 Until the rain's cold hands
 Reached out and touched my face
 And I was aware of life around me.
 Then I could see the yearning shapes
 Of trees
 Like twisted souls of men,
 Torn from their bodies
 And helpless in the night.

Year's End

"Maybe, I'm the only one who admitted that what I wanted most was to be loved by him. I've had my reward on earth and I'm not bothering about my immortal soul."

"We sometimes wondered what there was between you and Ryek."

"It sounds silly, but I couldn't tell because someone would have been jealous. I didn't want to anyway. It was too chisive to spoil like that."

The girls moved together under the big elm where they stood in shadow. Esther stepped on the remnant of a cigarette and leaned expectantly against the tree.

"Go on Bertha."

"There isn't much to tell really. At first I used to go to meetings and places where I knew he'd be, because I wanted to see him. After a while he used to telephone and say 'Are you going to such-and-such?' 'Well, I'd say, I was thinking of it. Are you?' 'I might,' he'd say. 'I had considered it.' Then we'd go and he'd get bored before the meeting was over and say 'Let's go and dance somewhere.' So we usually did. This was a long time ago, when I was in first year."

"He was in third year then?"
 "Yes, and would have graduated last year if he'd lived. Isn't it hellish that a bright kid like Ryek had to go? He was so improbable. There was a glorious uncertainty about what would happen next when Ryek was here."

"Nothing has ever been quite crazy since he died, has it? We all became suddenly old and sane."

"Yes, that was it Esther. Knowing that Ryek was dead was like learning there wasn't any Santa Claus. All the point had gone out of being young."

"Go on about you and Ryek, Bertha."
 "Well, that whole year was rather unbelievable. I don't know how we got through our exams. I used to go out to his house about ten o'clock when we were studying in May. We'd walk for miles into the country and come back at two or three and write exams the next day. I can't believe it now. Those were the happiest times I had with him. I wish we'd been married so that I could own up to it, but it was just as good."

You told me that no one loved him. Ricky, you shouldn't have died."

"You mustn't call him that. He never liked unauthorized versions of his name."

The girls moved off into the lighted street.

"Let's go and have a cup of coffee and a bacon sandwich, Esther. Lord, how I hate May!"

Down the Ice by Foster Hewitt (Reginald Saunders, Toronto) $1.50. The history and rules of hockey, interspersed by a series of anecdotes, by Foster Hewitt, the well known radio broadcaster for General Motors hockey broadcasts.

Mr. Hewitt speaks from experience, and his comments on all angles of the game bear the earmark of authority. The book makes interesting reading for anyone, although it is primarily something of a textbook on hockey. Starting with a resume of the game's origins, and some of its stories, chapters deal with the trophies of the hockey world and their holders, the Olympic games, hockey's possibilities for the players, and the radio broadcaster's slant on the whole question.

The book makes interesting reading all the way through, and can be recommended for anyone who has any interest in the game, or, for that matter, in Mr. Foster Hewitt.

BASKETEERS LEAVE ON AMERICAN TRIP THIS AFTERNOON

Promise to Make Up for Defeats Suffered Last Year

STILL UNDEFEATED HERE

This afternoon, eleven of Varsity's basketball stalwarts will leave the campus in search of international honours when Lew Hayman's Senior Blues depart for exhibition games with teams of Niagara Falls and Buffalo Universities. A departure is being made from the practice of the past few years of making one long trip in that this year the squad will make two short excursions across the border. The next trip will be made in January.

Hayman's undefeated squad will this year attempt to avenge some of the defeats they suffered on their annual trips as they are the strongest Blue team of the past few seasons. Last year the Varsity aggregation were just nosed out of a victory in Niagara Falls and with their added strength this year it seems that they will succeed where they failed last year.

The game in Buffalo promises to be the better of the two to be played as the Blue squad are determined to make up for the overwhelming defeat that the Buffalo Bulldogs handed them on the last Varsity visit.

The Blue and White squad will be made up of Gold, Connelly, Bodrug and Gordon on defence; Meagher and Munroe at centre and Crowley, Levy, Newman and Meneel on the wings.

This being the Literary Issue, we have just had our face lifted, brow and all, and are holding our own poetry contest.

First Special Consolation Honourable Mention goes to Vertigineuse. Her poem:

There is just
One place
On all of the Campus that Makes me hope no-one I Know is nearby
The Meds Building Stairs
Are the place I refer to; I'll Stop for a Breath half way up
And tell why.

Ordinary stairs just go
Up and down in two's you know.

I have been used to
One pattern in all my stairs
And feel ludicrous
At this state of affairs
Having learnt finally with Grace and dignity how to start climbing
When I have been walking and How to sail on at a dignified clip
Hard it is learning
To hoppy skip.

First Special Consolation Dishonourable Mention goes to Mundusvult Decipit. His horrors:

For the sake of the peace of mind
Of the young impressionables
I deplore the graphic displays in the ads for unmentionables.

Why is it that vacuity
Expresses itself so often in feminine beauty?

Mr. Deely waxes romantic to his even greater degree in his charming study of the Christmas spirit.

THREE KNOCKOUTS FEATURE ASSAULT

Intercollegiate Chances Bright as Juniors Show Plenty of Action

The final bouts of the Junior Intercollegiate Assault held in the gym last night showed that Varsity will be represented by a strong team in the Intercollegiate Assault which is to be held at Queen's in February.

Two knockouts and one technical knockout were the main features of the boxing bouts. In the 126 lb. division Millson knocked out Taylor in the first round with a terrific right to the jaw. Gibson in the 135 lb. class had little difficulty in subduing Kemp in the second round, stopping him with a severe wallop around the heart. The heavyweight bout featured Pocius, a 205 lb. man, and Kiriln, a slight 275 pound boy, Pocius winning a technical K.O. in a minute and ten seconds.

The 118 lb. bout produced the best boxing of the evening. Carmichael obtained a very close decision over Piddcock. Burke in the 165 lb. class, had little difficulty in obtaining the decision over Boyd, also Poole over Simmons in the light-heavy bout. In the wildest bout of the night, featured by wild punches and haymakers, Finlay got the nod over Kaufman.

Although only one wrestling bout was won in straight falls, the grappling artists on the whole look very promising. Houle in the 145 lb. weight, won from Bolter with two falls. Zachanko and Archer in the 165 lb. class, put on the best bout of the evening, going to a draw in overtime.

REGISTRAR SINCE 1922

The flag over Victoria College flies at half mast today, a mute symbol of the sorrow felt by the students and faculty of the College at the death of Professor C. E. Auger, registrar of the college and Professor of English, who died yesterday morning. Victoria undergraduates feel keenly the loss of this revered gentleman whom they regarded in a very real sense as a counsellor and friend.

Professor Charles Earl Auger was born on his father's farm near Elora on May 2, 1877. His education was secured at the Elora High School and the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute. After three years spent in teaching public school, he entered the University of Toronto, registering at Victoria College and graduating in Honour Moderns in 1902. Following graduation he taught in Washington and Jefferson College and in Pittsburgh, Pa., and pursued post-graduate studies in the University of Chicago.

He returned to Victoria College in 1907 as Lecturer in English, and for twenty-seven years as Lecturer and Professor he had a large place in the life of the College and the University. Though a sound scholar, of wide reading and interests, he shrank from public display, and his great work was done in the classroom. In January, 1922, he succeeded Professor A. L. Langford as Registrar of Victoria University. From that time a considerable part of his work was administrative. By thousands of students he will be gratefully remembered as adviser and friend, and by his colleagues in the University of Toronto as a wise and far-sighted counsellor as well as a delightful companion.

He was a member of the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church and of the Scarborough Golf and Country Club.

In 1908 he married Lillian Pearl Smith, a graduate of Victoria College, also in Honour Moderns, of 1903. He is survived by his wife, and two sons, both attending the University of Toronto, Wilfrid Johns in sixth year Medicine, and Eliot Mighton in fourth year, Victoria College. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Auger and three brothers and a sister also survive, all residing at Elora.

The funeral will be held from the Chapel of Victoria College at 2.30 p.m. on Saturday, December 15th.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Toronto Conservatory

Last night, the Conservatory String Quartet presented the third recital in its concert series. The programme opened with the Schubert Quartet in A minor, Op. 29. Schubert was essentially a song writer and in this charming quartet he achieves, through sheer melody, the heights of song. It is a work pulsing with sweet sentiment; although it seemed to the writer that the players being in a happy mood, were waging a conscientious struggle to get in sympathy with it.

The quartet in C major by Gordon Jacob, contemporary English composer, thrust the audience, rather abruptly, from a spirit of Romanticism into one of intense Realism. This quartet is really a brilliant work, displaying strong rhythmic sequences and beautiful harmonic progressions which rose to a point and seemed to break up into a mass of varied colours. The structure differed from the other numbers on the programme, inasmuch as the Scherzo preceded the slow movement. However, the players took hold of this work in a most enthusiastic manner and delighted audience responded likewise.

The Haydn quartet in G minor, with its characteristic folk-songs and charming good-natured humour was rendered most delightfully.

Decide To Cancel School At-Home

School At-Home, one of the major social functions of S.P.S. will be dropped from the social calendar, according to the decision of the Engineering Society at a meeting yesterday afternoon. The reason given was that the party has always been subsidized by the Engineering Society, and that the party was largely patronized by other faculties. The Society felt that the money would be better expended in improving School Nite and the Graduates Ball. It was decided to admit the first, second, and third years to the Graduates Ball at cost, in order to compensate for the cancellation of the School At-Home.

SCHOOL EARN LEAD IN LACROSSE FINALS

"Stew" Murray Shoots Ten Goals as Engineers Trim Vic, 14-12

Thanks to the sensational play of "Stew" Murray, S.P.S. will carry a two-goal lead into the second game of the interfaculty lacrosse finals. The final score of the first game was 14 for School, and 12 for Victoria, and Murray's blazing shot accounted for no fewer than ten of his team's goals.

No individual player monopolized the scoring for Victoria, but McClelland with four goals and Thompson and Clipperton with three each were very effective on the attack. The four goals which Murray neglected to score for School were divided equally between Walkey and Brough. At that, Walkey was more of a hindrance than a help to his team as his petty displays of temper brought him three well earned penalties.

S.P.S.: Goal, Stroud; defence, Atkinson; centre, Murray; rover, Rule; home, Walkey; subs, Newman, King, Brough, Ballag, Breaky.

Victoria: Goal, Dickie; defence, Dyke; centre, Clipperton; rover, Wilkinson; home, Young; subs, Thompson, McClelland, Bently, Burgess, Robb.

WARDEN'S CHRISTMAS DINNER

As in past years undergraduate members of Hart House, who live in countries other than Canada or in distant parts of the Dominion and are thus unable to spend any part of the Christmas vacation at home, are informed that they may enter their names at the Warden's office for the Christmas dinner at Hart House on Thursday, 20th December. The Canadian Singers have kindly offered to sing carols after dinner and the Warden will have a small gift for each man present.

Any member intending to be present is urgently requested to signify his intention to do so by informing the Warden's office as soon as possible as it is obviously difficult to arrange the dinner and to know how many gifts are required unless the number of guests is known in good time.

Great Struggle Anticipated
as Elis and Blues Meet Tomorrow

YALE TEAM STRONG

By B. J. McGuire

The ever extending frontiers along the battle fronts of international hockey will tomorrow night bring the Yale Bulldogs into conflict with the University of Toronto Blues at Varsity Arena. The campaign of the Elis will lead them first to McGill where they will meet the Redmen, and then by a rapid march they will be in formation again Saturday evening for the second international intercollegiate hockey game in the history of Varsity Arena.

In the early history of hockey it was customary for McGill to encounter several American college teams annually in the Canadian winter pastime, but as time went by hockey in Canada, like football in the States, progressed and digressed to such an extent that these contests became impractical. The rebirth of hockey in the American colleges has again made it desirable for contests of an international nature and the Yale game here Saturday night is the result. This second appearance of the Bulldogs on the Varsity battlefield may lead to the formation of a definite intercollegiate union, in which the Canadian universities will be grouped with several of the outstanding American universities.

When the Yale team take the ice on Saturday night they will be almost as strong as the club which turned Varsity back in the initial contest here last year. They have been subjected to an extensive training course, which although differing slightly from the method employed here, appears nevertheless to be equally effective. They have a decided pull in weights but the Blue team should nullify this with their superior speed.

As for Varsity they are ready for the game of the season. Victory starved for several weeks, they need a win tomorrow night to start them along the trail which leads somewhere in the hockey world. They will be at full strength, with the exception of Fullerton, who has been out of action for the past week with a broken leg. The rest of the boys are playing better hockey every game and with a reasonable share of the breaks will be the equals, at least, of the Yale team.

JUDGES REPORT

A feature of this year's contributions to the Literary Issue of The Varsity was the large amount of serious verse submitted, and the great scarcity of humorous prose. In view of this fact, it was decided by the judges to award only one prize for humorous prose, and to transfer the second prize money to serious verse. In the opinion of the judges, the best prose article was "Side-show," submitted by J. A. Macdonald, and the second prize was awarded to Hiram Jolley for the article entitled "Prescriptive Traditions." In the field of humorous prose, the first prize was given for the article "426 College Street" by James Dunn. There was no second prize awarded, but mention must be made of "Jessie's Kinda Dumb" by Miss Dorothy Walker.

Miss Walker was also successful in winning both prizes for poetry, with "Flight" and "Phobia Lyrica." The second prize for serious verse was awarded to "Odysseus in Ithaca" by Frances Russell.

It was not without some hesitation that the prize for humorous prose was awarded since there was not a great deal of material to choose from. The conclusion of "426 College Street" was rather threadbare, and in spite of its facile realistic conversation, "Jessie's Kinda Dumb" lacked point. In connection with the poetry awards, the judges found that too many competitors seemed to believe that humorous verse and doggerel are synonymous. Although a considerable amount of serious verse was submitted, much of it was conventional in a sentimental way. "Flight" seemed more skillful than the others, while "Odysseus in Ithaca" was more individual, and "Personal Astronomy" very neat.

The number of entries in the Art section was not so large as was expected, but some of the work was of very high calibre. First prize for a sketch of a general subject goes to a design by Jim Kemp which appears on Page 1. R. E. Haist was awarded first prize in the Campus section for his sketch of Hart House tower. In both departments the second choice was so close that the entries are reproduced in today's paper. In the opinion of the judges it would improve the general level of the art submitted if there were more attention paid to original design, and less to mere realism.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

With this issue The Varsity will close for the year. And with this issue we on behalf of the Sports staff, take the opportunity of wishing one and all a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

We wish, also, that Varsity would start winning some hockey games. If they start winning Saturday night against Yale, so much the better. Incidentally, the game starts at 8 p.m., and not at 8:30 as previously announced. The Elis have to catch a train out of town.

When this column again appears it will be 1935. And we hope that some time in 1935 Varsity will choose a captain of the hockey team. To date no such arrangements have been made. In our limited experience we always found that a captain of any team was a good idea.

So once again we wish the compliments of the season to the boys who have faithfully supplied us with deeds about which we could write, and above all to the boys who were brave enough to read that which we wrote.

Mr. Frank Hemmingsway, director of The Crime at Blossoms, (which, by the way, is being produced at H.H.), is reported as recovering from a severe shock received during the second act last night. One of the men in the cast (whose untimely and violent death is here predicted, remarked to Mr. Hemmingsway, "Didn't Valerie cough it up nicely when she tripped and fell in the second act?" "What?" he shouted, "She didn't—" but the gentleman in question had decided to get away before the shock wore off. (P.S. Valerie didn't t. and f.)

Well: our space has gone. And now the Champus Cat wishes to express its appreciation that its nine lives have been allowed to remain almost un-molested for a whole term. ## Side Show their answers did not seem to disturb him, although the general consensus of opinion along the midway seemed to be that they were highly derogative of Ike and his immediate ancestors.

It seems self evident that anybody who works for fifteen hours a day should have little or no private life, but the people who follow the side shows have time for everything. After the show is over and the crowds are long in bed the night life of the shows goes on. Innumerable "bones" bounce upon the floor, bringing temporary fortune or a continuation of poverty to their backers, the fantastic, uncouth courtship of the sideshow is carried on, articles disappear into the night to reappear in pawnshops or about the persons of strange owners. And it was through this strange wilderness on the borders of sanity that the African pygmies wandered in their unobtrusive way. Like little children they played among themselves.

One night, when I was walking down the midway after the booths had closed down, Bill and Zeke came bounding out of their sleeping quarters, disputing over some article in their possession. They rushed up and showed it to me. It was an old ukelele, probably discarded by one of the nigger shows and picked up by these sons of the jungle.

"Zeke—he broke—pull too hard," painted Bill.

"No, Bill didn't. It go bang." And in truth the remaining string was broken. I substituted an elastic and they rushed off in ecstasy, both plucking at the new string and chuckling at the rather sour twang that resulted.

The next morning I stopped to watch Ike and Bill performing their daily morning rites in the street. Ike was just finishing his never varying spiel.

"—and on the African hills this weird performance takes place every morning. The tailed people seek the favour of their savage jungle gods. Each and every morning they pray that the Gods will send them game to fill their empty stomachs, for these uncivilized savages are always hungry. Every night they gorge themselves on raw meat. Try as we might we cannot break them of the habit. Moonog will now show you how they propitiate their Gods. Rhuasp barbrhu agras baru Moonog," he murmured to Bill confidentially.

Bill placed a small tree trunk, that had been hollowed out, on the pavement and danced round it, kicking up his heels. At every kick his leopard skin bounded into the air to disclose his old gray sweater coat, bound together with safety pins. As the dance concluded his mutterings grew less and he sank prostrate before the log. I saw the goose pimples run up his legs. His legs were thin, thinner than the legs of a corpse that had been dead for some months. I left hurriedly.

It was that afternoon that they took Hattie to the hospital. She had been coughing continuously ever since the weather had turned colder and had collapsed during one of the evening performances. I looked into their tent late that night and saw the three of them huddled in front of their electric heater. Their faces looked sad and scared from the mirror before them. They were muttering among themselves and their bent backs seemed to carry all the woe in the world. I wanted to comfort them as one would want to comfort an old dog that was lonely and frightened but could think of nothing and left them sitting there. In the next wagon some Alabama niggers were shooting a furious game of craps.

During the next few days depression reigned supreme among the sons and daughter of the jungle. A friend of mine who saw their performance said that he seemed to feel something frigid in the air. And from the infrequent glances that I had of them I realized that this rather flowery description suited the situation exactly. It was not only the fact that they were scared and bewildered that struck me, there was something else. A strained atmosphere, and a coolness in the glances that Bill and Zeke tried to keep from meeting, was easily apparent. And there was a spirit pervading their savage dances that had been absent before. They weaved madly in and out, their thin voices miraculously swelling and taking on a dignity that they had never known outside of the jungle. Crowds stood entranced, swaying to the rhythmic tom-toms and applauding madly at the end of the performances. Business was booming as never before and Ike could scarcely contain his raptures. He doubled their portion of oatmeal and the extra fare seemed to go to the heads of his performers. They sat every night and crooned sad little melodies before the electric heater until irate sleepers turned out in force to suppress them. And day by day their fervour increased until the two men were suggestive only of maniacs while the woman was little better. They no longer asked when Hattie would return. They seemed to have forgotten her.

One night, a week after Hattie had been taken away, I happened to be walking through the midway about an hour after the shows had closed. I stopped in front of the pygmy wagon to listen for a minute to their eerie crooning. The low wailing grew louder as I listened and an angry undertone began to creep in and rise in maddening crescendo. I watched their shadows against the canvas top of the wagon. They were two, one fat, the other lean. I gathered that Bill had withdrawn his mate from the proximity of his rival. Suddenly the chanting was broken by a long roar. Two shadows grappled in the midst of the wagon.

I shouted for aid to whoever might be near and plunged into the tumult. It was a strange sight that met my eyes. The woman sat in one corner submissively waiting for the victor to claim her. The two men circled round each other for all the world like two embattled dogs, clashing short clubs in their hands. Their eyes were bright with the brightness of diamonds and their bodies were strained and eager with the joy of combat. As I entered they faded out through the other end of the wagon and were lost in the night. We could hear their savage cries as they unaccounted amongst the wilderness of tent-rope and excess baggage that littered the rear of the shows.

If this were a story of adventure I could tell of how we hunted them through the night, of how their blood-curdling cries awakened all who had ever heard, of the mad confusion that reigned supreme among their sleep-drunken pursuers. To my dying day I will remember the moment when a big coon knocked me down and proceeded to massacre me, the crazy wailing of the half-mad Mary, and a host of incidents too numerous to mention, but enormously important at the time they took place. Sufficient to say that the embattled pair were at last captured, neither much the worse for wear.

The next morning I arrived late, and to my amazement saw Bill and Ike performing their morning ceremonies in the same old fashion of a week ago, and put away in safety for the night. Bill gave the same impression of entering into the rites with rapture, but the performance was dead. Ike noted my amazement and as he pushed his audience up to the ticket-celler's booth he grinned at me.

"Hattie came back this morning." That night the shows were dismantled preparative to moving on to another city. As I walked among the disintegrating debris I noticed the forlorn figures of the pygmies sitting dimly among the ruins of their show.

To-night there was no hint of frenzy, not even a sign of interest from any of them. Bill seemed to have forgotten the paramount importance of Mary while the three of them listened quietly and with no show of emotion to the story that Hattie told of her adventures in the hospital. They had discarded their leopard skins—Ike had a very economical turn of mind as far as his performers were concerned—and were shivering in their cast-off sweaters and other clothing.

(one green), some grapes, two oranges, a grapefruit—though it may be a lemon. All this is on a plate the size of a tea-cup saucer. The other two pictures are large gilt framed affairs which portray Sweet Lucy at the age I would have.

of ten years and again at eighteen. One expects another picture showing Lucy "With Her Baby at Her Breast" but apparently Lucy never married or else suffered an early demise. At any rate there are only the two pictures. It is very sad.

After looking at these objects of interest for the eighth time I ventured a little cough, then a scraping of feet. This produced results, for from some place in the back there came scurrying a bewildered looking little female who asked, "Do you want something, sir?"

"Why yes," I replied, "I suppose I do; I want something to eat."

"Yes, sir. Soup?"

"What kind of soup?"

"Oh, just soup, sir."

"All right, bring me soup."

So I had soup. But it wasn't "just soup." I don't know yet what else it was.

After I had finished my soup the little waitress (who had a run in her stocking and I hate women with runs in their stockings) enquired what else

"What have you?"

"Meat."

"What kinds have you?"

"Oh just the one kind."

"All right, bring me some meat."

So she brought me the one kind of meat. I couldn't tell what kind it was and I had to take her word that it was meat. I hope it was the only portion of its kind in the world.

Then came the time for dessert.

"What pies have you?" I asked.

"Two kinds, sir. Apple pie."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Well, one kind is yesterday's and the other is to-day's."

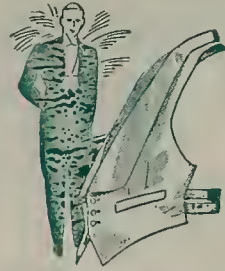

I ordered "to-day's" and soon wished that they had had a third kind—"to-morrow's."

I was then asked whether I preferred tea or coffee. "Tea for me, please," was the answer, and as I drank it I had to admit that at least the tea was good.

"That was a fine cup of tea," I remarked as I was presented with my bill.

"Fine tea, sir?" I didn't know you asked for tea. That was coffee you had."

A Caution to Homemakers

J. N. HARRIS

Lady, I've been thinking, since you sew so well,
You'll be sewing Yuletide tokens 'gainst the gay Noel,
So sew some silk pyjamas, and knit some braced socks,
And embroider fancy slippers for your Papa's Christmas box,
But to save some grave annoyance let me be your willing guide,
And always put the buttons on the right hand side.

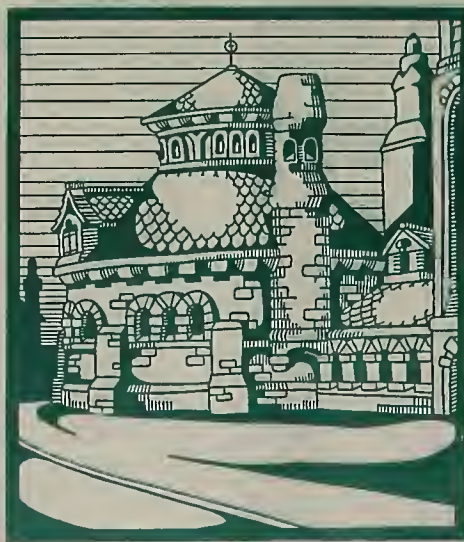

For the colors can be clashing (even orange, blue and green),
And the size can be outrageous, the design can be obscene;
But how futile are pyjamas (though the string stays tied)
If all the buttons button down the left hand side?

Once you knitted me a sweater-coat with white and scarlet bands,
And made a braided smoking jacket (with your own dear little hands),
But with female ingenuity (though you laboured hard and long)
You made them both effeminate. Egad, you done 'em wrong!
While the craftsmanship was excellent and worthy of your pride,
You went and sewed the buttons down the left hand side.

Shirts can overreach our arm length, they can gall us round our necks,
But they must conform to customs of the muscled bound sex.
'Tis a law, convention, practice, that must never be defied
That buttons all should button on the right hand side.

Now on double-breasted suit-coats and on overcoats as well
You will find some left hand buttons just beneath the left lapel,
But a left hand couldn't work them, for they're quite a useless fake,
And they're situated solely for the decoration's sake,
But a man can have no use for them; in fact, he can't abide
That a button should be elsewhere found but on the right hand side.

For his fingers are incapable of unaccustomed tasks
And a wench who bungles buttons really knows not what she asks;
My advice is quite gratuitous; let the knowledge be applied
And let me NEVER see a button on the left hand side.

The Needy Poet Complains of His Muse

Dear Muse, I must sack you; it's tragic, but true;
You've gone out of date; I'm afraid you won't do.
There was—I'll admit it—a time when you paid,
But that is long past and my purse is decayed.
You taught me to herald the obvious spring—
You're no good at all at the new sort of thing.
How can I shove all my rhythm awry
And you dancing there with your face to the sky?
How can I shout about garbage and slime
And you singing softly a daintier rhyme?
Your dancing, your singing, the editor mocks;
I'll get me a dodecahedron that squawks,
And she shall command me, and under her rule
I will rise to the top of the Unpleasant School.
Yet wait . . . I shall keep you to gladden my heart,
But mind, you must not interfere with my art.
O Muse, Lady Muse, when Necessity presses
Why must you come in Kate Greenaway dresses?

"Oh well," says Jessie, "it don't pay to be dumb all the time, and I wouldn't mind some fun myself." So every-

Jessie kept askin' Bert what was a Pink Elephant Hunt, but he didn't tell her, so Saturday come and the gang got together at Bert's and, as far as we knew, Jessie had gone home to her mother's. When the crowd was all collected Bert says "Well boys, I guess we better introduce the life and soul of the party," so we raised a cheer and the whole works trooped upstairs to get the bottles. We stood lookin' at the bottom drawer of Bert's dresser, kinda reverent, with him tellin' us everything that was in it.

"Been locked up for three days," he says, gloating.
"Say, you dope, that drawer ain't locked," says I. "Its sticking out a quarter of an inch," and so it was.

Bert looked at me and I looked at him and he felt in his pockets for the key and it wasn't there.

"I guess we better look into this," he says, and pulls open the drawer. Upon my soul, there wasn't a bottle in it! Only a little hunk of paper that said,

"Dear Bert—I found out what a Pink Elephant Hunt is. It's like a Wild Goose Chase—Your loving Jessie."

The funny thing is that out here we can't get anylicker after eight o'clock. Jessie's kinda dumb.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Barrie—Seven fishermen were marooned yesterday on storm-tossed Lake Simcoe in sub-zero weather. The ice on which they had been working suddenly loosed itself and carried the men far out into the open waters. Lifeboats were sped from Toronto, and planes are ready to leave Camp Borden as soon as weather conditions permit.

Flemington, N.J.—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh told their version of the tragic kidnapping before a hushed court last night, as the trial of Bruno Hauptmann for the murder of Baby Lindbergh proceeded.

Ottawa—Premier Bennett officially announced radical departure from the traditional Conservative policies of catering to big business. Recognizing the evils brought to light by the Stevens Commission, he is appealing to the labouring man and the technical expert for support in the coming elections.

Bermuda—U.S. coast guard fired on a British liquor-laden motor vessel. Conflicting stories came from the two ships but radio messages from Washington ordered the British ship released.

A new highway relief programme was announced yesterday from Queen's Park. Two thousand men are to be put to work within ten days according to cabinet ministers Croll and Heenan. The new road from Peterboro to Pembroke forms a major link in Ontario's highway system.

REALISTIC TREND IN YOUTH DENIED

Librarian Doubts Science, Politics Replacing Fairy Tales

The contention of a speaker at the American Librarians' Convention, last week, that "Modern youth scoffs fairy tales for realistic books on science and politics," is questioned by Miss Walker, librarian at the Boys' and Girls' House, St. George St. This statement definitely does not apply to Toronto children, she declared, and the old favourites still remain popular among the rising generation, despite the "growth of realism" and the "development of a scientific spirit of enquiry."

Statistics at the library bear out Miss Walker's statements. Out of 9084 books borrowed during the month of December, 1057 were fairy tales while only 53 were science and 253 natural history. The same proportion holds good for other months, and the fairy stories only yield place to fiction in popularity. To add to the strength of these statements there are only 770 volumes of fairy stories in the library and the greater majority of them are constantly out.

According to Miss Walker there is an increasing interest shown in the practical sciences but for the present there seems to be no danger of science superseding fairy lore. Moreover, the Saturday morning story hours which usually draw a capacity attendance are almost entirely fairy tale hours.

There seems to be equally little danger of realistic photographs becoming more popular than coloured illustrations. While some interest may be shown in them, the children prefer

POLITICAL SCIENCE FORTE OF WOMEN

Have Fewer Prejudices Than Men, According to Dr.
Moley

DR. URWICK REPLIES

Does the average woman in Political Science apply herself to the subject with "more industry and an equal intelligence, as compared to men?" According to Dr. Raymond Moley, Professor of Public Law at Barnard College and former Secretary of State, women, contrary to public opinion, make better students of Political Economy than men. The men come into the course with a certain superficial knowledge of politics, derived mainly from parental doctrines, and thus have a great deal to unlearn while the attitude of the young woman is that she simply does not know, and she tries to learn directly, earnestly and industriously.

Dr. Urwick, head of the Political Science Department at the University of Toronto, feels that it would be most unfair to make any distinctions between the men and women. "I find that there is not very much to choose between them. Some are of course extremely good, others go to the opposite extreme. But as far as any preconceived notions of politics are concerned, Dr. Urwick finds that with similar

St. U.C. volleyballers captured the interfaculty volleyball title by taking two out of three well-played matches from Jr. Meds before the holidays. The Medical team took the first of the three matches but failed to play up to their best form in the next two and as a result the Red and White squad emerged victorious.

Throughout the entire series the work of Murphy for St. U.C. was outstanding as the Medicals failed to master his beautiful spikes and it was this spiking ability on the part of Murphy which cost the Doctors the title. Krakauer of the losers also played well throughout the series.

GRAD BALL CLIMAX

During the holiday week Hart House was host to several outstanding groups at luncheons and parties. Perhaps the most noteworthy of these was the joint luncheon given on December 28th for the American Philological and Archaeological Associations, which have been in convention at the University.

The Honorable Members of the Ontario Older Boys Parliament in session at Victoria College, were shown through the House and sat down to dinner in the Great Hall.

The climax of the holiday season at Hart House was, of course, the Grad Ball, when over nine hundred couples danced to delightful music furnished by Geoffrey Waddington and his two orchestras. Pipers from the 48th Highlanders Band marched up and down the corridors to the lilting strains of their gaily fluted bagpipes, while the

ANTI-WAR DELEGATE NOW IN EUROPE

Woodsworth Making Contacts with Universities in England

SOCIETY PLANS PAPER

Ken Woodsworth and Marjorie Drummond, the representatives of the Anti-War Society at the International Student Congress, are at present travelling in western Europe. According to Alfred Stein, secretary of the society, they will be back around January 16th. Woodsworth, in particular, is making contacts in England with the various student organizations against war, and should be able to establish a permanent tie between the peace movement of this University and those of Great Britain.

Stimulated by the activity at Toronto, McGill decided to contribute a delegate as well. Mr. Laxer was sent from that University with the joint support of the McGill League Against War and the Student League of Canada.

Two weeks ago, Miss Drummond and Ken Woodsworth left Toronto for New York, where they joined the eight delegates from all parts of the United States—New York, California, New Jersey, New Hampshire, North Carolina and elsewhere. On their return it is expected that they will make several addresses on the campus, and Woodsworth is slated to share his experiences with the Universities and several of the high schools of the province.

However, in order to ensure that no student remain ignorant on this important movement, the Anti-War Society is planning a publication for the end of January, in which Woodsworth

S.P.S. CAPTURES LACROSSE TROPHY

Beats Victoria in . Playoff Match to End Two Game Tie

TENSE ACTION

In one of the most thrilling series ever staged in interfaculty sport, S.P.S. defeated Victoria to win possession of the Dafoe Cup, emblematic of the interfaculty lacrosse championship.

It was originally intended to decide the championship on a two game, total goal basis, but a third game was required before S.P.S. emerged victors. S.P.S. held a two goal lead after the first game, but Victoria overcame this lead late in the second game, and with but one minute to play Dyke scored for Victoria to apparently win the championship. However, School were not beaten yet and Ballagh tied it up once more on the last play of the game. Overtime settled nothing and in the third and deciding game, S.P.S. came out on top by 13-11 after a sensational battle.

PASSENGER PIGEON EXHIBIT OPENED

Reproduction of 1860 Landscape Shows Extinct Birds

TO ILLUSTRATE RESEARCH

A special exhibit of passenger-pigeons, now extinct, was opened yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Royal Ontario Museum by Dr. Simpson, Minister of Education. The exhibit is a reproduction of a scene in the 1860's at the Forks of the Credit, Ont. which depicts the abundance of colouration, habits and kinds of situation of the passenger pigeon. They are said to be more numerous than fish.

The scene has been designed and is under the direction of Mr. Snyder, and the painting of the background has been done by Mr. Fisher. Professor Dymond, who presided at the opening, explained to The Varsity that the purpose of the exhibit was to show Ontario in the days of the passenger-pigeon, and show their habits, which have been found by much research.

WIN THREE FROM HARVARD

Come from Behind to Beat Princeton by 5-3 in New York

While unable to break into the winning column in the O.H.A. race the senior puck chasers proved slightly superior to the U.S.A. college squads during the holidays. They dropped two heartbreaking games in the O.H.A. but won five from the college teams from across the border.

On December 15th the much heralded Yale crew made their annual appearance here and left on the short end of a 7-3 score. In the early minutes of play Varsity demonstrated they were out to avenge last year's defeat and MacPherson and Roy scored in quick order. From then on the game tightened up but the Eli crew could not match the Blue team. The Varsity wings continually outguessed the Yale defence and Snider in goal was kept very busy. Warren Stevens juggled his lines placing Devine at centre on the first line and moving McLelland back with the alternates. The net result was very satisfactory as both lines appeared stronger.

On December 18 the team journeyed to Port Colborne and dropped a 7-5 decision to the Sailors. To all intents Varsity seemed to have the game tied up but two penalties left them floundering and the Sailors ran in three goals

HOLIDAYS COST BEES LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

Blues Drop from Top Rung to Fourth Position When Idle

DEFEATED ONLY TWICE

Varsity's Senior "B" entry in the Major Commercial series relinquished the lead of two points that it enjoyed over three other teams when the fall term ended and have fallen back into fourth position, just ahead of Hinde and Dauchie. Royal Canadians are now the league leaders, with eleven points, and close on their heels follow the speedy Bell Telephones.

The Beavers however, have played three less games than the present pace setters, as they declared a holiday during the past week and a half and are now prepared to make up for lost ground. Up to today they have taken part in only five games, of which they won three and lost two, giving them six points.

Varsity started the holiday right when Kieff scored the only goal of the game against Bell Telephone, in a fast, hard checking tussle that kept the almost record crowd on the sides of their seats for the whole time. Two nights later, they lost their lead when two teams moved into a tie with them for first place, as a disorganized Blue team seemed unable to do anything against the Royals, and went down to a 3-0 defeat. About one third of the team had left for home and the remaining members just couldn't click. This was the Bees second defeat of the season.

While the rest of the league played two games a week Varsity hung up their equipment for the holidays, and they now find themselves far behind the leaders. However, they have a good chance of catching up again and are likely to be on the top of the league soon.

Intercollegiate Hockey

For the first time of the season we find the University of Toronto hockey team sweeping onward in a victorious series which has given them four triumphs in as many games. The team, playing their annual contests with Yale, Harvard, and Princeton have defeated each team once and the Harvard club twice. It is not the fact that the Blue team are performing on distant fields which enables them to record victories which they found impossible in their earlier operations in the O.H.A. circuit, but the fact that they are meeting teams of their own calibre.

While in their local struggle, this calibre at times appeared to be of a dubious nature, the fact is that intercollegiate hockey is of as high an order now as at any previous time in the University history. True, there have been super teams in the past, but these will appear again although the early age at which students of the present day graduate will tend slightly to eliminate the perfection of such teams.

The difficulty lies not with the University teams, but in the fact that the competition has become more and more severe. The thinly veiled professionalism which exists everywhere in what is technically known as "Amateur sport", has acted to increase the efficiency of the participants till now only the experts may hope to successfully compete. While this would appear to have a tendency to raise the standard of the sport it also generates a state of unbalance where it affects clubs, such as the University who refuse to participate in the player traffic employed by the rival teams.

The situation as it now exists would appear to point to the formation of an international intercollegiate union for its solution. The close competition which the Toronto students are meeting definitely indicates that the American colleges are sufficiently advanced and skilled in the game to make worthy opponents, and this is reflected in the attendance the games receive. The one objection to this procedure is the element of distance separating the colleges concerned. And this distance will entail expense. However, even this obstacle is likely to be overcome in the near future and the dawn of a greater intercollegiate hockey series seems to be at hand.

Courtroom Theatricals

John Barrymore as a lawyer, instead of a mere profligate, or movie actor, has aroused considerable mirth among members of the bar. The totally false picture of melodrama in the courtroom has caused many to consider taking up the Law as a romantic profession. Few believed that any such conditions existed in real life. However, one has cause to wonder at the reports emanating from Flemington. "The man who did this", he (the prosecutor) said, "after reviewing his theory of the crime, 'is in this courtroom.'"

"He turned, and for 10 seconds gazed steadily at Hauptmann.

"Wilentz's outline . . . provided the first tremendously dramatic scene. As he spoke, not a sound could be heard."

The whole story of the trial reads like the account of a great publicity stunt. The first person to enter the courtroom was a girl who had come from Los Angeles. The defense attorney gave an interview to the press, strangely resembling the expression of confidence issued by managers on the eve of great prize-fights. Two hundred press wires have been installed in the courtroom, and even sports writers are covering the story.

This is a remarkable contrast to the scene of a Canadian courtroom. Two years ago there was a sensational relief fraud in a small Ontario city, which was climaxed by the suicide of a bootlegger who was held as a material witness. The day of the trial came, and a sparse crowd strayed into the court, mostly people with time to waste, among them the present writer. The prosecutor quietly brought forward the evidence, which was carefully weighed, and after consideration by the jury, the accused commissioner was acquitted. By a little play to the gallery, the case could have held the public eye for several days, but the court refused to change itself into a theatre.

Canadians are inclined to be smug about the superior dignity of their legal system, and its ability to maintain law and order. It is to be hoped that the Attorney-General does not carry out his proposed plan to conduct prosecutions in person, and create a precedent for the entry of politicians into the courtroom.

The Vermilyea trial, for instance, could be made into a front page spread for American and Canadian papers, in the same manner as the Brownlee case in Saskatchewan, but it is to be hoped that the court will never encourage the idea.

Brilliant Student Passes

It is with the deepest regret that The Varsity reports the death of Arnold Oliver, II Physics and Chemistry, University College, who died of pneumonia on December 18th. Mr. Oliver was a graduate of Harbord Collegiate in 1933, and last year after heading his course he was awarded the Alexander T. Fulton Scholarship in Mathematics and Physics and the Third Reuben Wells Leonard Scholarship.

The Varsity extends its sympathy to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Oliver, of 527 Gladstone Avenue, Toronto.

Taking Stock

Now that the tumult and the shouting of the holiday season has died down, and we face a new year, let us take stock of ourselves. It is well that we should.

We enter upon a new year with high hopes of achievement for the future. The past lies behind us; its errors and follies are to be forgotten. A new year is a clean slate washed free of the impurities of the past. We can begin a new record, breaking entirely with mistakes of the preceding years. Unfortunately this optimistic prospect is only partly true. We cannot avoid the consequences of the past. Our actions in private life and our public relationships are productive of problems which are projected into the present and the future. No mysterious hand wipes the slate clean of difficulties and dangers as we begin this year. On the contrary our troubles on January the first, 1935, are every bit the same as they were on December 31, 1934. They have not vanished at the last "Auld Lang Syne" on the stroke of midnight. The troubles and difficulties which we shall meet in the coming year have had their roots in the New Years of the past, one year ago, two, ten, twenty years ago and further back than that. Doubtless in the year 1935, we will, in our perversity, set in motion new issues which will be mighty problems for our children and our grandchildren to face. This year the problems are particularly acute. If new beginnings are to be made, if new records of achievement are to be reached, they must be in relation to the solving of these great and troublesome problems which have been the consequence of our follies and our deficiencies in the past. Certainly that task will demand all the optimism and courage possible.

Time and Circumstance do not change miraculously at the transition from one year into another. Change upon the outward surface of the social order must be the outcome of our own activity contributing directly to that result. This activity may be begun at any time of the year, but the New Year, as the time when our optimism and faith in ourselves is strongest, appears to be the best time to make the start. To expect more of the New Year than opportunity to begin work were fallacious. The New Year is and will be what we make of it ourselves.

There are two main problems which face us as we turn this year—War and Social Reform. To these we must bring a new spirit. Every intelligent person realizes the necessity for Social Reconstruction. There needs here no hysterical outburst of adolescent enthusiasm to point out in vivid antitheses the glaring inequalities of our present social order.

THE FATE OF THE CHRISTMAS SPECIAL

THE crash of steel! the shattering of wood and glass! In an instant lives of promise snuffed out, vigorous bodies injured and mutilated . . . but it is only a magnification of the daily round of accidents, to which we are all exposed, and which cost countless thousands of dollars.

Yet the cold facts prove that for every accident causing bodily injury there are twelve disabilities due to sickness. Sickness in its quite, sinister way is the great thief of time and of money.

Students Health Insurance will protect you against the expenses of both accident and sickness. The cost is so small that every student can afford to participate.

The Law Union and Rock Insurance Company, with over 125 years of insurance experience, has the ability and strength to give complete satisfaction.

Well, the People's Jimmy is mayor, and Heaven knows how soon we capitalists may be shorn of our sources of production. The editor of Acta Victoriana is said to have gone out to squander his goods with the premonition that soon he would see an example of Socialism in action. Business Will Be Better Hunt was nosed out by four personal remarks and a sob story, with His Turn Ramsden coming in a poor third, chiefly because of his cowardly change to the name of Better Wages Ramsden. The Probe turned a complete back flip on the election when it caught a whiff of C.C.F. in the atmosphere, and Mayor Stewart C.N.E., pulled a roorback which the People's Jimmy gallantly gives the credit for electing him. The P's J. spent the holidays dodging Stare reporters while he pulled enough Good Deeds to last a Boy Scout at least a year. This is by way of informing all the Country Boys who are coming back full of youthful vigour that the best two weeks of material for this column has just been entirely wasted, and that now Toronto will be Tolerante under the gentle sun of Our Jimmy's administration.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

It wouldn't be right to start this column without wishing you all a Happy New Year, and without encouraging each one of you to turn out, and do or die for your college or faculty in some sport. It's grand fun, and one of the best ways of getting to know people, whether you do or die.

To begin, the badminton season will soon be in full swing. U.C. have been having practices and tournaments, but the other faculties are just beginning to get started. Ruth Leavens is taking charge up at Vic, and is hoping to have some kind of round-robin tournament. A list will be put up in Little Vic gym as soon as possible, and any Vic co-ed who is interested should sign. St. Hil-da's have nothing definite planned as yet, but Betty Clement is hoping to have the tournament started by the middle of January. The interfaculty struggle will be played off later on in the term. The executive have yet to find a club or courts where they can run it off in a single morning or afternoon.

Hockey is now coming into its own. U.C. have had their inter-year games, and what a panic they were. Only the first and second years put out teams, and as second year had three intercollegiate players, naturally they had the advantage. It was so great an advantage that first year kept putting on new players, and forgot to take off the old ones. At one time there were thirty or more players on the ice, and most of them didn't know for which goal they were headed. A good time was had by all though, and second year were pronounced the winners. The interfaculty team will be chosen from among those who took part. The various college practices should start any time now, and the schedule for the interfaculty games should be posted in the near future.

Swimming has been going on all year, but the climax will come this term. The interfaculty meet will be held some time around the first of March. Before this date the various faculties will hold their own meets, and choose their teams. So if you want to make a team, get out and get in now.

The interfaculty basketball games are over but the intercollegiate is yet to be played. We hope to have some definite news about practices, etc., in the next issue. There are a number of positions open on the teams, due to graduation, so why not come out and try for them?

This short resume should show you that there will be fun and games for all of you. Pay your money and take your choice. If you want to combine two sports, you will have twice the fun, but we believe there is some rule about playing both interfaculty hockey and intercollegiate basketball. The two schedules for practices and games have an unfortunate habit of coming at the same time.

Every player on both teams starred at one time or another during the series, but Murray, Walkey and Balagh for S.P.S. and Young and Clipperton for Victoria were especially prominent.

By B. J. McGuire

The misty veil cloaking the future of 1935 has already commenced its languid ascent, and will slowly uncover a panorama of athletic activities which promise to be of even greater proportions than the season just passed. In the University activities, the half way mark has been reached, although many of us would fail to qualify in an academic sense.

The past year was one in which every branch of sport, worthy of a place on the calendar, enjoyed a successful season, featured, of course, by bigger and better publicity departments and bigger, if not better, paying public than the preceding year. Football in particular, here and elsewhere filled the stands in a manner seldom before equalled.

In this regard football seems to be the one sport which is steadily gaining in popularity. The 75,000 customers attracted to some of the games across the border will of course never be duplicated here, but it is certain that the attendance will continue to increase. It's less than half a century ago that Varsity men first met in football combat, for which they charged the audience nothing at all. In fact they didn't have an audience. Times have changed since that age, when salesmanship was not essential to the welfare of the student, and the one activity which has kept pace with the academic pursuits is the football industry which is steadily growing more profitable.

The deeds of the Varsity hockey hopefuls in their annual tour of some of the larger American colleges, certainly lend an air of optimism to the immediate future of hockey up where the boys can see it with tickets they bought and paid for in the fall when they had dough in their jeans. The Blues team is undefeated in four starts on their recent tour. Now that they have learned what it feels like to get down in front it is to be hoped that they will take kindly to the idea and allow some of their faithful followers to see them do it. Incidentally, Jimmie MacPherson, elected to the position of captain of the squad, has been proving himself a worthy leader and is figuring largely in the scoring.

FARE BADLY IN O.H.A.
UNDEFEATED ON TRIP

In quick succession. Three nights later Toronto were prepared to spend a pleasant evening by entertaining the students at Conny Smythe's Church St. Emporium. Varsity set out to please the All Stars and after three minutes were trailing 3-0. Parsons circled the net early in the second chucker to make it 4-0. About half way through the middle period the Blues took offence at their hosts and from then on it was a real hockey game. Staging a breath-taking finish that put the feats of Frank Merriwell to shame the students came within one goal of Toronto. For the last ten minutes they owned the puck off Mr. Goldie's anatomy but were unable to push the equalizer past the clever net-minder. On the play Varsity at least deserved a tie and many neutral observers left the arena saying that they should have won. However, moral victories don't count and Varsity still have to win a game in the Ontario scramble.

After allowing their Christmas dinners to settle for two days the team set out on their annual American tour. The first stop was at Lake Placid where they played a three game series with Harvard. They continued their winning gait against the foreign opposition and swept the series by scores of 4-2, 3-2 and 3-1. In all the games Varsity obtained an early lead and were never threatened.

Journeying to New York they defeated Princeton in a clarity match. Once again they went into an early lead but in the second period Princeton overcame the deficit and were leading 3-2. However, Varsity finished strong and were victors by a 5-3 count.

Tomorrow night Varsity will play a return game with Yale to conclude the tour.

The following players made the trip. Shipp, Campbell, Charles, Devine, MacPherson, Hendry, Rey, McLelland, McConvey, Sweeney, Kieff.

backgrounds women are just as likely to acquire biased political ideas as men. He agrees, however, that the few women who go into such a course as Political Science, are on the whole very interested in the subject and are therefore much more likely to stand out.

Dr. Moley calls a "survival of the barbaric logic of the years when woman's suffrage was under consideration" the idea that a woman's "mind is of such a nature as makes politics a lost art." Men "too often forget that science exists in politics, but the entire science is too vast to be limited to more to leg-weariness rather than poor playing. The Purple cagers of the Niagara U. had little difficulty in out-speeding the Blues and at half time the score was 28-8. In the second half the Blues played a much better brand of ball but were away off in their shooting.

With a complete day's rest Hayman sent his crew out again in Buffalo on Saturday night and his squad played in their best form. The Varsity crew took the lead at the outset of the game and stayed ahead with very little trouble until half time when they had a 19-14 lead. In the second half play was much closer with the Buffalo team showing much better form and a great deal of fight. With but a few minutes to go the Buffalo crew were in the lead but Joe Connelly tied the score at 38 all with a basket just before the final whistle. In the overtime the Toronto team were by far the better squad and two baskets by Connelly and one by Meneel put the game on ice for Varsity.

Throughout the series the Blues were troubled a great deal with penalties as Hayman's crew were penalized 38 times in the two games. In the first tilt the Blues didn't lose a man through fouls but in the Buffalo game Meagher, Gold and Marks were sent off. The Blues also failed to make good on their free throws, only registering on nine out of thirty-two attempts.

The playing of Hugh Marks and Joe Connelly for Varsity featured in each of the two contests, with the latter well to the fore in the scoring lists. Pansykowsky and Phillips of Niagara U. and Stoll and Jendresak of Buffalo turned in nice efforts.

Niagara University, 48: Phillips 14, Connelly 2, Paul 11, Pansykowsky 7, Shields 6, Hogan 2, Fury, Kossan 2, Formosa 4, Dunn, Pettit and N. Phillips. Varsity 19: Marks 4, Meagher 6, Munroe 1, Connelly 6, Gold, Bodrug 1, Levy, Crowley, Newman, Meneel 1 and Fittin.

University of Buffalo 38: Hock 4, Jendresak 9, Stoll 15, Sielski, Hoak 4, Chiccolini 6.

Varsity 44: Marks 7, Bodrug 7, Gold 2, Meagher 6, Connelly 14, Munroe 3, Crowley, Meneel 3, Levy, Newman and Fittin.

Approaching the subject with humility, a woman grows to understand that point, and for this reason in Dr. Moley's opinion, women excel in both the quality and quantity of their work.SUPPER DANCE

HART HOUSE PLAY ACCLAIMED BY CRITICS

"The Piper," the holiday presentation at Hart House Theatre, has been enjoying a most successful run. It has been acclaimed by audiences and critics to be one of the most beautiful and colourful presentations ever attempted at Hart House. Mr. Murray Gommie in the role of the Piper is giving one of the finest performances of his career. The costuming and settings are most elaborate and the cast is an unusually large one, including 30 adults and 40 children.

The play is under the direction of Mr. Stendale Bennett. It is interesting to note that the Piper has recently been performed in Victoria, B.C., and will be produced in February by the Ottawa Drama League.

Hamelin, the town in which the legend of the Piper originated, is celebrating its 650th anniversary of the myth.

Hungarian railway authorities are reported as contemplating the planting of thornless cacti on waste places along the railways to serve as food for cattle.

Our Annual Illiterate Issue

By Paul Gardner

JUDGES' REPORT

The outstanding features of this year's contributions to our illiterate issue were the bales of sybaritic valse, the curious absence of humour, wit and talent in all the humorous prose, and the general verminosity of practically everything submitted. We must have an illiterate issue, however, or the prize money would rust in our pants, so we decided to place all the entries in a large wardrobe trunk and drop it into the lake, sending a cheque for seven cents to each contributor. This was done, but unfortunately two of the prose pieces were overlooked, and we are forced to get rid of them through this medium. Here they are, folks, and anyone who reads them and then wants to dive for the trunk will be given a map of Gordon Sinclair with Richard Haliburton thrown in, and we'll be there to do it.

426 Hoskin Ave.

By James Dumm

The 400 block on Hoskin Avenue is not much to look at, but five dollars is five dollars, and it is just such buildings that yield rich rewards in cheap but hilarious fun-poking. It can't do any harm to try, anyway. Number 426 looks O.K. It's pretty filthy, and yes, there are no blinds on the windows. That in itself is uniquely fascinating, of course, but what makes it perfect is that simply marvellous sign in the window, with a small letter instead of a capital. That certainly ought to rock the judges off their kegs, I must also refer to it whimsically, of course, in case anyone should miss it.

Now for a description of the dining-room in this joint. That ought to fetch them all right. Furniture, wallpaper, and finally those pictures. Oh boy! won't the judges eat up a nice satirical description of those pictures! Now what? Oh yes, a little kidding about the lack of variety in the menu. That's always good for a snicker. But that's about all. A little something about the waitress, maybe, but there's really not much more I can say. It needs some sort of kick at the end, though. I wonder . . . . Got it! The good old gag about thinking the coffee was teal. The judges'll eat that up for sure.

Now let's see if I've got everything in. Yes, I think so, and believe me it's not bad. Not entirely original, maybe, but it's a scream, and anyway, five bucks is five bucks.

Perambulative Attrition

By Hiram Holler

From remote antiquity people have felt it incumbent upon them to congregate their extremities. Pedal, primarily; manual, medially; uvular, ultimately. So that by this time we have hereditary frigipodosis, not to say gelifigitosis, inherently congenital within our pulmono-pachydermatic pantoplasm. This is not so hot, but as yet we have barely invaded the illimitable domain of anatomical revelation.

It is generically desiderated, although but phantasmagorically esteleologized, that a vertiginous titillation of the fibula should produce anabasic aphasia. For example, when one dolichocephalic quasicerebral comes into casual juxtaposition with another of similar cranial malformation, it is customary for the one spectacularly to initiate a pronounced auricular oscillation.* This is not to be confused with oracular ossification, or Professorial Petrification, as it is often known, but is at the diametrically apothetic pole of activity, and is therefore biochemically insulatorophylacteraeous.

In fact, the most intimate of my acquaintances, after perusing this tentative and prefatory treatise in manuscript, are apt, I have meticulously observed, if not duly cautioned, to appraise it with a warm but hasty "Nuts!"

Rollicking Co-eds Scream For Ice; Necked by Quintuplets—Was That Nice?

By F.S. and M.J.G.

More ice please! Is this tomorrow or the day after tomorrow? And so another year has whooped its way away, and 'tis the dawn. It never dawned on me. But, Mother, must I go into all the gruesome—mphi, interesting details? How can I remember where I had breakfast?

Bigger and better ice cubes! And I lost my lovely carrying! Who ever heard of skipping down Yonge Street at four a.m.? We always had a hankering for white feathers, and this chicken didn't even cluck!

I think I have a cold. He had the bunny wrap, and I had a skin coat. Was that man twins or quintuplets? And I thought I was a Christmas Tree! Got all tangled up in the lights.

Where is that ice?

One cup of kindness too many. And she won't the beauty contest! She wore a sprig of mistletoe in her hair.

For Auld Lang Syne

I'm sure the music was out of step. I'm so small and you're so tall! It came from Fifth Avenue. That's her story.

Send for the ice-man!

If you can say—
Get up, old wife, and shake your feathers,
Dinna think that we are beggars,
We're just bairns come out to play,
Get up and gie's, we're hughmanagh,
All in one breath—but you can't.
And then the moon went out.

And now, what of the Praetorian Guard? His Worship Bill no longer needs protection from anonymous literateurs, and Our Jimmy depends on the Underdog standing up for the friend of the Underdog, so most of the police are at their wit's end, a place, to copy Woolcott, where they spend a good deal of their time, owing to the cowardly spirit of the Red Perils, who will not, even for the sport of it, give them any opposition. The Rules of Jay:

(1) It is unsportsmanlike to shoot a sitting bird. When caught, sit quickly down on the ice, and smile sweetly. (Better for girls with nice teeth.)

(2) There has as yet been no rule against Jay Standing. When you see a cop sneaking up, stand at attention and start singing the National Anthem. On the fifth bar take a running start and leave him on the other side of the stream of traffic. (Flat-footed, as it were.)

(3) There is a new rule against the use of firearms. Shocking bad form, and illegal at that. Ask Gordon Sinclair.

(4) A spirit of fair-play and good-fellowship should be maintained between Jay Catchers and Jay Walkers. The retort courteous should be used in all cases except in the foul play entailed in the use (so far not perpetrated) of plain clotheshorses.

TAKING STOCK

Such juvenilia may be found in any High School exercise book, the writer's youthful effusions among them. They need not be reproduced here. The wise would merely lift their eyebrows and murmur "My dear sir, you are very young." The thoughtless crowd would only crush the paper under their feet.

"I've read that tripe a thousand times." Let us look at the problem intelligently and sanely. No government, however well-intentioned it may be, can outrun the desire of the people. Where social reform is needed, the desire of the people must be made known in the presentation of clear-cut demands to the leaders of our governments, and must be backed up by an intelligent and well-informed public who know what they want and are determined to get it. If sufficient pressure is brought to bear, we may shortly see the most outstanding abuses legislated out of existence and the way made clear for a definite programme of social reconstruction. But we must do these things. They do not come about by themselves, or magically by the mere turning of one year into another.

It is the fault of the world that, like the man who intends to cut out smoking for the sake of his health, but kills his conscience by cutting down the quantity of his tobacco to one cigar or a package of cigarettes per day, the "civilized nations" merely reduce the number of their arsenals to "humanize" warfare instead of ending it. That seems to be a characteristic of nations that is not affected by New Year's days in any year. However, if we intend to keep the peace in the world, that tendency must be attacked at once. If not, we shall find our "preparedness" bringing down on us another holocaust of slaughter in a second World War. Put not your trust in disarmament conferees and armament experts. By ones run by retired admirals, decayed intimating, this year, to these gentlemen your entire refusal to fight for their interests you will materially hasten the progress towards disarmament and world peace.

And now let us step out into the New Year.

GOULD DESCRIBES ANTARCTIC GEOLOGY

America

BASICALLY GRANITE

Dr. C. M. Gould, Professor of Geology and Geography at Carleton University, Northfield, Minnesota, addressed the Royal Canadian Institute Saturday night upon the subject "Geological Adventures in Antarctica." Dr. Gould has been a member of two Arctic expeditions and was second in command in the Admiral Byrd Expedition of 1928-30. His lecture, which was in the nature of a personal travelogue, was characterized by a brilliantly witty conversational style very unusual in one who has had only the silent coldness of the South Pole with which to commune.

Dr. Gould went to the Antarctic primarily as a geologist and geographer. In going to so uncomfortable a region, he declared that he was only following the eternal quest of man to understand his world. There has been considerable speculation as to the nature of the land mass surrounding the North Pole; most of it proved to be unfounded. Some of Dr. Gould's pet theories were to be shattered. The land mass is far larger than the North Especially does this system coincide with the modern spirit of progress and internationalism, Mr. Green declared.

SCHOOLMEN TO REVEL AT EXCLUSIVE DANCE

Features Musical Comedy at Hart House
Theatre

"The greatest affair of its kind ever attempted in Hart House," is the description given to this year's School Nite, to take place on January 22. This event, the biggest in the social calendar of the School of Science for the year, replaces the School At-Home as well as the former School Nite, and is open only to Schoolmen.

The evening opens with a musical comedy presentation in the Hart House Theatre at eight o'clock. This offering is under the direction of H. F. McGuire. There will be dancing till 1 a.m. in the common rooms to the music of five leading orchestras. Supper will be served in the Great Hall during the evening.

The Engineering Society is subsidizing the affair with a large sum of money budgeted for the School At-Home, and on this account it was decided not to sell tickets outside the School of Science.

Lecture on Mathematics

One of the foremost mathematicians in the field of algebra, Professor Emmy Noether of the staff of Bryn Mawr College, will lecture here during the week of January 7th, in Room 38 of University College. The subject, which is of interest to all honour students of mathematics, is to be on Modern Methods in Algebra and Theory of Numbers.

The lectures will be delivered daily this week, from 4 to 5 p.m.

One Hundred Sunday Concerts

(Editorial)

The one hundredth Sunday Evening Concert will take place in the Great Hall at 9 p.m. on Sunday next, 13th January, marking an important milestone in the development of music in Hart House and also in the musical life of Canada. The first concert was held on 12th November, 1922, and since that date similar concerts have continued in an unbroken series, eight being given each year.

It is no exaggeration to say that if one person was to be singled out as the originator of these concerts that man is Mr. J. Campbell McInnes who, as a famous singer and one of the greatest living experts on folk-songs, has done so much for music in the University, the Province and the Dominion. In the spring of 1922 Mr. Campbell McInnes discussed with the Warden of Hart House, Mr. J. B. Bickelsteth, the possibility of holding in the Great Hall a series of Sunday Evening Concerts similar to those which for the past eighty years have been one of the outstanding musical features in Oxford.

The success of the plan obviously depended on the sympathy and practical assistance of the musicians of Toronto and the Warden undertook to approach each of them in turn and explain the idea. It was characteristic of Mr. Campbell McInnes to promise that, in the event of there being any difficulty in securing sufficient help to make possible the first eight concerts, he would himself be responsible for the entire series that season. That he was never called upon to do so is a magnificent tribute to the musicians of this city who immediately grasped the idea and willingly offered their services.

It should be clearly understood that the finances of Hart House did not then permit and have never permitted the payment of any remuneration to the artists who have given the programmes at these concerts. The only condition they made when approached by the Warden was that as far as possible their audience should be confined to members of Hart House and particularly to undergraduate members.

This condition has always been rigidly observed and is the reason why tickets are issued and carefully scrutinized. It is hardly necessary to emphasize the enormous debt which Hart House owes to the musicians of Toronto whose generosity and imagination have established a musical institution in Hart House which is now famous all over the Dominion and is, we believe, firmly established for all time.

The first concert in the fall of 1922 was given by Mr. Campbell McInnes and Mr. Reginald Stewart and it is altogether fitting that these two great artists, each hitherto in his own branch of music, should have been invited by the Music Committee to give the hundredth programme next Sunday. They have kindly consented to do so and a programme of exceptional interest has been arranged.

The Music Committee have invited to be present on that evening not only all those musicians who have been responsible for the programmes during the last twelve and a quarter years but also the senior members and secretaries of former Music Committees. The cover design of the programme has also been changed and will be for the first time that evening.

The usual number of tickets has been allotted to members of Hart House, so students wishing to attend will be well advised to secure their places before 9 p.m., as a record attendance is expected, and the concert will be started punctually on the hour.

During his stay in Havana, Mr. Hermant was given an audience with the president or "rector" of Havana University, who asked that the respects of the University be extended to the president and student body of the University of Toronto.

ALBANY ATTEMPTS ABOLISHING EXAMS

Examinations Thought Factor in Lowering Standard of Education

PROFESSORS COMMENT

Examinations and the fear of subsequent failure, two of the bug-bears of our educational system, are being done away with under the Albany educational plan, where efforts are being made in the secondary schools to so construct and present each course that all who are interested in it will find work which in difficulty will challenge their best effort but never demand from them that which they cannot do. The agent in the adjustment of the work to the worker is the guidance counselor.

When asked by The Varsity to comment on this system, Professor Line, associate professor of psychology at University College, drew a distinction between external and internal examinations. In the United States a few schools have been freed from matriculation and the universities will accept candidates who are recommended by these schools. "There is no doubt that the external exam is often cramping and frequently prevents the standards of education from becoming higher," said Professor Line. "Internal examinations in some form will always be present. Any problem which is solved by a child is an examination. There must be standards but exams often standardize."

"The notion of individualizing the programme is not new and is especially frequent at higher levels of education," he stated, "but it should be included in lower levels particularly. The 'Intermediate School' has been suggested in Ontario as a means of making possible."

NEW LIGHTS INSTALLED AT STRATEGIC CORNER

No Research at University on Cheaper Methods of Lighting

In response to the many complaints received with regard to the poor and inadequate lighting around the University, the city administrators have found it necessary to install more as well as stronger lights at the corner of University and College Streets. In the centre of the intersection there is suspended a big lamp which sheds a brilliant bright light over the surrounding area. According to all available sources of information there is nothing unusual about the physical and chemical properties of this bright light, although it has been rumoured to be a mercury arc light. The installation of this light is in no way an experiment, and no more will be installed elsewhere, unless sufficient complaints are registered at the Streets Department. The added expense is only the result of using stronger bulbs, according to the Deputy Chief Constable.

After interviewing both the Physics Department of the University and the faculty of Applied Science, it was found that no definite research was known to be carried on with regard to better or cheaper lighting systems.

"One of the most remarkable geological discoveries made on our expedition to Antarctica was the finding of coal, actually three hundred miles south of the South Pole," declared L. M. Gould in his lecture at Convocation Hall Saturday evening.

The entire expedition from Little America to Antarctica was by dog-team. The dogs responded marvellously to the kind treatment but towards the end of the trip, twenty-five dogs had to be killed in order to use their carcasses as food for the other dogs.

"On our eleventh day there, the thermometer went down to seventy-three degrees below zero—our breath froze as we exhaled it," stated Mr. Gould. "The frost gathered in little bouquets as feathery crystals that hung like great candelabra. They formed crystal palaces even more beautiful than those of Aladdin's dreams."

One of the most remarkable achievements of the entire expedition was the library which Mr. Gould and his men built. It was an even greater accomplishment than the morale and peace which they kept. The library contained three thousand volumes, W. H. Hudson's Green Mansions being the most popular.

THE I.D.N.A.

Representatives of every college daily newspaper in North America gathered at Washington and New York during the Christmas holidays, to hold the first convention of the Intercollegiate Daily Newspaper Association. The meeting, held with the financial assistance of a leading publisher, provided the first opportunity on record for all campus dailies in the United States and Canada to gather and discuss their mutual problems.

The editors present represented thirty-seven of the largest universities on the continent, and had a total reading public of 250,000 students, representing a tremendous influence on public thought in future years. Each of the editors is responsible for feeding a daily quota of opinions to his university, opinions which are bound to have some effect on his readers, and which should have some serious thought behind them.

The influence for good or evil which this group might exert was realized, and no doubt accounts for the alacrity which was shown by every one, from the President of the United States down, in doing everything possible to supply assistance and information for the editors. With the single exception of Mr. Huey Long, who we understand is a politician in one of the southern states, every person who was invited to address the convention, either legislator or journalist, assisted in every way possible.

The convention proved a broadening experience for all who attended. The exchange of views among editors of two countries was of great value, and the advice of some of the world-famous writers and statesmen who addressed the group will be treasured for years.

May we take this opportunity of thanking those who made the convention possible for their generosity, and for the invitation to attend. And at the same time we warn our readers that they too may hear more about it on future occasions, when we will take the opportunity to get a few newly-formed opinions out of our system.

We Pass the Laurel

It has been called to our attention that a portion from one of this paper's editorials has been published in the Christmas issue of the Christian Science Sentinel. Material for the "Signs of the Times" column, in which The Varsity is quoted, is submitted from more than forty-five countries of the world, and anything which receives recognition in this column must have stood up to comparison with some of the best thought of the world.

We can not locate the quotation in the files of The Varsity, and have a strong suspicion that it is at least a year or two old. In any case the thought is too lofty to be our own, so we pass on the laurel wreath, and whichever one of our predecessors it fits is invited to wear it. The present editor follows a long line of theologians, one of whom will be pleased to know that whatever may be his faults, at least he has done his bit to further the cause of Christian Science in something over a hundred countries of the world.

Greetings, Havana

An interview with Mr. S. M. Hermant of University College appears in today's issue of The Varsity, telling of his visit to the University of Havana, Cuba, during the Christmas holidays. The

WHITHER AWAY

It is obvious to any spectator of the world scene that men no longer think about forms of government in a calm, reflective manner. Everyone is a violent partisan of one side or the other—or else too disillusioned to be interested in the question any longer. The whole world is an armed camp and all men are taking sides for the struggle which they feel to be imminent. It is like a great rugby game with Fascism and Hitler and Mussolini lined up on one side, and Stalin and Blum and other incompatible elements on the other. Only it is a game that is likely to blow up the stadium and all the spectators as well—if the home team wins.

Fascism is the indicator of the basic economic forces making for war; it is the instrument by which nations are militarized. Yet it has many apologists and even ardent defenders. To my dismay I meet people in Toronto, and their number is growing, who look to a dictator to rid us of our ills. They do not realize the fatal implications behind their desire for autocracy. What do these twentieth century Nietzscheans say?

The fundamental idea of fascist philosophy is this: The capitalistic system is very wobbly; its world is a world of chaos. We, the Fascists, blame it on the political children of the past two centuries—Rousseau, Voltaire, Mill, Gladstone, and Lincoln. They thought that they could teach the people to govern themselves. They were mistaken. We Fascists are realists. We desire to transfer power from the people's representatives—ward bosses, and crooked politicians and trembling parliaments—which is government of the people, by the people, for the politicians; and give it to strong men with armies to enforce their will. Thus will be instituted government of the people, for the people, by dictatorship.

Not will we invest our political sovereignty in the hands of one man, we will likewise transfer our right to earn a living to that gigantic individual, the corporate state. Capitalism we must preserve because only it provides an adequate incentive to work; but capital-labour troubles will melt away before our efficient boards of arbitration. Everyone will work, if not at a trade, then in the army. We will turn our country into a vast arsenal with beautiful, shining guns; and will be ready, blithely and steadfastly to front the world.

O tempora o mores! what devastating naïveté do these modern Aristotles display, as they follow their Alexanders into unknown fields. Aristotle thought that his pupil would unite the world; and that a beneficent autocracy would usher in the millennium. Alexander died and his empire split into a multitude of warring principalities, ruled by harsh, narrow-minded generals. Two centuries later they fell willing victims to the onslaught of Rome.

What will you do, dear fascists, when your Mussolini dies? The elaborate bureaucracy he is setting up will split to pieces when a dozen grasping statesmen seek to succeed that amazing genius. What will you do when Hitler dies—God! what are you doing now that he lives? You rejoice, I suppose, in the downfall of the intellectual and the shame of the universities. Truly, a twilight has settled over Germany, a twilight induced no doubt by the clouds of foreign persecution, but the dim grey twilight none the less.

Dictatorships are the children of hysteria; they are not expressions of a stable form of government. When dictatorship shall pass into bloody tyranny; when the ubermenschen have forgotten the people who joyously marched under their banners, what will you do then? You take Imperial Rome as your standard. You may well do so. Imperial Rome was a rotting shell, doomed to the disintegration that gradually overcame her. I venture to say that modern Rome is not in a healthy condition, despite the fact that the Italian trains now run on time. Germany's desperation, alas, we know too well.

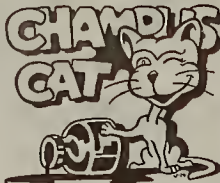

And what of your economic theories? You will preserve capitalism because only the profit motive will serve. Very well, we shall grant you that, blinding our eyes for the moment to the devastating things occurring in Russia—devastating that is, to your arguments. Capital and labour pacified indeed! Do you not know that Mussolini has failed to lessen unemployment by one iota. Do you not realize that labour is throttled; it dare not speak for its very life. Decisions handed down by "impartial" arbitration boards are final, and woe betide the Italian worker who strikes. The black shirt is at his throat.

True, thousands upon thousands of German citizens—virtuous, blond Nordics—have been put to work; while myriads of cringing Liberals, Jews, pacifists, socialists, Catholics, have been let out by the back door. Economically, Germany is in as desperate a plight as before the accession of the vandals.

Remember, you fascists, you would-be masochists, who love to feel the strong arm of a dictator, remember that the dictator has a heel as well; and that heel can fall on fascists as it fell on Roehm on a day in June. A little reflection will surely show you that the cure, even if it were effective, is worse, far worse, than the disease. Headlessly, millions rallied to the catch-words of the demagogues, giving up liberty for tyranny. "Where there is no vision, the people perish," Lloyd George said. The times are proving the validity of his dictum.

story he brings back is of such interest that we publish it in detail.

Such interest was expressed in the University of Toronto by the students at the University of Havana that we are planning to send copies of this paper to their student society in future, and we hope that they will see fit to reciprocate. On behalf of the student body at the University of Toronto we send greetings to our Cuban contemporaries.

Let's Go Places

The one and only Garbo continues at Loew's for a second week in the Painted Veil. The story, which has no particularly original merits, deals with the eternal adulterous triangle, with the immoral angle very well veiled. This is probably where they got the name of the picture, since there seems to be no other reason. The acting lives up to the usual smooth, allegedly glamorous Garbo standard, with Herbert Marshall and George Brent supplying the necessary angles to the necessary triangle. The comedy is good too, showing Charley Chase to good advantage. Unless you are a Garbo fan you will probably like this best. Rates as one of the best shows, all round, that we have seen at Loew's this year. Cantor next week. C.R.E.

LAST MINUTE COMEBACK GIVES BLUE BASKETEERS VICTORY

Blues Stage Rally To Take Aberlys

Score is Tied at 34-All with One Minute Left to Play

MANY FOULS

A powerful scoring drive in the dying minutes of their Big Six basketball engagement with Aberlys on Saturday night at West End Y.M.C.A. gave Lew Hayman's Varsity senior quintet a hard earned 35-34 victory that kept them at the top of the league with 3 successive wins to their credit.

Down 9 points with 7 minutes to play as the result of an Aberly scoring spurge midway in the second half, led by Marks and Bodrug the Blues unleashed a desperate offense on their opponents' hoop that deadlocked the score at 34 all with one minute to play. Marks scored the winning point when he sunk a foul shot with few seconds left to play, after a heart-breaking disallowance by Referee Creighton of a foul that he had scored a few seconds earlier.

The game was close and hard fought all the way, with the lead being held alternately by both teams. Varsity held the upper hand through most of the first half but two quick baskets by Aberly's fighting manager, Bill Sniderman, knotted the half time count at 17 all. The ex-Lizzies outscored the Blue and White from the field by 7-5 baskets with Eisen, Gallander and Sniderman doing all the scoring between them, while Varsity was enjoying a 7-3 advantage in shooting from the foul line.

The second half was by far the most exciting and had the spectators in an uproar throughout, with enough rough play and fouling indulged in by the players to keep Referee Hec Creighton busy playing a solo on his whistle.

Connely's loss through fouls on the first play of the half weakened the Blues considerably. A beautiful basket by Phil Gold was equalized by Wagman's long shot. Their three weeks' lay-off began to show itself and the ex-Lizzies took advantage of lapses in the Blues' defensive armour to mount the score to 28-19, led by Sibulash, who had replaced Gallander, 4-fouled out at centre. With defeat staring them in the face, the Marks-Gold-Meagher-Bodrug-Levy five began functioning brilliantly and hoops by Meagher, Levy, Marks and Bodrug plus several foul shots thrown in for good measure enabled them to assume a 34-33 lead which was evened by Mincovitch's foul shot at 34-all with one minute left to play. Marks' million dollar free shot enabled the Haymanites to eke out the closest win to date.

Aberlys can well lay blame for their defeat at the door of their fouling tactics which made it possible for Varsity to score on 13 out of 28 attempts against 6 out of 16 for themselves, as Aberlys outscored the Blues by a 14-11 margin in baskets from the court.

Marks was the outstanding player on the floor during the evening's play, with Gold, Bodrug, Meagher and Levy following close in his wake for Varsity. Eisen, diminutive Aberly scoring ace, was too closely checked by Connely and later Marks to score up to his usual form, but still looked the pick of his squad. Gallander's loss to his team was a big blow as he had hooped 4 shots, but his successor, Sibulash, did not weaken the centre position as the latter talked on three occasions. Wagman, Mincovitch, Skurko and Bill Sniderman also gave meritorious performances for the losers.

Varsity: Marks 7, Bodrug 8, Meagher 5, Gold 6, Connely 1, Levy 5, Gordon 2, Munc 2, Mencil 1, Crowley.

Aberlys: Eisen 8, Wagman 3, Gallander 8, Mincovitch 2, Shapiro, Spiegel, W. Sniderman 4, Skurko 3, Sibulash 6, B. Sniderman, Singer.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

The wandering Blues blew into town in the quiet of the Toronto Sunday morning after a tour, and a rather successful one, of the Eastern U.S. colleges. The Varsity squad recorded a total of five victories in as many starts, which should give them a batting average of 1000. While the Toronto students were more than slightly successful in their tour they still showed the lack of scoring power which has left them on the short end of the count in each and every start they have made this season in the O.H.A. circuit. They are reported to have been vastly superior to any team they encountered but failed to get their sights on the nets at the right time.

The occasion recalls the fact that negotiations have been under way for some time regarding the formation of an international college loop to replace the unsatisfactory O.H.A. situation. Reports continue to circulate to the effect that next year will probably see this league a reality. However, the fact that Varsity played to less than 6,000 customers in five games will not do the cause much good. Last season the Blue team attracted that number to single games at Madison Square Gardens.

The Varsity squad will go right back into action Tuesday night when they tangle with the Port Colborne Sailors. The students have now five successive wins to their credit and five times in a row is reported to be a habit. All of which leads us to believe that Varsity will win their first game in the local circuit Tuesday night. The week will see the first half of the schedule completed and it behooves the boys to win at least one game before the second half of the season commences. At present Tigers are well out in front and will probably remain there until the finals. The Torontos, who are expected to be heard from about that time, are well up in the race but some of their talent have been sojourning in the Maritimes, in a series of exhibitions with the cigarette team.

Three victories in as many starts is the record now held by the senior basketball squad. The Blue team registered their third win Saturday evening at West End Y when they halted the Aberlys. At that they had a narrow shave and it was only a last second tally by Hughie Marks which gave them their single point lead. The game was one of the kind which help to make basketball popular, although the whistle blowing of the referee was not one of the factors which contributed to effect this. However, he was only doing his duty and if the boys commit fouls there is only one thing to do despite the fact that it slows the game up. The return engagement of the squads should pack the house, or rather the gym, when they meet at Hart House.

VARSITY DEFEAT YALE HOCKEYISTS

Triumphant Blues Return After Undefeated Tour of States

MACPHERSON STARS

The University of Toronto hockey team arrived home yesterday after completing one of the most successful tours on record. The Blue team, over a period of one week, played a total of five games, and were returned victors in each event. Their last appearance on Friday night, sent them into conflict with the Yale Bulldogs, and it was at the expense of the Elis that they closed their campaign with a 3-1 victory.

Just as in the game here earlier in the season, the Yale team proved themselves to be very capable puckchasers. In this case, however, the Elis, who went to the front early in the struggle and then faded as the end approached, and Varsity opened up a determined attack.

Only four penalties were imposed during the entire sixty minutes, and all four came in the second period. Stoddard beat Ship for the opening goal just as the first period drew to a close. Yale then dropped back and with a determined defensive style of play held Varsity in check for 19 minutes of the second period. Snyder in the Elis nets was the big factor during this time and proved to be very hard to beat. The consistent attack, however, bore fruit and as the period was in its last minute Normie McClelland tied the score.

In the second period of the Blue team displayed the best brand of hockey and twice located the Yale twine while they kept their own sheet intact. Jimmie MacPherson drew the major honours in that period, collecting a goal and an assist, while Pete Devine ranked second as a scorer, getting an assist on McClelland's goal and then scoring in the next period on a pass from MacPherson.

Being dropped from the Social Register seems to assure more publicity than being retained.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Plans are being made to start intercollegiate basketball practices this week. Lorna Reid was hoping to have the first one this Tuesday, but it is not yet definite whether the O.C.E. gym can be obtained that night. However, there will probably be a practice later in the week. Let's see a big crowd turn out. There was any amount of good material in evidence at the interfaculty games which should shape up well for the intercollegiate. A number of positions are open, so why not turn out and have a try for one of them. The seniors and intermediates will practice together until the material is sorted out, and the teams picked. If possible there will be two hour-and-a-half practices a week. Come on, you interfaculty players, let's see you fight as hard for Varsity as you did for your own college or faculty. Watch the Sports Notices for further news.

The interfaculty hockey schedule is still indefinite. The executive are going to meet some time this week to make the necessary arrangements. So far, there are seven teams in the league, two from U.C., two from Vic, one from Meds, one from St. Mike's, and one from St. Hilda's. As you probably remember, the Vic first team won the championship last year, and Vic had it the year before that also. The Scarlet and Gold are just as keen and determined to hold it this year. They started practicing before the Christmas holidays. There will probably be better competition for them this year. U.C. should have a good team on the ice with their three intercollegiate players. St. Hilda's and St. Mike's usually field a determined crowd of puck-chasers. Meds have not the same number of enthusiasts from which to pick a team, but they certainly have the never-say-die spirit. The games should be good when they come off.

Doubtless most of the badminton enthusiasts in the University know that the City and District Badminton Tournament is being held this week at the Granite Club, but we mention the fact for those who don't know, and for those who are keen spectators of the watch-the-birdie game. The tournament starts today and the finals will be played on Saturday. The matches should be very exciting so if you're interested, you might wander up.

political interference with the academic machinery. Arrangements were made for a more comprehensive news service between the papers concerned and for more co-operation on the part of the respective staffs.

Great indignation was expressed when J. C. S. Cutler told the story of his expulsion from the Louisiana State University after criticizing Huey Long. When it was learnt that five editors of college newspapers had been dismissed in the last term in similar controversies over policy, plans were accordingly laid down to found an organization to fight censorship of the college press.

The Convention was being held in the Mayflower Hotel in Washington and in addition to the actual organization of the Convention the editors heard many famous American statesmen and journalists speak to them. Among the former were President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Interior Ickes; while Arthur Brisbane, Bruce Barton, Walter Winchell, Sir Willmot Lewis, Robert Allen, E. D. Coblentz, R. W. Child and James T. Williams Jr., were a few of the journalists. President Roosevelt spoke of his own days as editor of the Harvard Crimson, while Ickes warned them that newspapers were much too prone to argue about the freedom of the press and to disregard other constitutional rights. One of the many entertainments prepared for the editors, was a party given by Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald.

On December 29th the Convention moved to New York where they stayed at the Hotel Ritz Towers. Here they ran across Theodore Dreiser and other well-known Americans.

"We had a wonderful time and an extremely interesting one," said Mr. Ellis. "Tentative arrangements have been made to make this convention a permanent institution, and to meet at least once a year."

GOULD DESCRIBES ANTARCTIC GEOLOGY

American continent. It contains the largest mountain range in the world. Dr. Gould discovered that this region which is covered by the great ice shelf contains more coal than any other part of the world. It is a common sight to see icebergs in the throes of creation broken off from the ice shelf.

The Antarctic zone contrasts in almost every important respect with its twin sister the Arctic region. Life, both botanical and zoological, is practically non-existent, the seasons having little effect upon the flora and fauna. It is the land of the penguin and the beautiful snowy peler. Curiously enough the penguin did not achieve its peculiar walk by imitating Charlie Chaplin, but Charlie obtained his ludicrous shuffle by mimicking the penguin.

Little America, the expedition's base, was built 500 miles from the South Pole and originally consisted of tents. They were cramped, forty living in quarters made for twenty. Lack of privacy made them so irritable that they got on each other's nerves. Here the little things, such as the way in which the face you were bored with, proved to be the things that mattered most. They were saved by the presence of a 3,000 volume library from a morbid ennui. The climate was so unpleasant that the most popular books were about the tropics. Everyone sought escape from the rigours of their life. The temperature was about 73 degrees below zero. It was so cold that if a cup of water were emptied, the water would congeal before it hit the ground. The summer's sun was not glorious but blindingly glaring. So much so that many were sun-burned under the chin by the reflected light.

Dr. Gould and the five university students assisting him were once lost for fourteen days after their plane had been wrecked in a blizzard. But they were fortunately rescued by Admiral Byrd. They found that the rock was basically granite, having been formed by an upsurge of the earth's crust.

He was forced to ski while driving dogs. One of their main tasks was the establishment of food caches every fifty miles for the aeroplane expedition.

PROFESSOR GREEN GIVEN CHAIR AT CAMBRIDGE

in the moving picture sphere. For many years it has been the policy of the University of Toronto to welcome distinguished foreign professors, and encourage its own students to further their education abroad. In accepting this appointment Mr. Green regrets only that he must leave the many friends made during nine years' sojourn in Toronto.

While in Paris from 1926 to 1931, Mr. Green acted as what might be called a "liaison officer" at the summer school there for Canadian teachers of French, between them and the French. A first-hand acquaintance with the French environment and people is an absolute necessity for successful French teachers. The system was tragically abandoned at the beginning of the depression. Mr. Green feels that there should be a Government subsidy for this purpose.

"Minuet,—French and English literary ideas in the eighteenth century," his latest book, which was completed by research and revision at the British Museum and in Paris during the last six months, will be released next March.

Professor Green left the University of Rochester to join the staff of the French Department at University College in 1926. He is the author of four books, of which "French Novelists, Manners and Ideas from the Renaissance to the Revolution", won for him an award for special research from the American Council of Learned Societies at Washington.

He holds the degrees of M.C., M.A. from St. Andrew's College, Scotland; Ph.D. from Cologne; D. de l'U. Paris, O.A. He has the distinction of being the first foreigner to receive a German degree since the war. This was in 1918-20, while with the Intelligence Corps stationed at Cologne.

sity. Each is well known in his or her own faculty, and the membership has been fairly well distributed throughout the whole University. It is an easy task to spot these committee members by the blue and white sweater coats and the blue berets on the men and the white arm-bands and white berets with U. of T. monograms on the women.

Mr. Workman himself, in an interview with The Varsity on Saturday morning, explained the procedure that is generally followed. When a young lady sees the Gable of her dreams sitting alone on the opposite bench, she introduces herself to one of the feminine members of the committee who in turn, introduces her to one of the male members or directly to the person concerned; from then on, there's nothing to it. The committee is doing a rushing business; the students like it and are coming back for more. The crowds this year are the largest since the depression and many have obtained season tickets. In general, said Mr. Workman, the students come in groups of their own sex, that is, he added, the first time, and for these, the Introduction Committee performs an invaluable service.

A group picture of the committee is being taken shortly and will be run in The Varsity to enable those unfamiliar with the members to make their acquaintance, but better still, they would like to do this personally.

The introduction service is free.

HERMANT DESCRIBES HAVANA UNIVERSITY.

faculty has its own beautiful club or common room. Men and women are completely co-educational in the common rooms. Every student, male and female, has his own private arsenal."

In speaking about the financing and governing of the University, Mr. Hermant said, "Two per cent of the gross income of the country goes automatically to the university. Thus, the university is completely autonomous. It is a state within a state. In some respects, it is much like the Vatican.

"The 'rector', or president, of the university is now Jose Cadenas. He is ably supported by his student-elected Board of Governors, which must have all important decisions ratified by the student body. Recently, the student body approved of a resolution passed by the governors that there should be henceforth three examinations each year in place of the usual final examination.

"The University is very modern. On the campus is a hospital supervised by the University medical department. It is completely in the hands of the University. A new covered, concrete stadium with all facilities and with a seating capacity of 20,000 has recently been erected. The students specialize in tennis, baseball and football. Teams from Florida and other American states are to be invited in the near future.

"The University has a students' paper which is usually published three times a week. The students are deadly in earnest about all things. They are unable to do any serious studying because of the restless condition of the country. At any time a student may be questioned by the authorities in connection with any disturbance.

"The students are at present pacifist, being neither in favour of or against the present administration. They are politically conscious that their rights are only carried out by their own efforts. If there is any interference in the students' affairs, they merely march to the parliament buildings and demand their rights. For three years (1930-33) during Machado's reign, the University was closed. The students mobilized and formed a band which is now termed the Caribbean army."

In reference to the present condition of Cuba, "Everything in Havana is martial law. All vestiges of the Habeas Corpus have been abolished. On entering any large store in Havana, men and women are searched for firearms of all descriptions. At any spot and at any time of the day, a person may be stopped by a soldier who, calmly aiming a gun at the individual, may demand all weapons to be produced. Approximately 100 bombs a week explode throughout Cuba, which simply shows that there is still unrest. In Havana there is a very remarkable Workingmen's Club.

The exhibition of the "Traditional Arts of French Canada"—also among the Allied Arts—results in the long gray walls being decked with gay bedspreads and displays many remarkable examples of antique silver and wood-carving.

The expedition had forty-two men, living in quarters designed for twenty-five. In such a predicament, the little personal things were the ones that really counted.

Distance and altitude are more difficult to judge in Antarctica than in any other country in the world. It was necessary to construct radio towers in order to keep in touch with the outside world.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, TUESDAY, JANUARY 8th, 1935

No. 59

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Ottawa—In the third of his series of radio addresses, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett proposed further sweeping legislation including extension of the operations of the Farm Loan Board, reorganization of the civil service with establishment of a department of communications, the setting up of an advisory economic council, and parliamentary action on the findings of the Mass Buying Commission.

Brockville—In a speech to a gathering of railwaymen, Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion presented a pessimistic outlook on the railway situation, ridiculing the proposal of amalgamation as a certain cure for the problem.

Quebec—The fourth session of the provincial legislature opens today.

Controller Sam McBride was yesterday chosen vice-chairman of the Board of Control and president of the city council at a meeting yesterday.

Windsor—Inaugural meetings of the 1935 councils were held in three municipalities of East Windsor, Walkerville and Sandwich. The councils will sit for six months at the end of which time the municipalities will amalgamate with Windsor into one city, Greater Windsor. The mayors agreed to adopt an open policy on all civic business.

Simcoe—Captain W. C. C. Innis, chairman of the Commercial Bureau of Canada, advocated the abolition of the Federal Income Tax, the unification of the railway systems and the formation of a National Government of Canada at a meeting of the Simcoe Rotary Club.

Rome—Premier Mussolini of Italy and Laval, foreign minister of France, signed agreements affecting their mutual co-operation in European affairs.

To prevent any exploitation of the Dionne quintuplets, the provincial government is prepared to amend the Infants' Protection Act.

FRENCH CANADIAN ART IS DISCUSSED

Barbeau Traces Art Progress
Beginning with First Settlers

OUTSIDE FORCES HARMFUL

A breath of French Canada itself was brought to the Art Gallery Monday evening in the person of Dr. Marius Barbeau, who lectured on "The Traditional Arts of Quebec".

Dr. Barbeau traced the growth, climax and downfall of French Canadian art. The French Canadian settlers left their native country at a time when the French Renaissance was at its height, and they came to Quebec, imbued with the domineering feeling that art is an essential part of life. Not by wealth, but by willingness, independence and desire did they art develop. The very tilters of the soil began to build and decorate their churches. When they felt themselves being held back by the lack of expert craftsmen, they sent a petition to their bishop who journeyed to France to bring back with him masters in various art lines. These men trained the talented youth in painting, wood-carving and architecture and a great colony of fine artists grew up. Dr. Barbeau, in a recent trip to France, compared the French Canadian wood-carvings with French wood-carvings and found the former compared favourably with the original French.

The C.C.F. Club, practically dormant last term, has an ambitious and energetic campaign laid out before it for 1935, according to the statement made to The Varsity by George Proust, who is at present the nominal head of the organization.

"We plan to hold afternoon meetings frequently during this term," Mr. Proust stated, "and we plan to have as guest speakers as many C.C.F. members of parliament as possible. We hope to have as one of them Mr. J. S. Woodsworth, the head of the C.C.F. party at Ottawa."

The speakers who will be invited to speak at the meetings will be as far as possible prominent C.C.F. leaders from outside the city. The only local

SENIOR PUCKSTERS HOSTS TO SAILORS

Meet Port Colborne Here Tonight as First Half of Schedule Nears Close

TRY FOR FIRST WIN

Tonight the Varsity senior hockey squad meet the Port Colborne Sailors at Varsity Arena in the second last game of the first half of the regular O.H.A. schedule. The students have yet to score a win in the current season in O.H.A. circles, but they are confident that tonight's game will mark the beginning of their climb from the cellar position in the group.

Penalties cost Varsity their first game with the Sailors, when the latter, with the Blues shorthanded, ran in three quick goals in the last period to overcome a one goal deficit and win the game 7-5. This game was played in Port Colborne, and with the advantage of home ice, Varsity should have a good chance of reversing the decision tonight.

The Blue sextet have just returned from a successful five game tour in which they beat Harvard three times and Princeton and Yale once apiece. During this trip, the fine play of Captain Jim MacPherson featured, while Devine, McClelland and Charles also showed considerable improvement over their early season form. Admittedly, the team will be coming up against stiffer opposition now that they have returned home, but it will be remembered that the confidence they obtained during their United States trip last year was all that was needed to start the Blue team off on a winning streak. Here's hoping that history repeats itself.

Sandiford Calls Bennett's
Radio Talks Electioneering
Skill

ACTIONS ARE AMUSING

First Task of C.C.F. will be to Force Pace of Older Parties

"In these speeches Mr. Bennett is showing his electioneering skill in stalling his opponents' thunder," said Professor Sandiford of the Ontario College of Education when interviewed by The Varsity last night with regard to the prime minister's radio talk. "The voice is the voice of Bennett but the thoughts are the thoughts of Woodsworth (and Underhill)," he continued. "Some people might say that this is merely a step towards a dictatorship."

The opinions of the staff on a political issue are best summed up by the following statement that Professor E. A. Havelock of the Classics Department, prepared for The Varsity.

"As I listened to Mr. Bennett I could not help remembering a remark made by Mr. Woodsworth last spring in a speech in Toronto. 'The first task of the C.C.F.,' he said, 'will be to force the pace of the two older parties.' One is glad to see that at least one party is responding to the forcing process. But Mr. Bennett is only proposing to us that we should catch up with England and the United States. He promises unemployment insurance, a stiff income tax, an efficient civil service, and a marketing legislation. They have these already in either or both of the other countries. All these reforms are possible in the framework of the private profit system. Mr. Bennett is not a socialist nor is he talking socialism. But one day and perhaps very soon we shall face this issue: shall we transform private corporations into public utilities? Then and not until then shall we be facing the issue of socialism. And I suspect that only a socialist party is likely to put the issue up to us. It is impossible not to feel amused at this last minute wooing of

U.C. LIT TO HEAR 'JIMMY' SIMPSON ON LABOUR TONIGHT

Will be One of First Public Appearances Since Election

MAY DISCUSS BENNETT

Address on International Labour Organizations in Europe

Making his first appearance on the campus after his election to the office of Mayor, "Jimmy" Simpson will address a special meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society tonight. The meeting will be at 8.45 in the Junior Common Room of the college.

This will be one of the first if not the first public appearance of Toronto's chief magistrate since his elevation to that office. He will speak on the "International Labor Organizations at Geneva". This is a subject with which Mr. Simpson is well acquainted as a result of the time which he has served as Canada's representative at Geneva.

There is little that has not been published of the experience that Mr. Simpson has gained as a result of his relationship with labour organizations. It is rumoured also that he may favour his address tonight with references to the new policies that are being put forward at the present time by the Right Honourable R. B. Bennett. In any event the occasion will be one that should interest every student.

An American professor has discovered that an egg may be cooked on ultrashort waves! After five minutes the yolk is perfectly set, but not so the white, proving that the cooking proceeded from inside outwards. Knowledge thereby has been furthered in the therapeutic use of short waves, rather than in the art of cooking!

Dick Taylor Suffers Head Injuries When Struck by Ball Bat

Struck by a softball bat, which slipped from the grasp of the batter, Jack Cronin, Dick Taylor, well known Victoria College student, received a head injury while playing in the big gym at Hart House on Monday afternoon, which necessitated his removal to the Toronto General Hospital.

The accident occurred while the Victoria junior indoor ball team was practicing. Although Taylor was standing at the side of the gymnasium, about twenty feet from the batter, the untapped handle of the bat slipped from Cronin's grasp, and struck Taylor on the back of the head with terrific force. It was at first believed that the skull was fractured, but fortunately this was not so. The wound required six stitches to close it, but after spending the afternoon at the Toronto General Hospital, where he was rushed immediately after the accident, Taylor was brought back to the Burwash Hall infirmary, where he will remain for the next few days.

A member of the Victoria soccer team this year, and the runner-up in the tennis championship, Dick is a well-known and popular member of the college, and there will be general regret that he had to be the victim of so unfortunate an accident.

With the announcement of the Exchange Scholarships for 1935-6, a limited number of students at the University of Toronto have the opportunity of obtaining a year's scholarship at some other Canadian university. These scholarships, which are sponsored by the National Federation of Canadian University Students, enable students to study at an "exchange" university for one year without paying tuition fees or Students Union fees. The N.F.C.U.S. representatives on this campus are Sydney Hermant and E. A. MacDonald, B.A., and prospective applicants can obtain full details from them.

Any student, male or female, may apply if he is, at the time of his application, in the second year of his course or, in the case of five year courses, in

INDIAN HOME RULE CALLED MISNOMER

Massey Scholar Points Out Weaknesses in New Government

INDIAN FEELS MISTREATED

"The term home rule is a misnomer," stated Mr. L. R. Sethi, this year's Massey scholar from India, in commenting upon the bill recently passed at Westminster. "The scheme as it now has come out is a shade more reactionary than the white paper and is universally condemned by even the Indian moderates. General criticism is that it is an unnatural mixture of autocracy and of democracy."

Mr. Sethi pointed out that there are six angles from which it can be attacked: the uncertainty of federation; the future of Indian services reserved to the Secretary of State for India; the safeguards and special responsibilities take away most of the so-called self-government, and these safeguards are not in the interest of India but of England instead of protecting the lower from the aggressions of the upper classes; the finance minister has little control over the public purse (as in the Railway Board, which is under a separate commission); the average Indian feels that the pledges solemnly made in 1917 and remade and re-emphasized by Lord Irwin have not been fulfilled; and there is no place in the constitution for any element of growth.

"It was a glorious opportunity lost to give India dominion status instead of a makeshift non-elastic arrangement with no prospects of growth," was Mr. P. C. Addy's idea on the subject. Mr. Addy is also from India. He went on to say that more stress was laid on safeguards than on generosity, and that there is little chance for a people

Participate in Thrilling Chase Through Slippery City Streets

IS CAR THIEF

Crashing into Tree, Driver Leaps from Car and Escapes

Two University students, Les Rowntree, III U.C., and Bert Barnes, II U.C., came in for an unscheduled bit of excitement last night when the car in which they were driving home was commandeered by police to aid in a thrilling chase after a stolen car, through city streets. The chase ended only when the pursued man, in attempting to negotiate a sharp turn at the corner of Euclid and Ulster Ave., skidded on the slippery streets and crashed into a tree. The sole occupant of the car escaped down a lane off Ulster Ave., three shots fired by police failing to halt him.

Barnes told The Varsity that he and Rowntree were driving home from their fraternity at about nine-thirty last night along Harbord Street near Bathurst when a policeman ran out from the sidewalk and, jumping on the running board, ordered them to "follow that car". They chased it west on Harbord and followed it south, one block west of Bathurst to Ulster, where the fleeing car suddenly turned east. Attempting to cut back on Euclid to Harbord again, the speeding car went into a skid and crashed head on into a tree. The thief jumped out with the policeman and the two students not twenty-five feet behind, according to Barnes, and, defying the constable's threat to shoot, ran down a lane, and, vaulting a high fence, disappeared. Barnes told The Varsity that three shots were fired into the air during the chase.

Police early this morning had found "no trace of the thief".

HUMAN HAPPINESS IS GOAL IN SOVIET

Huge Sums Yearly on Social Insurance, Hospitals and Education

RUSSIAN FILMS EXPECTED

"Every action of the Soviet government contributes to human happiness," said Mr. J. Cowan last night to a capacity meeting of the Friends of the Soviet Union. "Five billion rubles are devoted yearly to social insurance, hospitals and education."

Mr. Cowan returned from a complete tour of Russia just three weeks ago and since that time has been busy with mass meetings in various Canadian cities. He found the cultural standards of fellow delegates below that of people visited. After a four hour sight seeing excursion during which the events and important locations of the revolution had been shown and discussed in chronological order, the guide asked if there were any questions. "Yes," said the British delegate, "where do you buy liquor?"

Before the reformation the country was "backward, church-ridden and corrupt. There was not even the freedom of speech that we are given in this country. Fifty per cent of the people were criminals, beggars, prostitutes."

"The Soviet Union today is like a building under construction still concealed by the scaffolding. This is gradually being removed and as it is taken down we see the beauty of the structure beneath," continued Mr. Cowan.

What of the Journalist

A veritable tradition has arisen at this University to the effect that most editors of The Varsity, with the exception of theological students, make a pathetic display in their academic work, fail miserably in their examinations, and never graduate, due to the pressure of their activities in the journalistic field. Theologians seem to escape this curse for the simple reason that the effort expended in editorial work is closely allied to "Preaching Sermons" and generally discursing for the benefit or detriment of their fellow men, and practice in one field materially assists the other. For the remainder, who are not theologically inclined, there is much to be said, and much to be excused.

Journalism, as a profession, is to a large extent an art that is inborn, and cannot be completely acquired. Those who naturally possess even latent abilities along this line may well be destined for an important niche in society—in keeping with the artistic or musical genius, their talents in a literary field are a valuable asset to their fellows. And while musical, artistic, and similar talents are greatly encouraged, and definitely trained and developed, a literary ability, particularly in the field of journalism—with its many branches, is not only left to struggle along as it may, but very often definitely hindered.

There is a natural tendency for those with some journalistic ability to gravitate to the staff of the college paper. However, many who have a conscientious desire to learn the intricacies of journalism and improve their literary style are deterred from this end by the rumour of the undesirable results that follow the sacrifice of time from their strictly academic interests. Among those who join the staff, and especially those who attain positions of responsibility, there are many who feel that they are regarded with a questioning eye by members of the faculty, and singled out as those who are not sufficiently devoted to their studies. From a purely academic standpoint there may be some justification for this attitude; from the side of the well being of the student there is none. Is a Varsity reporter "Wasting his time?" Obviously the answer is no!

It is not our intention to plead the cause of a regular course in journalism. Such a course would immediately hold itself open to the criticism that is directed against a commercial education in the secondary schools—in that the tendency would be for a student to deprive himself of a broad education in an effort to grasp certain technical details. There are already a number of courses available that would be a decided asset to some field of journalism, indeed practically every course lends itself to this end to some extent. But to come bluntly to the point—no allowance is made in the curriculum for those who desire to participate in a study of journalism, no encouragement given to students with literary ability to join the staff of The Varsity. Usually the opposite is the case. While those who take military studies or join the C.O.T.C. are given credit for it, and those who partake in athletics enjoy a similar dispensation from physical training, NOTHING is done for those who join The Varsity.

At the recent College Editor's convention at Washington, President Roosevelt proudly boasted to the students of his work as onetime managing editor of the Harvard Review. It is quite justifiable to believe that the experience in organization gain-

THE JAPANESE QUESTION

The province of British Columbia contains a large population of Canadian born Japanese. In the eyes of many people in this province they are a menace to our national welfare. In order to give expression to this idea they are put under certain disabilities.

They are not given the franchise in this province, although that right is granted to them in all the other provinces. Withholding of the franchise is no great matter in itself, yet it is a very odious form of discrimination.

Why should there be such discrimination? These native born Japanese speak our language, are educated in our schools and universities. Many of them have no ties with the home of their fathers. They were born in Canada, and yet they are not given the same rights that are accorded to Greek Canadians or German Canadians, or Canadians of any other racial strain.

We talk sentimentally about oppressed minorities in central Europe, yet we never stop to think that unbridled prejudice may cause such a situation in our own province. The Canadian Japanese may not vote, they may not indulge in certain professions, they are treated with disdain by many of our educated white barbarians. All these things they suffer, but when it comes to paying taxes or fighting for Canada is there any discrimination? Not at all. The Canadian Japanese is quite as good as his white brother.

Many uninformed people justify our attitude towards the Canadian Japanese by declaring that naturalized foreigners have no rights at all in Japan. Here they are quite wrong, as is shown authoritatively by Mr. Sherwood Lett, the well-known Vancouver barrister.

A Japanese born or naturalized European is not allowed to hold public office in Japan, but except for this disability he is given equal status with natives, including exercise of the franchise.

If we in British Columbia want to show that we are as enlightened as the Japanese, we should accord an equal franchise privilege to Canadian born Orientals in this province.

The Japanese problem cannot be solved by ignoring it. There is a large and growing body of Canadian born Japanese in the province. Do we want them to be our friends or our enemies in the future? Naturally we want them to be our friends. If so we must give them a square deal. If such is done the time will quickly come when their standard of living will reach the same height as our own, after which the Oriental problem will solve itself.

ed, many wide contacts made, the broadened outlook obtained, and the literary training received in this connection played a major part in the success that he has achieved. Numerous similar experiences among prominent men serve to substantiate this belief.

Should the University of Toronto consider that time spent in journalistic pursuits is not worthy of consideration? May we respectfully call this question to the attention of the Senate. Surely it merits a careful consideration. It is quite conceivable that if some suitable action were taken, the paper itself would be greatly improved by the influx of embryo writers, and at the same time considerable benefit received by the students who would thus be given reasonable encouragement to develop their natural talents to a degree of usefulness.

This is in no way an apology for our academic shortcomings—it is a request, and, we believe, a logical one. Will it be treated as such?

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Sketch Room

Mr. C. W. Jeffreys must be a name familiar to every Canadian student for who has not enjoyed his illustrations for our history books? His vigorous pen-work has illustrated nearly every phase in Canadian history and illustrated them remarkably well. He is one of the few artists who can create an historical document that is correct and yet extremely interesting.

We see so much of Mr. Jeffreys' black and white drawings that we are apt to overlook his powers as a water-colourist. There are a few very good landscape studies in this exhibition, especially No. 9 and 17.

Mr. Jeffreys must be congratulated, too, on his mural scheme for the Royal Ontario Museum. Anyone who has not seen the murals, the studies for which are included in this show, might well take an hour off to see them.

Mr. Jeffreys will for long be known as Canada's great chronicler and a fine artist.

Let's Go Places

Bing Crosby croons his way to another success in the film Here is My Heart, playing at the Imperial this week. It isn't entirely crooning that "makes" Crosby this time though. In fact he only does two numbers, both well known to radio listeners by now, but he handles a semi-humorous role in an interesting way. His is the part of a millionaire (who made his fortune by crooning on chain broadcasts) in search of diversion. He finds it in wooing an exiled Russian princess living with her amusing coterie in a fashionable Monte Carlo hotel in quarters that can never pay for except by selling their few remaining valuables. Crosby begins by buying out the hotel and posing as the princess' servant.

You'll laugh at Crosby as he gets out of one difficulty into another and at the princess' relations as they try to keep up the old "front".

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

We understand that the Canadian government at the present time is working on a film, the title of which is "Lest We Forget". This film as we understand it is to be compiled from extracts of less gruesome scenes taken from thousands of feet of film actually secured during the waging of that terrific struggle, 1914-18. Supposedly the idea is to bring before the general public the horrible atrocities of such a combat and to instil in the hearts of our people the consequence and futility of such.

About a year ago, one of our downtown papers printed a daily series of four full pages taken from the actual scenes of combat. Undoubtedly this

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

This weather we seem to be having rather cramps any plans about hockey. St. Hilda's had hoped for a practice today but it has had to be postponed. However, as soon as possible the Blue and Grey outfit hope to get out on the ice and work up the form necessary to wrest the title from Vic. St. Mike's also have been thinking about hockey. They have rounded up what they hope will make a first-rate aggregation. However, since they have not yet had a practice it is impossible to say how successful their tentative selection will be.

Vic is putting two teams into the fray, as you know, and can be depended on to fight to the finish to retain the interfaculty championship. But they will be getting some important competition from U.C. who with three intercollegiate players and several members of the '34 U.C. group have a fine nucleus for the two squads which they are entering. Before the week is over there is to be a meeting of the Hockey Club which will make definite arrangements and get schedules, etc., in order.

It may seem to be needless repetition to mention swimming again today. But really it is very necessary that anyone who has the least aspiration towards making her faculty team must get started immediately. In swimming, perhaps more than any other sport we feature here, it is the steady grind which counts. Spasmodic practices are really no good, although, of course, the odd swim is lots of fun and all that. Then there is the financial consideration (not that we wish to appear to be worshipping the "Almighty Dollar", but still in these days money is pretty vital)—when you have paid your $4.00 you really owe it to yourself to get all the value possible from it. So come early and avoid the rush which we hope will be invading the pool the last few days before the meet.

The weekly round-robin which U.C. began last term as part of their badminton practices, will be postponed this week since fraternity rushing is taking up a lot of time. However, they can well afford to slip up this once since they are already several practices ahead of the other colleges entering the tournament. Agnes Gardner gave a real badminton pep talk before Christmas so that the girls have come back keen to get started as soon as regular practice hours have been settled upon.

BLUE BASKETEERS MEET WEST END

Three Games Here Tomorrow Night with West End and East York

On Wednesday night the junior and intermediate basketball squads play West End Y.M.C.A. and East York at Hart House, while the fast travelling seniors take on West End in the night cap.

The juniors won their first game of the season when they defeated Broadview 26-23. Charley Krakauer will be out to strengthen the team defensively and is expected to team up with Walter MacGregor, while P. C. Anderson and Cooper will form the second defence. Coach McCutcheon has excellent material for jumping centres with Harlock, W. Green and J. Roberts on tap. Molson and Nels Hogg will complete one forward line with Olch and Denn as reliefs.

The intermediates dropped their first two games but promise plenty of action from now on. Himel and Harry Newman, captain of the 1933-4 squad, are turning out and will form one defence alternately with the two flashy Americans, Sullivan and Carey. Kaplan, a former senior, will be a welcome addition and should go well with Vanderlick, Magwood, Gibson and Kinsey.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Tonight the Blue pucksters will engage the Ports who hail from Port Colborne in their semi-annual feud at Varsity Arena. The Ports along with Varsity share the honour of being the most unsuccessful team in the senior O.H.A. circuit. Tonight they will come to some conclusion as to which is the better team. In their last encounter at Port Colborne, the students won the game on points, but the old-fashioned officials insisted on paying off in points. Under such rules the Ports won the encounter by a two goal margin. Tonight they will seek to repeat this victory.

Tonight the Varsity hockeyists will make an effort to prove to their faithful following that they have acquired the habit of winning games. While they have been successful in winning on foreign fields they have yet to treat their faithful followers to a victory. This we anticipate this evening. The battle this evening should be a standout. Many of the classic encounters of hockey have occurred between the tail enders.

Friday evening the rowing crew will assemble in the Great Hall in their last gathering before beginning the grind for next year. And the purpose will be to partake of their annual bean feed. Not that this is an event of the mediocre variety but rather an outstanding event. Lorne Gales, who for the last four years has held down the position of stroke of the McGill crew was scheduled to be on hand to receive a Barber Pole as an indication of the service which he has performed in so stoutly resisting the advances of Varsity in the past several years. However, he will have to receive the gift by proxy, mail, or some other method as he will not be in town on the occasion of the banquet.

With regard to the volleyball situation, Varsity has entered a team in the City League, which is composed of ten teams. Practice hours are being held this week on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at Hart House, and it is to be hoped that a goodly number will turn out. This league is a new one for Varsity and with plenty of support should develop into something really interesting. The premier contest will be staged on Saturday at Broadview Y. at 2 p.m.

OFFER PHYSICS LECTURES FOR ADVANCED STUDENTS

A bulletin from Mr. Dunlop's office announces slight changes in the programme for the second term of the University Extension. Several physics lectures will be delivered on Friday evenings at 8 o'clock in Room 43 of the Physics Building. The purpose of these lectures is to offer to those not directly engaged in advanced physics an account of modern work in these fields. All of these lectures will be illustrated by slides and experiments. The topics of these lectures are as follows:

- Jan. 11: Professor John Satterly. The Early Days of Radioactivity.
- Jan. 18: Dr. H. F. Batho. The New Radioactivity.
- Jan. 25: Dr. H. W. Kohl. The Fundamental Principles of Electron Optics.
- Feb. 1: Dr. W. H. Kohl. The Braun Tube or Cathode Ray Tube.
- Feb. 8: Dr. W. H. Kohl. The Electron Microscope.
- Feb. 15: Dr. Sant Dushman. Surface Tension and Cohesion Phenomena in Liquids.

speaker whom the club hope to obtain is mayor-elect "Jimmie" Simpson. The club will start the new year with an entirely new slate of officers. N. M. Pivnick, S. F. Rae, and A. C. Smith, who last term formed the executive of the club, have all been forced to resign their positions this term because of the pressure of their studies. The meeting for the election of new officers will be held some time this week. Mr. Proust stated that he had hoped to have Dr. Lorna Cotton, well-known C.C.F. worker from Peterboro present at the inaugural meeting, but due to illness, she would be unable to attend.

"There's plenty of hope for a C.C.F. Club in the University," Mr. Proust predicted. "With the coming of a dominion election the subject of politics is becoming more interesting, and although the club was formed here just last year, it has already made encouraging progress, and we are looking forward to a successful term."

Cheerfulness is worth most when there seems to be the least excuse for it.

S.C.M. ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR SPRING

Reception for Rev. Beverly Oaten to be Held Thursday

CONFERENCE IN FEBRUARY

"The programmes for the S.C.M. are drawn up by the individual groups on the campus for themselves," stated Rev. L. A. Dixon, Students' Secretary of the S.C.M. to The Varsity yesterday, "and these groups are continuing the programmes which they have begun in the fall. The Victoria College group is carrying on with the series of lectures on social problems and the Medical group is continuing with their series on matters of medical interest, while the University College members are engaged in social service work, meeting regularly to discuss the progress they have been making in that direction. On Thursday evening, a reception will be held in the Women's Union for Rev. Beverly Oaten, the new national secretary of the movement, to which invitations have been issued to certain graduates and professors to attend. A week-end conference will take place some time in February, but details for that have not been decided," he stated.

EXCHANGE PLAN AGAIN ANNOUNCED

the second or third year. It is a condition of each appointment that the Exchange Scholar must return, at the conclusion of his scholarship year, to complete his course at his "home" university. Consequently a sophomore taking the usual four-year Arts course may be awarded a scholarship for his third year; in the case of five-year courses the scholarship may be awarded either for the third or fourth year. The scholarships are particularly easy to arrange in the Arts pass course.

An Exchange Scholar is expected to be a representative student of his "home" university in every way. It is not necessary that he should have a first-class academic standing but he must be a competent student who will be able to enter freely into the life of the "exchange" university without fear of class-room consequences.

About sixty-two students have received Exchange Scholarships during the past six years. This year a total of seven are enjoying the privileges of the Exchange Plan—one at McGill, one at Queen's, one at British Columbia, and four at Toronto. In most cases the saving in tuition fees more than balances the transportation costs involved. Applications must be handed in to the N.F.C.U.S. representative before March 1st, 1935.

Inconsequence

"Good morning—Did you use Pear's Soap?"

Calm yourself. This is not a reflection on your personal habits, neither is it an advertisement. Sung to the tune of the Doxology, these were the words which the males of the gay nineties greeted the entrance of their co-eds to a nine o'clock lecture.

Did you ever hear how the Hart House Songsters originated? We never did ourselves, but we have discovered what seems to be their great-grandfather. Not content with serenading the ladies at all times and in all places, the men of the nineties serenaded their professors. That interval, between the time when the professor should arrive and the time at which he actually does make an appearance, was filled, profitably for all, by the rendering of Litania, The Man Who Has Plenty of Good Peanuts, and other ancient ditties. The professor's arrival at the door was the signal for a grand finale, veryorte. They liked (?) it.

The present depression might be a good time to renew this good old custom. To start the day with—

I don't know why I'm happy, so happy, so happy.

I don't know why I'm happy; I only know I am . . .

would put everyone in a good humour; or would it?

Imagine the lecturer arriving in answer to the question: "What, no Mickey Mouse?" or just as the class rolled out that last "I love you . . ." We leave you to think the rest of them up yourselves. No one would be so silly as to try it out, so we don't mind making suggestions.

Another quaint custom of those high and far-off times, was to walk in line from lecture to lecture. Picture, if you can, the serious bearded students, of the last century, parading solemnly from class to class in single file. Yet we are assured that this was the custom. In a report of the proceedings of the Women's Literary Society, which we ran across in an old Varsity, it says they "met outside, so that they could walk into the meeting decently and in order," or words to that effect. One thinks of the madstrom which represents a number of people going somewhere at the same time, these days, and marvels at the changes time has wrought.

And by the way—apropos of the "first Libel suit which The Varsity has had in fifty years", readers of The Varsity may be interested to know that there actually was a Libel suit threatened at one time, between The Varsity and the principal of one of the Toronto Collegiates, but it was dropped after the Editor had personally tendered his sincere and respectful apologies.

The Hope Chest

"Hope Springs Eternal . . . . ."

By P. A. Gardner

We are crazy as the Mad Hatter; we are not quite crazy enough to advocate birth-control, the obvious basis of all social reform, but still we are pretty crazy.

Because we recognize the bankruptcy of the present social order. No one in this world but a madman ever recognizes any patent truth until the history book which outlines it has grown dusty with the centuries.

Because we advocate the socialization of all economic activity, when it is obvious that the most ardent desire of nine-tenths of human beings is to revel in the delights of slavery, whereby they are enabled to watch with glee the disillusionment and dissolution of those who have no productivity whatsoever.

Because we advocate the socialization of all wealth, when nothing could be plainer than that nature forms the great majority of men to live by the elements and a few cabbage leaves, but only a very few to appreciate and enjoy the refinements and luxuries of silk and caviare.

Because we urge the repeal of all legislation restricting freedom of speech: press, assembly or association, when we have learnt from the French and Russian revolutions that freedom of speech and thought tend to cause the great majority to see their situation through the evil glass of intelligence and to come to doubt the actuality of the aforementioned Laws of Nature — which are of course indisputably true; and most especially because every truthful historian now agrees that Section 98 of our Criminal Code is an almost verbatim transcription of the eleventh commandment delivered to Moses from Mount Sinai, which was lost for years. (It is almost a commonplace, of course, to refer to the footnote to the Hendeclaque, which was also lost, or, as some contend, deliberately suppressed by early and unenlightened Christians. This footnote, as everyone now knows, added to the commandment "Thou shalt have none other gods but Me" the words "and Mammon.")

Because we advocate academic freedom of speech, when it is well-known that, even were it permitted, few if any of our academic oracles would say anything anyway; and because it would cruelly rob our blue-coated boys of their innocent pastime of ransacking apartments in their owners' absence and of confiscating documents written in Foreign Languages, in the hope that they may contain juicy excerpts from La Vie Parisienne.

Because we advocate the removal of interference with student publications and organizations, when not only the University authorities and the students' representatives, but also the great majority of the students themselves have made it perfectly clear that the last thing they desire is a broad culture based on that unbiased skeptical survey of ideas which would inevitably result from such a removal of interference.

Because we advocate the reconstruction of our educational system, in which reconstruction the unheard-of new objective of social advance would replace the traditional one of individual success, when it is tacitly agreed by all those having a hand in the government and education of this country that individual success is the ideal of achievement.

Because we suggest the cultivation of a universal outlook, when the I.O. D.E., the Canadian Authors' Association, the Orange Lodge and Chief Draper still hold their jingoistic jamborees in our midst.

Because we advocate the abolition of armaments as a means of settling international disputes, when everyone knows that a huge portion of our national expenditure is devoted to defence — and if we eliminated defence, how could we ever keep our National Debt up to scratch?

Because we urge unemployment insurance, when we know perfectly well that our poor manufacturer and our other capitalist concerns are having a hard enough time now to exist in the style to which they have been accustomed without having to contribute a fraction of one per cent of their hard-earned profits to aiding their ungrateful slaves.

Because we advocate equal rights of citizenship for all residents of Canada, when everyone knows that Pollocks sleep in their boots, and that it is quite impossible to educate them or their children to do otherwise.

Because we urge active student participation in public life, when it is recognized all over this country that boys are sent to the University to teach them to sell bonds and organize corporations, and that they have no time to waste on intellectual or social activity.

For all these reasons we are obviously crazy, but most especially because we have the foolish presumption to display our vulgar zeal in a cultural centre where humid hyper-aesthetes, would-be Wildes, but sadly devoid of Wilde's originality, penetration and wit, murmur languidly, "How I envy them their enthusiasm!" and where venerable ecclesiastico-politicians comment with colossal chuckles, "Dear me! they seem to be trying to reconstruct the universe!"

HUMAN HAPPINESS

IS GOAL IN SOVIET

Factories all operate 24 hours a day, some in 4 shifts. On the 1st of January all wages were increased 10 per cent.

Children are cared for from before birth to the age of eighteen. The Soviet plans one and a half million crèches to be built by 1937. From 8-18 education is compulsory—children are given two meals a day at school. If a teacher tries to whip a child, he is not only dismissed but has to answer to a people's court.

Policemen do not wave batons but carry purses round their waist. If a cigarette butt is dropped on the street the careless person is fined one ruble on the spot and given a receipt. The problem of jay walkers is met with a three ruble fine and the policemen have no trouble collecting. There are no prisons in our sense of the word. There is still crime but no criminal that the Soviet does not hope to reform by change of environment. Repeaters are blots on the system and organized in communes with their wives and children and paid 100 per cent union wages. The leaders and foremen of these communes are now all ex-criminals.

The F.S.U. expects films and a delegate from Russia shortly. They are also holding a Russian evening this Friday night at Pythian Castle Hall and an interesting programme has been arranged.

The famous mineral springs at Bath (England) produce 500,000 gallons of medicated water every day. Until the recent drought this water was drunk only by invalids; then it was put into general use.

Very often, too often, sophistication, which ought to be by convention a virtue supplying a finishing touch to one's nature, is interpreted into a repugnant, acquired boredom.

ART IS DISCUSSED

Painting, embroidery and wood-carving made remarkable progress under the talented and willing hands of the French Canadians. Their work was so much in demand for church decorations that at times crises arose—crises which find no place in our 1935 world—crises where the demand was greater than the supply.

But forces began to creep in which finally destroyed French Canadian art. Italian influence substituted plaster work for the French wood-carving and the Gothic style replaced the French in architecture and the French Canadians discarded their own finer art for these two. They let it die an almost inglorious death. Dr. Barbeau feels, however, that Quebec crafts could easily be revived again, if due encouragement were given the many fine French Canadian craftsmen whose talents are at present being left unused.

Besides being a very popular event among the present members of the club, the at-home is regularly attended by large numbers of graduates and former members of the club. This year a large attendance is already assured from Queen's, McGill and Western. One of the prominent graduate members to be present will be Stew Green, former president of the club and now assistant to the advertising manager for the Chrysler Motor Car Corporation. Several members of the faculty will also be present at the gathering.

paper had the same idea in view as the Canadian government.

However, in our humble judgment it would seem to us that they are attempting to educate the wrong class as to the horrors of war. Who is it says whether Canada should go to war? Is it the people? Is it you and I? On the contrary, no, but rather these self-same governments such as are sponsoring this film. They are the ones who will decide whether 60,000 lives will be sacrificed to appease the cravings of a War Lord. Don't you think it would be just as effective to dress up these officials in a uniform and send them forth to settle the issue at stake while we, the common people, occupy a seat in the bleachers?

Perhaps it would be more to the point if these officials in some of their idle moments took a casual glance at these pictures, and absorb some of the practices which they are endeavouring to thrust on the common people. When these truths are brought home to them and when they fully realize the suffering and untold misery that follows in the wake of a war, they will not be too hasty in deciding what steps to take.

PROFESSORSHIP REQUIRES UNDIVIDED ATTENTION

Politics Create Biased Opinion
President Cody Urges

OETRIMENTAL TO WIT

Nothing More Precious Than Academic Traditions in College

"It is essential that a university professor have an unbiased opinion on any political issue," Dr. Cody told The Varsity when approached regarding the new ruling in Alberta which prohibits members of the faculty and staff of the University of Alberta from taking part in politics. "Immediately upon accepting candidature for any platform he speaks only in the interests of his particular side of the issue," the President added, and continued to explain that a university professor will have more wit if he gives judgments as an expert in his own department rather than as a partisan of any party.

"I don't see how a professor can attend properly to business and at the same time be a member of the legislature. A university professor is an ordinary citizen and expresses his views but in addition if he is in a state university there is a further obligation laid upon him to put whatever limitations his relations to the university involve, upon his freedom of speech. Furthermore, the university is the only place in the community where you can fairly expect people to seek for the true interpretation of facts without bias. This in itself forbids the professor from becoming a partisan of any party."

There may be a distinction drawn between a state university such as University College and one which is independent such as Victoria, which is privately endowed. Dr. W. T. Brown, principal of Victoria College, stated when interviewed: "It has frequently been asserted that in state universities the professors are considered servants of the state and therefore they have no right to take part in party politics. ### NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Rome—Italy-French determination not to recognize Germany's rearmament was reaffirmed here yesterday as Pierre Laval sped back toward Paris, carrying with him the agreements he and Benito Mussolini signed during Laval's four-day visit. An official communique gives details of the new accords, which provide for French concessions to Italy in Africa and pledge the two nations to mutual efforts in the cause of Europe's peace.

Flemington, N.J.—Bruno Hauptmann, on trial for the murder of the kidnapped Lindbergh baby, was identified yesterday by an elderly neighbour of the Lindberghs as the man in a "dirty green car," containing a ladder, whom he saw from his porch the day of the kidnapping; and by the cab driver who eleven days later, carried a note to Dr. John (Jafise) Condon.

Moscow—Twenty-three persons died and seventy-nine were injured in the wreck of the Leningrad-Tiflis express last Sunday, it was disclosed yesterday after an official survey of one of the worst accidents in Soviet railway history.

Toronto—Howard Ferguson has lost his K.C. The honour which was bestowed upon Canada's present High Commissioner to Britain some 27 years ago, has been taken from him by the Hepburn Government.

NOTABLE SCHOLAR TO SPEAK HERE

Dr. Carter of B.C. to Meet
Members of Chemical Association

OPEN INVITATION

The first meeting of the Toronto Chemical Association for 1935 will take place tonight in the Chemical Building at 8 p.m. when Dr. Neal M. Carter will speak. Dr. Carter, who is the director of the Pacific Fisheries Experimental Station at Prince Rupert, B.C., will give an address on the subject, "The Chemical Work of the Pacific Coast Stations of the Biological Board of Canada."

The speaker of the evening is a graduate of the University of British Columbia and obtained his Ph.D. at McGill. He has held several travelling scholarships and spent some time studying at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Dresden. It is expected that he will deal for the most part with the chemical work of his own station. He will probably discuss the chemical aspects of the oceanographic work in which he was engaged for three years at the Pacific Biological Station at Nanaimo, B.C.

The Toronto Chemical Association, which is made up of several local bodies, including the University Chemical Club, has extended an invitation to all students who are interested in Chemistry to attend the meeting tonight.

First Round in Competition
Scheduled for Next Week

Yesterday at one o'clock in the Junior Common Room, the third year teams in the Robynette trophy debates decided to hold their first round next Tuesday the fifteenth at four p.m. The subject for debate will be: "Resolved that censorship of the movies is desirable."

At present it is undecided if there will be four or five teams, but in the event of an odd one it will debate the winner of the round. E. A. McCann and Murray Levine are taking the affirmative in the first debate opposing Jack and Mervin Mirsky. J. J. Ozanne and A. C. Bruce for the affirmative are against C. T. Bissel and B. Shaeffer.

JULIAN HUXLEY TO LECTURE HERE WHILE ON TOUR

Eminent English Scientist Has Choice Selection of Topics

DISTINGUISHED AUTHOR

Takes Up Important Office Upon His Return to England

During the coming March Toronto is to receive a distinguished guest in the person of Julian Huxley, the well-known English scientist. The Varsity has been able to secure an outline of his projected trip from Major Ney of the Overseas Education Council.

Mr. Huxley will arrive in Canada about January 16th. He intends to leave immediately on a lecture tour of the United States of about six weeks' duration. His arrival in Toronto is scheduled for next March. During his stay here Mr. Huxley will give a number of lectures of interest to the general public as well as to university students. The lectures are to take place either in Convocation Hall or possibly in Massey Hall.

"Scientific Research and Social Service" is the title of his most important address, in which he will attempt to relate scientific methods to this field. A lecture on "Ants and Men," a subject with which he as an eminent biologist is particularly familiar, should prove especially interesting. Mr. Huxley will also discuss "Health and Civilization."

Julian Huxley, a graduate of Balliol College, Oxford, was at one time a resident of the United States, holding a position as lecturer at the Rice Institute, Houston, Texas. Of late years he has been a member of the faculty of King's College, London. He resigned this position in order to become secretary of the Royal Zoological Society, which office he will take up on his return to England next April.

Mr. Huxley is the author of a very large number of books among which "Essays of a Biologist," "If I were Dictator" and "A Scientist Among the Soviets" are perhaps the best known. He is a brother of the English author and scientist, Aldous Huxley.

Band Prepares for Annual Concert—Expect Guest Artists

The executive of the Blue and White band are hard at work on preparations for their annual concert, which will be held in the latter part of February, according to reports received by The Varsity yesterday. Efforts are being made to make this year's presentation somewhat of a feature among campus activities, and while the members of the band were not prepared to disclose their final plans, it is understood that something of an entirely new and spectacular nature will be included in the programme.

As in previous years, Captain John Slater, V.D., will conduct the Blue and White musicians, and is at present rehearsing a number of selections especially for the concert, which will include a programme of classical and popular numbers, as well as the campus marches featured during the rugby season. It is expected that guest artists will assist the band on this occasion.

STUDENT TEAM MEETS DEFEAT

Blue and White Hockeyists
Fail to Win in Current
O.H.A. Series

FINAL SCORE 2-1

By B. J. McGuire

The black shadow of defeat which has dogged the footsteps of the Blue and White hockey team in their current O.H.A. series, last night loomed up again as Port Colborne recorded their second triumph of the season over the student team. The score read 2-1 as the final bell brought a cease to the proceedings after a rather uninteresting display of hockey.

Little indeed was there to enthuse about in last evening's performance. The first period failed to get either club out of a walk. Things pepped up for a brief interval in the second, while the third after a rather mediocre fifteen minutes was productive of five minutes of unusually interesting, if not clever hockey.

Large Audience Addressed at Meeting of University College Literary and Athletic Society—International Labour Organizations Discussed

GREAT PRIVILEGE AFFORDED STUDENTS

Heartily Praises Work of Geneva Labour Organization —Accounts for Its Slow Action
—A Language Difficulty

Vigorously assailing the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett's new type of capitalism, and characterizing his recent speeches as "Definitely false", James Simpson, newly-elected mayor of Toronto, addressed a large audience at the University College Literary and Athletic Society meeting last night. Mr. Simpson also dealt at length with the International Labour Organizations at Geneva.

Referring to Prime Minister Bennett's speeches, he said, "The elimination of the profit system from our great public concerns, and the success which has resulted, has definitely proved the falsity of recent attempts by our Prime Minister to perpetuate capitalism by subterfuges."

Although Mayor Simpson's subject for the evening was "International Labour Organizations at Geneva," he wavered greatly from that theme. At great length he bore it upon those present that they were the controllers of the world in future generations and warned against pools of stagnation. At one point he said that he had been converted to the process of thinking that "Wealth and its accumulation were the greatest barriers to intelligent and progressive advance in the world."

"You young men," said Simpson, "are greatly privileged by your education at this University. What interests me is that which you will know when you get out. The difficulties to be overcome in Canada make our students among the most skillful in the world."

In describing the International Labor Organization, the mayor was profuse in his praise. Its work was slow he admitted, but that could not be helped. "There are four hundred delegates in the organization," he stated, "representing some thirty-eight different countries. Suggestions and facts about conditions existing, come to them from all over the world. The organization examines these and reports upon them making such suggestions as they con- (Continued on Page 4)

MUSICAL EDUCATION BEING NEGLECTED

Secondary Schools Lack the Necessary Instruction in the Fine Art

NEW YORK SENSES NEED

"It is a sin that the study of music is not given a more prominent place in our high schools," Dr. H. A. Fricker told The Varsity yesterday. "Disregarding the individual, the lack of musical instruction in our secondary schools is a great loss to the community," he continued.

New York has sensed this need and at present is advocating the establishment of a conservatory of music with courses recognized as a major requirement for entrance to college.

Mr. George H. Gardin of New York and director of music in the public schools there has advanced the idea of founding a high school of music under the supervision of the State Department and Board of Education in which music would be given the attention which other subjects receive. #### LOAN FUND POPULAR DRAWN ON TO LIMIT

"Many undergraduates are taking advantage of the Loan Fund provided by the Students' Administrative Council this year," The Varsity learned yesterday in an interview with Mr. E. A. Macdonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Council.

"Many applications have been received," Mr. Macdonald stated, "but we can't say yet whether loans will be granted for all these applications, because no interviews have yet been held. It is too early yet to give any definite information, but it is quite likely that the whole of the fifteen hundred dollars will be used."

BLUE BASKETEERS BATTLE TONIGHT

Will Meet West End Y.M.C.A.
In Senior Big Six Encounter

CLIMAX OF TRIPLE-HEADER

Lew Hayman's league-leading band of Blue basketeers meets the gold and purple clad quintet from West End Y.M.C.A. in a Senior Big Six encounter at Hart House tonight. This fixture will climax a triple-header in which the Blue junior and intermediate squads will tackle East York and West End respectively.

On the face of it, tonight's game should be a set-up for the fast-traveling Blues as West End have yet to figure in the win column. Last year's Y.M.C.A. senior champions have shown none of the form that has kept them in the forefront of Toronto basketball activities for many years due, in part, to the depletion of their ranks by some of their outstanding stars in past years, notably Gillespie and "Pud" Wilson. Nevertheless a team boasting stars of the calibre of Butler, Goble, Baird, Paterson and Hedges may be expected to give a good account of itself as the Blue squad will attest after being hard pressed to pull out a 37-28 victory over the Y squad in the first meeting (Continued on Page 3)

A Simplified Calendar

The latest issue of the University of Toronto Monthly carries an article by Mr. J. R. Gilley, Comptroller of Hart House, expounding the benefits to be derived from the adoption of a system of calendar reform. Mr. Gilley has taken a great deal of interest in the question of calendar simplification, as a member of the Rational Calendar Association of Canada.

The objective of the Rational Calendar Association is the adoption, through the League of Nations, of a new standard calendar which undoubtedly would simplify accounting practices in the business world. There are two particular types of improved calendar suggested, one with thirteen months of twenty-eight days each, and the other with twelve months, each quarter containing 91 days.

Much has been written in the last few years on the subject of calendar revision, and much more will be written. At present a great deal of effort is being made to swing the larger churches over to the idea, in the hope that a simplified calendar may be introduced in most countries of the world in 1939.

Whether or not this is possible we would not venture to say, but it is a subject which any student will find to be worth some time and study. Improvement in our present poorly-balanced and irregular calendar system is bound to come sooner or later, but it will not come about until public opinion is awakened sufficiently to make its presence known. Numerous efforts have been made since 1900 to reform the calendar system, and at no time have conditions seemed more favourable than at present. The suggestions, on general principles, seem to us to be sound. We wish them every success.

Idle Criticisms of the University

The time has undoubtedly come for a clarification of the position of the universities in the life of the nation. The idea apparently lingers in the minds of some people that the universities are merely instrumentalities for the inculcation in the minds of students of fixed patterns of thought in accordance with traditionally accepted viewpoints. Not long since the charge was made against the professors of the University of Alberta that their teachings were anti-Christian. More recently we read that the professors of the University of British Columbia have been berated for teaching the principles of Communism to their students.

It has been pointed out many times that the purpose of the university is to promote discussion, thought and research in order to facilitate the endless search for truth, and to arrive at a better and fuller understanding of man and nature. It seems, however, that some people (and not necessarily the uneducated) either will not or cannot recognize the simple necessity of this policy and purpose. And if that purpose is to be at all approximated, it is essential that every possible point of view—communist, or capitalistic, Christian or un-Christian, orthodox or radical, new or old—be clearly and dispassionately presented and discussed by professors and students.

The facile complacency with which these critics of teaching in the university arrogate unto themselves the omniscient power of knowing infallibly which schools of thought or attitudes of mind are

'TWIXT TWO

Dear Phyllis,

What is the matter with the scientists at the south end of the campus? People up around the Junior Common Room can't figure out why they never see their friends, the scientists, debating or running for office in the Lit. One of these Public Men wrote an article about it in the last U.C. magazine. He referred to our duties as Canadian citizens and rather doubtfully to our duties as students at a state supported institution! But he obtained the greatest glee in referring to the mental perversity of people who refuse to dirty their hands with politics. (I have it all down pat, because I happened to look up the magazine the other day.)

I believe, all the same, that the scientist is quite right, when he refuses to have anything to do with politics unless it becomes a more rational method of settling things. After working in a lab all day, it is rather hard lines to be asked to go into ecstasies about a ranting platform speech; in the lab nothing is taken for granted—everything must be proved; in politics, as far as an impartial person can see, there is absolutely no way of getting at truth—it is just one big bluff.

And then, after all, science is a hard taskmistress; she requires all of one's time. The BandM-ers do very well to remain as broad-minded as they are; I know several of them and they all make it a principle to keep their work hidden when talking out of hours. There aren't very many Poli-Sci men who could say as much, or even that their knowledge of natural science is as great as the scientists' knowledge of economics.

If you take the trouble to ask a bunch of science men why they don't go in for public life, you'll find that they all say (except the communists among them) that the whole business is just too futile for words, unless you are in a position to make a living from the business: you know, graft and what not. Now, isn't it the truth? —Ted.

true and which are false, which are good and which are bad, is irritating in the extreme. Their usual practice is to take on particular and isolated expression of thought which happens to be contrary to their own, dissociate it from the whole field of knowledge and learning, stamp it as a distinguishing feature of the entire teaching staff, and condemn the professors, the students and the university accordingly. Such practices and the people who indulge in them—the people who so unquestionably know what is good or bad for others and who seek to enforce their own narrow outlook on others—are not only disheartening, but are dangerous hindrances to the development and propagation of knowledge.

We students of the university are heartily sick of the practice of making universities, their teaching staffs and their students the convenient scape-goats for a dissatisfied world. The universities are perhaps the only sources of clear thinking and of patient seeking after proper balance and truth in this unbalanced and troubled world. We can earnestly wish that the older generation, whom, by their own admission, we can thank for having gotten the world into the mess in which we now find it, would have the good grace to look to their own failings and failure, and the good sense to quit their idle criticisms of professors and students.

These critics of the university are members of that culpable older generation that plunged us into the war and made cannon-fodder out of us, and more recently have bogged us in the mire of economic depression. We ask them merely to leave us alone and let us work out our own salvation.

—The Gateway, University of Alberta.

S.O.S.

Yesterday morning saw the advent of a new natural phenomena upon the campus as a raging torrent was let loose to roar its way down the slope of Sir Joseph Flavell's garden and flood forth upon those luckless students who valiantly fought their way up the sidewalk that skirts the north-west corner of the park. A good two inches of water bubbled and boiled its way merrily down the concrete floodway, inundating dainty feminine galoshes and ineffectively low-cut overshoes of the male variety. Navigation in this vicinity was still difficult late in the day and promises to remain so, as long as snow melts, rain falls, and water runs down hill.

After years of continuous complaint from both students and citizens, the muddy pathway encircling the Flavell property has finally been replaced by a wide concrete sidewalk. Now if the Department of Works could create some system of proper drainage, we might be able to use the sidewalk.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Toronto Symphony

The New Year brought its first concert last night when a fine and magnificent programme was played by the Toronto Symphony, Dr. MacMillan conducting. Dances Frantz, pianist, was soloist of the evening. The youthful charm and magnetic personality of Mr. Frantz created an ovation, surprising in its proportion but not unwelcome; for the Liszt Concerto No. 1, despite its sweet nothingness, was extremely attractive.

The two preceding numbers, Fantasia and Fugue, Bach-Elgar, Symphony No. 4, Brahms, provided more substantial food for thought. The excellent programme notes leave nothing to be said of the music itself.

That a diversity of opinion should exist concerning the 'suitability' of Elgar's orchestration to the style of Bach's music is not surprising. There is no doubt that the orchestral repertoire has been enriched by the solid worth of a Bach fugue so richly and effectively orchestrated. But what the work gains in dramatic expression it loses in mobility and the quieter majesty of the organ medium.

The Brahms demands all the Toronto Symphony can give and still more. It requires a technical skill, all the more necessary because it must permeate into the very depths of the music. No superficial virtuosity will suffice. The music is so powerful, even awful, in the true sense of the word, that strife within the forces intensifies the strain. Because the demands are so great, one can appreciate the difficulty of marshalling the forces of the Symphony through a performance, not only creditable but moving.

To close this excellent evening's offering, the orchestra played Berlioz Overture Le Carnaval Romain. I can do nothing better than quote, "It is full of the maddest gaiety and excitement, the most brilliant light and colours."

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

The big event of the year in women's basketball has begun since the first practice for those interested in making the intercollegiate team was held last night. The turnout was not very encouraging and the material available this year looks good although it is impossible to give any worthwhile estimate so early.

Everyone was surprised and disappointed not to see Kay Brown and Edie Ardagh among those present. A great number of fans had been hoping to watch these two flashy forwards work together in some very fine basketball. We can only hope their absence last night was merely a mistake.

The next practice is tentatively scheduled for Thursday, January 10, from 7 to 7:30 p.m. Watch this column and the Sports Notices for definite information.

And still weather will not permit any action in regard to hockey other than talking it up in the various colleges. The girls in charge of hockey in all those faculties entering (Vic, U.C., St. Hilda's, St. Mike's, and Meds) are trying to arouse interest and are evidently being quite successful. But ice is very essential, so even the keenest enthusiasts are forced to wait patiently for better times.

The Interfaculty Badminton Tournament is to come off during either the second or third week in February, preferably the former. This really does not leave any extra time for practice before the faculty matches will have to be run off. As yet there is no sign of any intercollegiate team so that is another hope gone west—at least for this year. This is really rather unfortunate as we do have some fairly good material in the University. However, since we cannot aspire to any intercollegiate finals we can at least put every effort into the interfaculty events. Let's get going so that each college will be represented by a crack team and will make the thing a success.

STUDENT TEAM MEETS DEFEAT

their experience rather than their ability, had the students playing most of their hockey before they got over the blue line. Dinty Moore had little work to do at any stage of the encounter except in the last minute drive in the final session. Even here Varsity's scoring chances were limited and what did arise were spoiled by their over-anxiousness.

The first period went scoreless, but Upper sent the Ports to the front in the second when a four man rush had Loughheed helpless. Early in the stanza Jimmie MacPherson banged one past Dinty Moore to even the count, but the soaring hopes of the Varsity supporters were again dashed a few minutes later when Wade batted one past Loughheed who stopped two drives in a row but was unable to get his hands on the third shot which hit the twine to put the visitors in front, where they stayed until the final bell.

Individually the Varsity men appeared to be more than slightly superior to their rivals but when they had to go and get some markers they seemed just a trifle bewildered as to how to go about it. Their combination was very weak and the scoring chances limited to lone rushes. Even when Port Colborne were short handed the Blues failed to cause Moore in the opposite nets any grief.

Loughheed, pinch hitting for Frank Shipp, turned in a very good game, halting many drives which eluded the defensive system in front of him. McClelland, MacPherson and Rey were the best of the attacking line while Devine and Jefferies also turned in good efforts. For the Ports the defensive work of the two veterans, Hudson and Horne, was consistently good while Upper was outstanding on the attack.

between the same teams earlier in the year.

The Varsity team needs this game to put them into their pre-holiday form as their Saturday night exhibition with Aberlys showed them to be decidedly off colour. With the advantage of their own floor, however, Hayman's netters should find no difficulty in consolidating their position at the top of the loop. The Blue line-up will probably see Connelly and Gold at the guard positions, Meagher at centre, Bodrug and Marks forwards, and Levy, Munroe, Mencil, Crowley and Gordon being in reserve.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Ken Burn

The most cheering bit of hockey news we have to report this morning is that Yale beat McGill 2-1 on Monday night. Varsity lost to Port Colborne last night to make it unanimous as far as the O.H.A. is concerned. The game was insipid and had the spectators yawning at times.

Although Varsity have lost a large number of games this year, last night was the first time we have seen them lack pep. They appeared to be very, very tired and undoubtedly are leg-weary from their trip. Port Colborne weren't much better and as soon as they obtained a one goal lead were content to shoot the puck down the ice.

One feature of the game was the introduction of an aeroplane shot by each team. The general idea is to hoist the puck from centre ice into the rafters and pray it will hit the goal-keeper on the neck and trickle down his back into the goal. Neither team scored by this method.

Port Colborne scored in the first period but "Babe" Dye called it back. The puck bounced off Loughheed onto a Port Colborne player's chest and back into the net. The Nickle Town fans also thought they were being cheated later in the game when a long shot from centre bounced against the back of the net. From many angles it looked like a goal but again the referee had the right dope.

Varsity's only goal came at the beginning of the third period with McClelland giving MacPherson a sweet pass. This and the usual final rally were the standouts of the game from a Varsity viewpoint.

No less than six Varsity squads will see action tonight. The three basketball teams will entertain in the big gym while the two water polo teams will occupy the tank. The senior B hockey team will also continue their merry struggle in the commercial loop. While the issue is doubtful in the basketball and hockey games, the water poloists are strong favourites after all the practise they have received wading across the campus the last two days.

A few comments have trickled in this year regarding this column. Some have been favourable and some otherwise but at least you can't accuse us of following the lead of the downtown sports writers who to all appearances are press agents for the Maple Leaf hockey team. It is really too bad that just when they had talked the crowd up to the 14,000 vicinity that the team should lose two straight. It has been estimated that it will require ten thousand words of copy to restore the customers' confidence.

Still speaking of the local papers—as they are handing out awards for the outstanding feats of the past year, we would like to tender a bouquet to the Star for the best unconscious crack of the season. While the holiday haze has somewhat dimmed our memory we believe it ran something like this, "the league will be strictly amateur, neither O.H.A., N.O.H.A., mercantile nor professional players being allowed to compete."

WATER POLO TEAMS IN DOUBLE HEADER

Along with the three basketball games tonight there will be two outstanding water polo games in the Hart House pool. In the first game, which starts at eight-thirty the Varsity junior team will meet the Hamilton Swimming Club. This is the first time that these two teams have met and they should give a rousing exhibition.

In the second fixture the Varsity senior team meets the Canadian Swimming Club in an important league game. These two teams have each won one of their previous tilts and this game should be close and exciting. The Varsity team is on top of the league by one point and will be fighting to hold that lead. It should be a great night for the Varsity teams.

Feb. 2 McGill at Varsity
8 Varsity at Queen's 15 Varsity at McGill
23 Queen's at Varsity

The moral justification of the existence of a Date Bureau at Queen's was vindicated by the defeat of the motion, "Resolved that the Date Bureau is having a demoralizing effect on the University." This verdict was reached at an informal meeting of the Queen's Debating Union.

Inconsequence

Digging in the back files of The Varsity for "something of interest," we came across in 1893 an entirely new joke on Queen's.

"Anyone who has heard the Queen's Gaelic yell, will appreciate the following mistake made by more than one on the Kingston trip. About 2 a.m. the ears, in which the football team were, happened for a few minutes to be side-tracked near a car-load of pigs. (There were noises, Ed. note.) All wondered what had come over the Queen's men to be so kind as to welcome the boys on their arrival! And were sadly disappointed when informed as to the true identity of their serenaders."

There were no initiations in 1893, but listen to this from the first October issue of The Varsity in 1894 . . . (Apparently Convocation was held in the first week of the term.) "The higher years with characteristic politeness would not leave the building, until their guests had departed, and the Freshmen were not allowed to stir from their places until the last Sophomore had descended. The Freshmen came down in more senses than one. As they reached the door, they were seized by rude hands and banded to and fro, now spinning along the slippery road—anon projected across a ditch—reaching, not terra firma, but terra lubrica, for the registrar of the weather was striving to imitate a well-known incident in Varsity life (the incident referred to in a recent issue, where the President turned the hose on blood-thirsty sophs) and throw water on the bustle." It goes on to say that "a prominent official" became so enamoured of the fray that he suddenly forgot "he was no longer an undergraduate." "He rushed into the crowd, and in a moment spectators beheld him descending the steps, at a pace the fleetest freshmen might have envied, and being passed from hand to hand, until the last of the line was reached. As he picked up his cap, and hastened on his way with 'a sweet disorder of his dress,' his hot cheek and flashing eye told of youthful ardour unabated."

Another tid-bit deals with: "The Higher Education of Women and the Advisability of Admitting Them to the Universities." "In excluding women from the University, we wish to set them apart as having a sphere which she alone can fill, and as being a creature with a loftier range of sentiment, towards whom we can cherish feelings of admiration and of love, and by whom we may be moulded and fashioned to a nobler and better manhood." Oowah! But that was the way ninety-fivers always talked.

This was the year (1894-1895), of the greatest upset between students and authority that the University ever saw. This was the sort of thing they wrote in their editorials. It was good writing, but very pointed.

"The present management of The Varsity does not believe that where there is conflict with authority, the students are invariably in the wrong; that they never have ground for complaint; that they are never the aggrieved party." If the new Monarchist party want some examples of "snappy diction" for their coming revolt from radicalism, they ought to read the old Varsities.

At first glance the athlete with his obvious physical attributes does not suggest a complex problem in human behaviour, nor does he appear the least bit finicky or temperamental. But coaches and trainers of outstanding athletes will tell you otherwise.

Every person of renown in the sporting world has an overwhelming ego or intense concentration in himself. It is like a high morale or staying power, the ability to bang on for just a minute longer. This ego when translated into willpower gives him the confidence that he is the best man in college or his country for a particular event or position on a team.

Possibly the thing that makes competitive sport so interesting is the fact

U.C. PLAYERS' GUILD PLAN PRESENTATION

"The U.C. Players' Guild has maintained the policy of producing a full-length play only when it is felt that they have a play which warrants production, a cast adequate to the performance and a director capable of adding distinction to it," said Miss Jocelyn Moore, M.A. Miss Moore has been closely connected with the Players' Guild for some years and took a very active part in the Guild's last public appearance in Congreve's "The Way of the World."

"This year the Players' Guild is going to present Henrik Ibsen's 'Wild-Duck,' under the direction of Professor Victor Lange," she explained. The play will be given in Hart House Theatre on Thursday and Friday, January the 24th and 25th. The cast will include such well-known members of the Guild as Kay Stewart, Gordon Robertson, Fergus Tobin and Dick Fonger, in addition to two prominent newcomers, Lucy Jane Grabbell and Connie Lailey. Miss Moore pointed out that in the production of "The Way of the World" the lead was played by Patricia Godfrey who, last year, won the judges' medal at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London and who is now playing professionally in England.

that the outcome is so uncertain and there is always the chance of an upset. A much superior team has often been defeated by weaker opponents. This reversal in form is the result of the psychological factor in athletics. The athletes on the superior team had certainly not lost any of their physical skill but were lacking in mental skill, an inexplicable "something." Quite often a coach's "fight talk" will supply the necessary stimulus to go out and die for dear old Rutgers.

A spectator viewing a game from the grandstand can't imagine, after seeing a player plunge through a line, or lunge with his best foot forward between a pair of stalwart defences, that a player could have any fear even though it may only be mental and not physical. Every athlete, if he is honest with himself will admit that fear dominates all other thoughts before he goes into a game. There is a sinking feeling in the pit of his stomach, his legs feel light and his head

MAYOR SIMPSON ADDRESSES SOCIETY

sider necessary. These conventions and recommendations have to be ratified by each individual country and often by many different provinces or states in those countries. Canada is one of the slowest countries to ratify; with her ponderous system of nine provincial parliaments and one Federal she is far behind countries like New Zealand and Belgium.

Referring once again to recent speeches by the Prime Minister, the mayor told of his experiences in a paint factory soon after his arrival in Toronto, when he had often to go home with his hands stained a dull red—"a colour"—as he put it—"now become respectable because of the innovations the Prime Minister has suddenly introduced into national life."

The main benefit accrued directly from the International Labour Organization at Geneva is, Mayor Simpson thought, that of the international mind. "The language difficulty," he said, "for a long time the greatest barrier towards any active co-operation on the part of the delegates, has been overcome, thanks mainly to the telephone. Now the frequent association of men from all parts of the earth is educating us to a greater realization of true internationalism and goodwill. We are thinking more of our fellow men and less of our pockets."

Philosophy, like taking the pins out of a new shirt, is no stickler unless you get bung up on the fine points.

"When public issues go beyond the understanding of voters, Democracy begins to decay."—W. H. Moore, M.P.

The mind will celebrate a little triumph whenever it can formulate a truth.—Santayana.

It takes a great deal of elevation of thought to produce a very little elevation of life.—Emerson.

What is now proved was once only imagined.—Blake.

Every man seeks for truth; but God only knows who has found it.—Chesterfield.

In an unreasonable age, a man's reason let loose would undo him.—Ibid.

INCONSEQUENCE

heavy, or sometimes a buzzing develops in his head. Of course a minute after the game gets under way these feelings are lost in the heat of the contest but nevertheless the mental sensation of fear is present before he enters the game.

Curiously it is often the presence of this fear that makes mediocre athletes into great ones. And if these aforementioned symptoms are not present in a team or squad their chances of victory are pretty slim. It is recognized and realized that this nervous excitement prepares the body for the strain that it will shortly be subjected to. When a sport demands a sudden explosion of energy, such as sprinting, this energy manifests itself in the runner's speed.

Naturally the athlete has to be in fine condition and endowed with some amount of skill, but it is his mental nervousness that in the end really ties him over and makes him a great athlete.

—McGill Daily.

In more recent years our standard of living has improved so that we have in daily use the products of nearly every country in the world.

On the breakfast table we have coffee from Brazil, marmalade made from oranges which grow in Florida, California or in Spain and sweetened with Cuban sugar. (Only the boarding-house keepers know where the prunes come from.) We have clothes made from Australian wool, Japanese silk or Irish flax. We ride in motor cars manufactured from materials made in many lands on tires made of East Indian rubber and Egyptian cotton, and we exchange for all these things our agricultural products, and the products of our forests and our mines.

The art of criticism is in a sad state in Toronto. In fact it is nothing more than a glorified advertisement, an appendage that goes with paid advertising. It is no strange thing to see advertisements withdrawn from publications whose critics point out the defects of some presentation.

There are artists who consider that they are too great and have worked too hard to be in any way criticised. This position is understandable, yet we must hold that it is a critic's prerogative to express his opinion on anything from the harmonica player on the corner to the angels playing harps in the halls of Heaven.

In the case of local artists there is too much personal feeling between artist and critic—a bad review means a bad friend. And worse yet, in the case of musicians especially, recitals are given for the main purpose of garnering new pupils and, of course, truthful criticism does not help at all. This mercenary position of the arts is, to put it mildly, deplorable. It seems to me that artists should, by some means, be educated to realize the fact that unfavourable criticism does not constitute a personal insult. Criticism, as one critic has already put forward in The Varsity, is an interpretation, the estimate of the more enlightened portion of the audience. The publication of such criticism is good for people in Toronto, the greater part of an audience here is not very hard to please and the artists who are trailed with a pack of enthusiasts are liable to become too self satisfied, and migrate to some larger metropole where pickings are better, only to find themselves greatly deflated. Often didactic, occasionally pedantic but always true to their own standard, critics for The Varsity are doing their best to raise the level of criticism in Toronto.

London, Ont.—Thirty-seven per cent of the men and sixty-three per cent of the women of the University of Western Ontario will refuse to support Canada in any war she may declare, if the answers to the questionnaire, published in the Gazette, are indicative of student feeling. Moreover, the same number of men and women believe that no war, no matter what the circumstances, can be justifiable. These were the most striking facts revealed by the questionnaire, which was part of a world-wide effort to ascertain student opinion on war, and was answered by slightly less than ten per cent of the Arts students at Western. While the number of men who would refuse to fight is not a majority, still the large percentage who definitely oppose themselves to war are considered significant of a marked reversal of opinion during the last few years.

Chaz Returns To Champus Haunts Delivering Loud Unseemly Taunts

... and it rained for forty days and forty nights ...

C—C

The first realization of The Great Flood came to the University at large when Scotty, the power behind the Registrar at U.C., inaugurated a ferry service across the front campus. At first it was believed that the unseasonal rains were merely an atmospheric reaction to the speeches of Mr. R. B. Bennett (Rt. Hon.), but the precipitation bore no more than a coincidental relationship to the density of the Prime Minister. As the Provost of Trinity humorously remarked at morning prayers, "Mere twaddle could not have brought forth all this Taddle."

C—C

(Hail, hail, to the Provost of Trinity! How nicely the title doth rhyme with divinity—
"We are the salt of the earth!")

C—C

A serious situation threatened when the Taddle commenced to overflow its banks. Large accumulations of detritus floated down from 273 Bloor Street West, largely in the form of radical ideas suffering from technological obsolescence as a result of the aforementioned speeches. Sweeping down in large, decaying chunks, they piled up against the massive front of Wyldcliffe College and swirled around in a heavy eddy. For a time they were carried into the College by the janitor and piled up in the basement to dry, in hopes that when thoroughly desiccated and decayed they might be considered fit for consumption by the more advanced students. However, it was soon found that Wyldcliffe's capacity for ideas, however obsolete, was strictly limited, and in a short time the pressure became so great that the foundations of the College were undermined and it sank into the flood.

C—C

(Ah, Wyldcliffe was a mighty man, But that was long ago; And those who think as Wyldcliffe thought

Are now thought rather slow. "HAVE you read my book?")

C—C

Due to the forethought of the Warden, the flood was diverted into the underground tunnel built underneath Hart House for the storage of decrepit S.A.C. resolutions, which were mercifully found to have vanished when the waters had subsided, thus leaving space for a new crop. A few of the heavier ideas were left behind in their place, but these were promptly removed to the Debates Room where they did yeoman service for a long period of years. An attempt was made to introduce them into the soup, but it was the unanimous opinion of the Hall Committee that they made it much too rich.

The waters emerged in full plate in front of Hart House, and bore their precious cargo of ideas further south. An amusing incident occurred as they passed the Library; it was feared for a time that they would find an entrance, but the Librarian erected barricades of fine slips and kept them out, on the grounds that they were no longer on the curriculum and therefore had no place in a building devoted entirely to educational purposes. His attitude was loudly applauded by the Faculty, and the staff in History paraded en masse to return over two hundred borrowed tomes as a token of admiration and respect.

This crisis passed, the flood made its way down the chasm separating S.P.S. and the Medical Building. Due to high winds, its burden—now thoroughly decayed—was cast up on either bank. At first the students were slightly intoxicated by their close proximity to so many ideas at once, but they soon eliminated them from their systems and discovered that they made excellent missiles. A battle royal ensued, but no damage was done, as the ammunition burst upon the heads of the contending forces, and practically no penetration occurred. Meanwhile the waters, freed of their load, disappeared quietly down the nearest manhole.

Royal Alexandra

Loud and lasting applause brought Edmund Gwenn to the footlights to make a speech which was the climax to a thoroughly entertaining evening at the Royal Alexandra last night. The play was J. B. Priestley's latest arrival from England, Laburnum Grove, and the cast was headed by Gwenn, one of England's most gifted actors.

The play is a frivolous piece of the same genre as Priestley's previous effort, Dangerous Corner, with perhaps a pinch more of the Pirandello technique. In spite of occasional over-acting, the tension never flags. The play itself is distinguished, in addition to having Edmund Gwenn and an admirable cast, by pointing no moral, unless such an one as "Don't think on Monday morning of things you heard on Sunday evening." It is particularly delightful because it is not an obvious mystery play, nor a characterless farce, but rather it provides an amazing amount of entertainment without too much effort.

If anyone is interested, not only in being soundly amused but also in observing stage technique, the English caste at the Royal Alexandra can be the source of plenty of study. The clarity of Margery Pickard's diction and the manner in which she uses her voice is a special treat. Melville Cooper, as Bernard Baxter displays most of the necessary equipment for a dramatic clown.

To anyone who can and wants to appreciate good theatre and fine humour, Laburnum Grove, at the Royal Alexandra, may be unreservedly recommended.

MUSICAL EDUCATION BEING NEGLECTED

buildings are erected for this purpose, Mr. Gartlan felt they should be constructed after the manner of conservatories with special sound proofing. Four such high schools throughout the city would give the talented children of New York the best opportunities for continuing their study of music.

The four sites suggested by Mr. Gartlan included Manhattan, Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens.

"If such a system is established the State Department of Education should ask all colleges to recognize music as a major entrance requirement," Mr. Gartlan declared.

If this project is successfully carried out plans will be made to organize in New York a city wide orchestra of 100 players, a band composed of 150 players and a chorus of 400 voices. The most talented players and singers in the school system will be represented in these groups.

Germany already has high schools of music accredited by the State. The Hochschule in Berlin is composed of 10 departments which give instruction in composition, theory, piano and organ as well as six other courses. Under the present system in the high schools of New York, two years of music are compulsory and the remaining two are optional. The fact that music may be substituted for Ancient History for Junior Matriculation purposes is felt by Dr. Ernest MacMillan, Dean of the Faculty of Music and principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, to be a small beginning toward introducing music into our high schools. "We are far behind in this respect," he stated. Dr. MacMillan felt the present need for musical instruction in the high schools was a pressing one but was uncertain whether the number of talented students in Toronto would warrant the founding of schools here such as those advocated for New York.

But in privately-controlled institutions such as Victoria there has never been any attempt to prohibit freedom." Principal Wallace of University College expressed the same opinion. "There is nothing more precious than the academic tradition in a college. The primary asset of the staff is their permission to teach and express the opinions which they believe and the payment for this priceless privilege is the use of common sense," Provost Cosgrave of Trinity College refused to comment.

London—Britain's new Unemployment Insurance Board was taking over from the local authorities yesterday the administration of relief under the dole system, which on March 1 will mean taking control of 4,000,000 unemployed persons. Sir Henry Betterton, newly created Baron, is the head of the board. He will be personal guardian of Britain's jobless, and in effect administrator of government expenditures totalling $275,000,000 annually.

Ottawa—Canada's milling and baking industry is sick, and the Price Spreads Commission yesterday considered what should be done to cure it. W. J. Peaker, investigator, held it imperative that reorganization measures be taken at once.

New Orleans—New Orleans yesterday girded itself for a new struggle against the dictatorship of Senator Huey Long, which will reach its crest tomorrow in 33 oppressive new laws.

Port Arthur—Charles W. Cox, two days ago elected mayor of Port Arthur, faces election trial May 7 on charges of having used corrupt practices in the provincial campaign which led to his election June 19 as Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Port Arthur.

Paris—Former King Alfonso of Spain devoted himself yesterday to preparations for the marriage of his two children, as it became known his own marital relations with Queen Victoria were in jeopardy.

Paris—The spectre of Serge Stavitsky, dead just one year, hung over another French government today as the great swindler's widow appeared before the chamber of deputies investigating committee in an effort to secure her release on bail.

REALISM IN EXAMS GREAT INNOVATION

This "quiz" is only the first step in the right direction but the idea of visual instruction has great possibilities. The study of geography, for instance, could be accompanied by a world tour, the boredom of the history lesson may be lightened, and the pupil enlightened by such historical plays as Roman Scandals, Cleopatra, etc., and an adding machine would add weight and accuracy to an arithmetic class. And so this theory could be carried through our educational system to the student's great advantage.

Therapeutic students have pored over books whose authors have tried to impress the readers with their tremendous cleverness by stating everything in the most involved manner. This new system will abolish all this. Studies will be simplified and will become sheer delight and as for examinations—they will probably become weekly affairs by popular request.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Ottawa—Premier R. B. Bennett, in the fourth of his series of radio talks, last night announced a programme of financial and credit reform. Its main features included the introduction by the Bank of Canada of measures that would promote the revival of trade, a revision of the Dominion Companies Act so as to eliminate improper practices in company promotion, prohibition of the sale of "no par value" stock, stricter control of the concentration of big business, and a reordering of both federal and provincial finances.

Flemington, New Jersey, Jan. 9.—The finger of guilt was again pointed at Bruno Richard Hauptmann today, as Dr. John F. Condon gave his testimony. On the stand two and a half hours, the 74-year-old former teacher told a story of the payment of the ransom money to the mysterious "John" a story in which he three times identified Hauptmann with this unknown individual. Attorney Reilly, for Hauptmann, says that his cross-examination of "Jasie" will consume a day and a half.

Saarbrücken—New clashes between Nazis and anti-Nazis were quickly quelled yesterday by police, but tension only increased throughout the Saar basin. Anti-Nazi leaders suggested that if the territory returns to the Reich, it should be divided so as to give them a place to live under the League's protection.

REVISED CALENDAR THOUGHT DESIRABLE Disadvantages Seen, However, in Those Suggested at Present

When questioned by The Varsity on the subject of a revised calendar discussed in yesterday's editorial, the majority agreed that the present awkward arrangement must sooner or later be abandoned, although Professor I. R. Pounder stated that the convenience of a new calendar would not be worth the vast inconvenience of re-adjustment.

Professor Needler, head of the German Department at University College, stated that the objective of the League of Nations, a standard calendar of one of two suggested types, was a very good one. Professor Hedman, also of the German Department, advocated standardization with European countries. The types with thirteen months of twenty-eight days each found objection on the grounds that the year could not conveniently be divided into halves and quarters. The other, with twelve months, each quarter containing 91 days, overcomes this problem but there would still be an uneven number of days in the months.

Dick Taylor's Injury Healing Up Rapidly

Popular Victoria Student Was Released Yesterday from Infirmary

Dick Taylor, who was injured by a flying softball in Hart House last Monday afternoon, is well along the road to recovery. He was permitted to return to residence yesterday morning after being released from the Burwash Hall infirmary. His wound, though painful enough, could quite easily have resulted in much more serious complications, but after a few days of further treatment and rest he hopes to be able to return to lectures.

CONNECTION DENIED BETWEEN COMMUNIST AND STUDENT LEAGUES

Any Communists in League Are Just League Members, Stein Declares

DEPLORES SUCH ATTITUDE

Communist Meeting Held in League Headquarters, Says Wayman

"There is absolutely no connection between the Student League of Canada, and any political movement whatsoever, let alone the Young Communist League. The Student League accepts as members anyone who supports the Student League programme and although there are doubtless communists who hold positions in the Student League, they do so only on the basis of their activity in the Student League," declared Bert Gold, the editor of The Student, the publication of the Student League. Alfred Stein, a member of the Student League, declared that as far as he was concerned, the programme of the Student League is broad enough to include all liberal students. "It is to be deplored," he declared, "that the Student League seems to be regarded as a Communist (Continued on Page 4)"

INSURANCE PLAN DROPPED BY S.A.C.

Commission to Investigate Physical Examination of Students

The proposed system of student health insurance was dropped for the present by the Students' Administrative Council at its meeting yesterday, according to Mr. S. M. Hermant, of I.V. Law. The chief reason for this, he said, was that most faculties, including Medicine, Dentistry, and Public Health Nursing, did not feel the need of such a scheme. Victoria College did not want it, and the School of Practical Science is already provided for to some extent. A commission was appointed, however, to look into the matter of the physical examination given to the first and second years, with a view to making it more thorough and efficient. Its report is to be given in two weeks.

FISH OILS IMPORTANT

The bearing that chemistry has upon the practical business of fishing was brought out by Dr. Neal M. Carter in his address before the open meeting of the Toronto Chemical Association at the Chemical Building last evening. Dr. Carter, a graduate of McGill University, is director of the Pacific Fisheries Experimental Station at Prince Rupert, B.C. He has just returned from a meeting of the Biological Board of Canada at Ottawa.

Dealing mainly with two western stations of the Biological Board and some of the work at Prince Rupert, Dr. Carter continued by saying "Seawater temperature is very important in oceanographic studies. A relation for the salinity of water has been found to (Continued on Page 4)"

In former years only persons playing for Vic on an interfaculty team could procure tickets but this year the executive decided to extend the privilege to any Vic student.

Preceding the dance there will be a dinner at which Dr. Brown and Warren Stevens will speak. Presentations will be made of cups, medals and letters.

O'ER CROWNED HEADS THERE HANGS A CURSE THESE RHYMING HEADS GET WORSE AND WORSE

A King there was
In the first session of the year, and the stormiest in its whole history. His Majesty's faithful and loyal subjects of the Sandwich Parliament upheld the noble cause of Revolution by forcibly dethroning two kings in a single hour. The King is deposed! Long live the King!

His Majesty entered in a blaze of glory, accompanied by the Crown Prince. Sedition immediately filled the air. Even the magnanimous bestowal of some twenty titles and grants of honour did not still the murmurings of discontent. The subject matter for discussion was ominous. "Resolved that this house favours a Revolution." It was a private member's bill, and came from the Opposition led by The Rt. Hon. Ross Munro. Hisses and groans etc., frequently disturbed his Majesty's efforts to keep order. The Revolution (Continued on Page 4)

Midnight oil is burned and poured freely on the third floor of the Little Red Schoolhouse, and has been for the past week or so, while a group of ardent young men work far into the night to bring to completion the plans and decorations for the Mauvais Arts Ball.

Everything possible is being done to lend a Bohemian atmosphere to the affair in the way of costumes, refreshments, decorations, manners, etc. Peanut men and organ grinders will be there, and stout blackguards to maintain peace and quiet. It is said that the mural pieces of art are a mite risque. At least the artists will have an opportunity to reap the reward of many long hours spent in the life-drawing classes. They are assured too that the members of the staff, in person or by proxy, will be there to take part in the festivities, and literally the programme is colossal.

VARSITY GRADUATE TO ADDRESS SEMINAR

Dr. W. C. Wood and Mr. A. R. Clark Will Lead Discussions in Physics

The Department of Physics, McLennan Laboratory, announces the following subjects for the Seminar to be held today, January 10, at 4.15 p.m. in Room 43:

4.30 p.m.: The Surface Diffusion of Mercury over a Tin Surface. Mr. A. R. Clark, M.Sc., University of Saskatchewan.

5 p.m.: Physical Properties of Zeolites. Mr. W. C. Wood, M.A. (Tor.), Ph.D. (Göttingen).

Dr. Wood, who is a graduate of the Department of Physics at Toronto, (B.A. 1930), has been working for the last three years on the subject mentioned above, under the supervision of Professor Goldschmidt and Dr. Rabinowitch at the Mineralogical Institute in Göttingen.

At the last moment His Majesty seized the throne in a successful counter stroke. Violently disengaged he was hurried away, leaving the Crown Prince again in undisputed possession.

"HITCH HIKING EASY"

Travels of Tolls Take Them Over Much of Continent and to Holy Land

"All Europe seems to be training and preparing for another war, and almost all the people we have met, even at Geneva, take for granted a war in the next few years. Everywhere, in Belgium, in Germany, in France, and in Greece, marching soldiers are in evidence."

So writes one of two University of Toronto students now in Jerusalem to a member of The Varsity staff, telling of the conditions in Europe which they met as they bicycled and hitch-hiked their way through England, Scotland, Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Greece and Palestine. The two students are brothers, Ellsworth and Leroy Toll, the latter enrolled in Philosophy and English at the University of Toronto, the former a graduate of Emmanuel College and at present working on his Bachelor of Divinity thesis. Sedding adventure and knowledge, the brothers decided last spring to travel for a year, and left by cattleboat for England, from where they set out on an extensive trip of exploration through the continent.

Contrary to accepted opinion, Leroy Toll writes that the hitch-hiking is better in Europe than here, although it was uncomfortable at times to be mistaken for mere bums instead of two travelling students.

The Greek government was especially hard to convince that they were not bent on joining the great Athenian mob and that they were two students from the University of Toronto.

The writer remarked on the military aspect of Italy, which stood out as the most armed country they encountered. Children of ten years of age (Continued on Page 4)

BLUE SPLASHBALLERS DOWN SWIMMING CLUB

Senior Game Goes Glimmering for Want of Absent Referees

PLENTY OF PENALTIES

Only one of the scheduled water polo games was played last night at the Hart House pool. The senior game between Varsity and the Canadian Swimming Club failed to materialize. The appointed referees did not put in their appearance and, as there was no love lost between these two clubs, they could not decide on a ref.

However the junior game was played, with the Varsity squad taking the long end of a 6-1 count. The game itself was brilliant in spots, but was by no means the best performance that the collegians have shown this season. Hamilton had just as much of the play as Varsity, but their attempts at combination were pathetic.

Walker opened the scoring for the Collegians on a long shot that outsped Gillespie. Beatty added another soon after on a close in play. Stratton, playing his first game in the league, accounted for the Varsity third tally. Incidentally this boy showed plenty of speed on the face-offs. Walker scored another from a long piece out just before the half ended.

MEAGHER HIGH SCORER

Play of Munroe and Crowley Features Varsity Victory in Wide-Open Game

By M. Glushin

The Varsity senior basketball team won its fourth straight Big Six encounter by a 26-18 score over West End Y.M.C.A. at Hart House last night. The game was one of those wide-open affairs, the ball moving rapidly from one end of the court to the other, very interesting to watch, but neither team displaying much scientific basketball.

Lew Hayman's squad deserved the victory but the score would have been much closer if the West End sharpshooters had only scored what looked to be certain hoops that didn't materialize on quite a few occasions. Hayman started his second squad of Munroe, Crowley, Mencil, Gordon and Levy, who took a 4-2 lead over the Purple and Gold. The regular five of Gold, Council, Marks, Meagher and Bodrug found it hard to penetrate the stout West End defence, leaving the floor with an 8-5 lead in their favour, which the second team increased to 12-7 at the halfway mark. West End's wildness within shooting range of the hoop limited their basket scoring to two shots garnered by Patterson and Cameron. Crowley, with (Continued on Page 3)

VARSITY CAGEMEN CLEAN UP HANDILY

Intermediates Take Game from East York Grads, Juniors from West End "Y"

MAGWOOD PLAYS SMARTLY

Last night was 'Varsity night' in local basketball circles with Varsity's second and third cage teams each winning victories—the intermediates taking the game from the East York Grads by a score of 23-19, and the juniors outplaying the West End Y juniors by 30-20.

In the intermediate game, Varsity took the lead in the first few minutes and held it throughout. Their steady play and better combination enabled them to always keep two or three baskets ahead of the East Yorkers. Only sloppy passing near the basket prevented Varsity from winning more than a four-point advantage in the first period. East York played much better in the second half to equalize Varsity's efforts, each team earning twelve points. Better foul shooting would have given East York the game as they only scored seven times in twenty-one chances. Varsity scored thrice in eight tries.

For Varsity, Magwood played a smart game, hitting the hoop three times and doing some fancy ball-handling. Carey and Himel starred both defensively and offensively, each scoring two baskets. Hastings, Robinson and Legg were best for the Grads. Hartley, the Yorkers' shifty forward, did some nifty dribbling.

The Varsity juniors were just a bit too good for their opponents from the West End Y, and defeated them without being over-exerted. Varsity was strong defensively, allowing the Y (Continued on Page 3)

Another Tradition Shot

We have no use for traditions, particularly in editorial policy. Traditions are parasitic growths which increase in strength, and become more binding as time goes on, growing more ineffectual as they become more protracted. We will end one, here and now.

Each year at this time, when first-term fees have been paid and there is time to reflect on the ordeal, it is the duty of the editor to take his typewriter in hand and write about the Fees Clerk at Simcoe Hall. An interesting study is provided by the observations which previous editors of this paper have made.

Most of them refer to graduates of many years standing, and the memory which each carries of the Fees Clerk sitting in his iron-barred cage, growling. A similarity is always found between the action of pushing a cheque through the bars of this cage, and a similar action at the zoo, where peanuts are the object of exchange. The difference is usually drawn out that it costs money to see the fees clerk.

During the pre-depression years of 1927-29 The Varsity added a new angle to the tradition by commenting on the particular tenor of Mr. Bolitho's growl when a student appeared with a bill upside down in a package of currency, or without his registration card, or, worst of all, had appeared one minute past the hour of one o'clock. Since then there have been no new developments.

As we said, it has become a traditional duty of The Varsity to comment on the so-called arrogant officialdom and grouchy over-efficiency of the Fees Clerk. It is a tradition which we do not care to continue. In any case there would be no object in continuing such an obviously unsuccessful battle. We are satisfied to let the whole matter drop.

May we, however, add the suggestion that students might save themselves considerable sacrifice of time and injured feelings by slapping their cheques and registration cards in an envelope, and mailing it to "Bursar, Simcoe Hall, Toronto."

Hitler and the Saar

Despite the sensationalism of a money-seeking press, there is only one case in which war would result at present from the Saar question: if Hitler has decided he can no longer hold the reins of government and has made up his mind to use this pretext for a final fling at the gods, as Napoleon III did in 1871.

If the voting turns for Germany, she will be content and France will not resent it, for even if the Saar coal is so intimately linked with Lorraine iron, it is more the Basin's loss than that of France. Under no circumstances is it likely that the Saarlanders will care to turn Frenchmen, and the only alternative is continuance of League of Nations control. Germany knows this has lasted for a decade and a half, that it is an unnatural condition, and that even if this is only an indefinite settlement, the sheer indefiniteness of it means there must be a showdown some day. Although Hitler may appear a fool to some, he is not such an idiot as to try to start a war at a time unfavourable to him unless he realizes he is going down and might as well do it fighting. He will prefer to wait till that someday when perhaps he may have a few more friends on his side, and when it will in all likelihood be done

'TWIXT TWO

My dear Ted,

It's absolute nonsense—I mean your idea that only the professionals should take an active interest in politics. Why, that would put the whole control into the hands of a few, probably unscrupulous, men. As it is we all know the situation is pretty bad. People look down on those who hold municipal positions; they eagerly gobble up rumours of slander about those higher up. Among the politicians themselves there are constantly unjust accusations floating around to make lives miserable.

These hardly seem to me to be the type of men that should be in control. The trouble is that our fine men—and we have a number—don't consider it to be their business. As you say, it's outside their sphere—and that's that as far as they are concerned!

If a man wishes to become anything in the political world he has to start at the bottom, usually with a municipal office and always remembering to play up to the local "bosses" and political clubs; after he's been mayor, he tries to reach the provincial house, and so on, until he becomes a Prime Minister. I am convinced that our municipal officials are generally nonentities—and why? Because they are in office to bring glory to themselves, rather than honour to the office they hold, from the people.

Why can't we have people who regard politics as a public service: people who could and would give their services freely?—as they used to do in England. Why can't we do away with public scandals, with unjust and unfair accusations, even with party politics? Why can't we have, not merely better, but the best men to lead the country? Why—and you insist "it's not their job"; rather a deplorable situation, isn't it? Phyllis.

very peaceably, just as the Libyan situation has turned out well despite international wrangling since the Treaty of London was signed in 1916.

In some phases of policy Hitler has been rather maladroit, but this merely shows that as most Germans, he has not acquired the finesse that the French, for instance, have in matters of diplomacy. However, as this is largely a matter of common sense, it is very improbable that Hitler will care to risk his chances of remaining in power after enjoying two years of it already: two years is neither short enough to be transitory nor yet long enough to be history.

Procrastination

The Students' Administrative Council have put through a regulation requiring all committees arranging for university parties to record their date at the Women's S.A.C. office in Room 82, University College, early in the college year. This, if carefully observed, would obviate a great deal of the confusion which now exists.

At the present time, before the publication of the Student's Handbook each year, a letter is sent to each organization on the campus, requesting that they send in the date for their function, in order that these may be put in the diary section of the Handbook. That just about ends the matter. Less than half a dozen dates were arranged in time to be included in the Handbook this year, the majority of which are from one college. Then later in the year other organizations make their plans and without, apparently, making any reference to the dates already announced, blithely plan their parties for the first date which appeals to them, with the obvious result that there are several clashes. This is most unfair to those organizations who have taken the trouble to set their date early. And yet with the present system, or rather no system at all, such clashes are inevitable in a University such as ours with a multiplicity of faculty and college organizations and fraternities and so on all planning functions for the next two months.

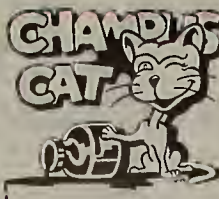

It is probable that some clashes would occur under the suggested system but they could be readily adjusted, and it is to be hoped that those who are responsible for affairs of this kind will co-operate in this matter.

Optimism vs. Pessimism

It is told of two buckets in an old well-sweep that one found cause for complaint because, no matter how full it came up, it always went down empty. The other found cause for rejoicing because, no matter how empty it went down, it always came up full of clear, sparkling water.

Charles Lamb sat next to some chattering women at dinner. Observing that he did not attend to her, "You don't seem," said the lady, "to be at all the better for what I have been saying to you." "No, ma'am," he answered, "but this gentleman at the other side of me must, for it all came in at one ear and went out at the other."

One cannot become a member of the Communist party without denying God, but out of all Russia only 3,000,000 people belong to the party.—Ubsysey.

FRILLS

Among the large number of cognomens, descriptive, humorous and otherwise, applied to members of the gentle gender by the dominating sex, an inspired cynicism "FRILL" is inexpressibly fitting in its suggestiveness. Thus used, "frill" is truly a magic word, envisualizing infinite centuries of haughty queens and painted dolls, of innocent laughter and indiscretions, from Helen of Troy to the Girl from Missouri.

In short, a frill is ornate, useless, frivolous and feminine.

Desirous of knowing the origin of the word, we grabbed a pencil and pad and padded out to interview some campus characters.

I. N. Devore, V Pass, stopped long enough to say he thought the term had some connection with the old English word "filly", and then rushed away to a lecture.

Iota Reduce, II Classics, was huffed (she puffed) at our question but suggested two or three Latin and Greek roots, which we forgot.

A music critic of the A.M. & D. department, whose name we may not disclose, knew nothing of the origin of the word but reminded us of the (Continued on Page 3)

Inconsequence

As sometimes happens, 2.30 a.m. found our good-natured lino operator begging for grid. In other words, your campus daily had a heck of a big tap in the gype (translate that as you see fit; gype is a convenient word denoting vocal organs of campus dailies, believe it or not). But anyway there was nothing for it, literally nothing (note padding), but we decided to write it out and set it up, because after all, two columns from the telephone book, beautiful and symmetrical as they might be if set facing one another like a couple of barn doors, would look too much like filler, it was thought (note newsy style).

We found, shortly, upon browsing around, the way you do in the midst of messy places everywhere (note insidious innuendo), that there was a time, sir, there was a time when the burning question was asked through the editorial chomls of this stately journal, yea, even verily the top column thereof: DO WE NEED A MASCOOT?

Here's what the editor thought about it:

"Why not a mascot for Varsity?" (Yes, right the first time, there was no question mark.) But to go on with the copying. "Why not a mascot for Varsity?" (We thought we'd ought to repeat that so's the meaning would be plain when the reader went back over the second time.) "Why not a mascot for Varsity. Having seen the efficacy of Boo-hoo should we not profit by the object lesson?" (What that R was put there for is more than we can tell you, but the second straight omission of the question mark does get under our skin.) "Faithful as has been the work of the Queen's team and rooters we feel that Boo-hoo contributed her full share to the triumph of the Tricolour, whose battling team could not fail to derive inspiration from the little bear's devotion. Twice during the play-off, so fatal to us," (a little on the tragic side for editorial language, we thought, but then who are we? note question mark). "... so fatal to us, she gave an actual demonstration of her willingness to stand shoulder to shoulder with her team" (a physical possibility for small bears only with Queen's teams, we felt like saying, but why crack wise at two-th— we mean three a.m.? Say that's the second question mark we haven't missed. How 'bout that, eh?) "Shoulder to shoulder with her team on the gridiron, making the odds definitely against Varsity, for call it superstition or what you will" (we prefer what we will, if it's all the

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

An intercollegiate basketball practice is scheduled for 6 p.m. this evening and not at 7 as had been tentatively suggested. The attendance at Tuesday's practice was fair but can be very much better, and there is every sign that the turnout at this second session will be greatly increased. It is too early to attempt any division into senior and intermediate squads. Consequently, as in past years, the first few practices will be general and as soon as possible the separate aggregations will be formed with the cream of the crop playing on the senior team.

Muriel Atkin has agreed to coach the senior outfit. The mere mention of the fact that she turned out the U.C. senior sextette which put up such a marvellous fight for the intercollegiate basketball title is all that need be said concerning her ability to fill the position. Lorna Reid has been selected as manager of the senior team and Elizabeth Leitch of the intermediate squad. As yet no final arrangement has been made about the manager of the second group.

Vic seems to be running U.C. a fairly close second in getting badminton under way. Already a list has been posted at Victoria College which all those who wish to enter the Round Robin tournament are asked to sign. Quite a number of names have already appeared on this list but there is still plenty of space left for more. Saturday is definitely the deadline for all signatures so all those interested should take this to heart and make the best use of the three days left to get into this big sport event. Betty Clement, who is in charge of badminton at St. Hilda's, plans to get the Saints practicing regularly early next week. So it would seem that throughout the University badminton might well be said to be definitely a very present sport—thank goodness there is no need to depend on favourable weather conditions for it.

Do not forget the intercollegiate basketball practice at 6 p.m. tonight at O.C.E. gym. We do want a lot more out than showed up on Tuesday.

BLUE BASKETEERS DEFEAT WEST ENDERS

two baskets, Munroe, Meagher and Bodrug with one apiece were the Blue twine-rippers.

Two long shots by Hedges which found their mark and one by Baird, gave West End a 13-12 lead early in the second half, which was soon wiped out through the efforts of Connelly, Munroe, Meagher and Marks, who gave the Blue team a commanding 22-13 lead. Levy's hoop and foul shots by Connelly and Bodrug completed the Blue scoring while baskets by G. Delabough and Cameron in addition to Sellers' foul shot brought West End's final total up to 18.

The feature of the game from a Varsity standpoint was the excellent display of basketball given by Munroe and Crowley. Meagher, was high scorer for the evening with six points, and along with Connelly, Marks and Bodrug shared the spotlight for Varsity. Patterson's removal from the game through the 4 personal foul route weakened West End to some extent. Cameron, Hedges and Baird also looked good for the Y squad.

Varsity: Munroe 4, Crowley 4, Mencil, Gordon 2, Levy 2, Gold, Connelly 4, Marks 1, Meagher 6, Bodrug 3, Newman.

West End: Patterson 2, Valentine, Cameron 5, Hedges 4, Sellers 1, Martin, W. Delabough 1, Butler, G. Delabough 2, Baird 3, Patterson.

Referee: Hee Creighton.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crockauer

Varsity squads emerged with a clean record last night as five Blue and White squads chalked up victories. However, to make the evening a notable one, one should consider the attendance at Hart House. There were five games, four of which were played on the evening's programme—two waterpolo contests and three basketball tilts and the charge was twenty-five cents for the whole programme. And yet the total paid attendance was twenty-four—truly a magnificent total! There must be something wrong somewhere if winning teams can't draw. We feel sure that it wasn't the price of admission since that was almost at a minimum. A marked increase in attendance would certainly be appreciated by coaches and players as it is very depressing to play with but a corporal's guard watching.

While on the subject of attendance at basketball games—on their recent basketball tour to Niagara Falls and Buffalo the Blues drew about one thousand fans in the Power City and just twice that many in Buffalo. We forget what the price of admission was in the Falls, but we were very surprised to learn that ninety-five cents was charged in Buffalo. And how the crowd cheered! They take their basketball seriously below the border—cheerleaders and all that sort of thing.

Although two waterpolo games were on the evening's programme only one was played because the referee failed to show up. The senior game would have been a very important one since the winner would have won a commanding lead for the title. As a result the Canadian Swimming Club refused to play without the appointed official. In the junior game the Blues increased their lead by an easy 6-1 win.

In the Big Six game Lew Hayman's charges again kept their record clean and it appears as though there will not be a Waterloo for the Blues in the Big Six. The squad looks good enough to keep on winning. What impresses one most in watching the senior Blues in action is the fact that the squad has scoring punch all over the line-up. Another interesting fact is that the team always rises to occasions. The better their opponents play the harder and the more efficient do the Blues work. These two facts explain why the Blues haven't been defeated to date in the Big Six. In last night's game Lew's lads easily outplayed the Y crew but failed to put the ball in the twine. Their weak foul shooting continues to be a black eye for the squad as they sank only six out of eighteen free throws.

MacMcCutcheon has rounded up two splendid squads, which should give him no end of enjoyment. The addition of Charles Krakauer to the junior rearguard has given the Thirds that final touch and they won handily. Incidentally the junior tilt which was the first on the programme and consequently missed by most of those present, was the best of the evening from an onlooker's point of view. Mac's intermediates turned in a haphazard performance as most of the members of the squad were out for the first time and consequently their play suffered. Mac has persuaded a couple of ex-senior stars to turn out and as a result has a galaxy of high class players on hand. Given a week to weld them into a machine Mac will no doubt produce a real winner.

It seems as though one of Warren Stevens' squads get the odd nod from Lady Luck. Steve's Bees chalked up another win in the Major Commercial last night—and a shut-out at that. If the O.H.A. squad could insert the odd win now and then all hands would be satisfied in these parts. At any rate here's hoping that the O.H.A. pucksters can duplicate the feat of keeping the Allen brothers of Oakville off the score sheet tomorrow night. The Oakville lads played for the Bell Telephone team last night but failed to get their sails full.

BLUE COMMERCIALS BEAT 'PHONE SQUAD FOR SECOND TIME

Stevens' Men Down Bells in Brilliant if Hectic Fashion

THIRD PERIOD FAST

Lougheed, Charles Perform Well for Varsity, Allen Brothers for Losers

The University of Toronto entry in the major commercial series continue to turn in brilliant and successful efforts in this league even if they are not able to outduplicate the performance in the O.H.A. series. Last night the Blue and White team opened the evening's double header at Varsity Arena with their second victory over the Bell Telephone squad, winning the encounter 1-0 after three periods of hectic hockey.

Play opened fast in the first period, neither team having any good scoring opportunities due to the close checking of both forward lines, backed by a hard hitting defence combination. Both goalies stopped several plays which might have been converted into tallies.

The second period saw some brilliant end to hockey. Play speeded up when the Allen brothers appeared on the same line, but Varsity held them scoreless. With the next change of players Warren Stevens sent out his best line and his strategy gave them a goal on a neat rush by Driscoll who passed to Devine for the center.

Speed and thrills were the feature of the third period. Bells set up a terrific speed in order to get back into the hunt. Penalties began to appear. Bells got two while Varsity's only one went to Disner. The Blue team resorted to the old custom of shooting the puck up the ice and were able to stall off until the final bell.

For Varsity Lougheed in goal, and Charles on defence turned in good performances while Devine at centre engineered many smart plays.

The Allen brothers, of course, featured for the "Hello" men. Dobie stopped many sure goals while Thompson led many smart goalward rushes. Varsity: Goal, Lougheed; defence, Charles, Driscoll; centre, Devine; wings, Kiel, McConvey; subs, Morgan, Sweeney, Disner, Bauer.

Bell Telephone: Goal, Dobie; defence, Thompson, Edwards; centre, Horne; wings, P. Allen, Scott; subs, McArthur, C. Allen, Pether, Price, Stewart.

Referees: Mollenhauer and Deniro.

team very few under-the-basket shots. The first period was very close, but Varsity's plays began to click in the second half and the West Enders were hopelessly submerged. But at that, the Y squad might have won with better foul shooting, as they only scored four times in nineteen free shots. Varsity scored eight out of fifteen chances.

Krakauer of Varsity looked like the best man on the floor, scoring eleven points besides playing well defensively. MacGregor was a tower of strength defensively, and along with Molson and Harlock, played well for Varsity. For the West End squad, Graham, Roy Pethick and Pinn played well, scoring nearly all their team's points.

Varsity Intermediates: Sullivan 3, Magwood 6, Vanderlock, Carey 4, Doran 3, Himel 5, Fliton 2, Newman, Gibson, Caplan.

East York Grads: Hartley 2, Hedley 1, Robinson 6, Wallace 1, Legg 5, Hastings 4, MacKenzie, Collinger.

Varsity Juniors: Molson 4, Hogg 3, Krakauer 11, McGregor 4, Roberts, Cooper 2, Olch, Denne, Green 1, Harlock 5.

West End Y: Reid, McTaggart, Cromie, Roger Pethick, Roy Pethick 5, Daniels, Valentine, Dempster 2, Scott 1, Graham 7, Pinn 5.

ragged with penalties as numerous as sand pits on the Sahara. Hamilton registered their only tally of the night when B. Hoey heaved one home while two Varsity men were reposing on the sidelines. Hooper ended the scoring with two quick goals which revealed the high calibre of this flashy forward. Hamilton: Goal, Gillespie; defence, Hoey, Whiteman; rover, Parnell; centre, McCormack; wings, Allister, B. Hoey.

Varsity: Goal, Kingsberg; defence, Walker, Charters; rover, Barrows; centre, Stratton; wings, Hooper and Beatty.

CROWSON, SPENCE SQUASH WINNERS

Close Matches Are a Feature of Dentsals' Racquet Tourney

TEAM TO BE CHOSEN

In a closely contested game yesterday, played to determine the Dents intercollegiate squash team, Harris Crowson, last year's intercollegiate champion, defeated "Min" Rockman, 15-10, 15-12. Crowson's experience gave him the edge nearly all the way and he never seemed to be in very great danger. Rockman when interviewed stated with wild gesticulations, "I was robbed!"

In the second contest, Mac Spence defeated Syd Chodoroff, 15-10, 15-11 in what proved an exciting game judging by the number of spectators. Spence will now meet Joe Tritt, and the winner, together with Crowson, will represent Dents in the Intercollegiate Squash Tournament.

popular song—"Fr 'I know, we may never meet again."

And little Kayo Texas, from Pharmacy, proved beyond doubt that "where there's a will, there's a way."

So the old gag now becomes: Q. "Who was that frill I seen you with last night?" A. "That weren't no frill, that was my latest thrill."

And speaking of frills (or thrills), we hope the Night Editor who ran our last "Cat" as a Feature never has one.

hold true for all oceanic waters." The actual work in determining salinity is aided by tables and monographs. Sodium chloride and magnesium chloride are some of the constituents of sea water. Other minor constituents in water are phosphates, silicates, nitrates. It is necessary to know the effects of these constituents of sea water on account of the great salmon and plichard fisheries.

Prince Rupert Station, Dr. Carter emphasized, was concerned with biology, not with fisheries. The scope of Prince Rupert Station recently consisted of four features. One of the main features of the station was the investigation of fish oils. "Pileared oil, one of the chief oils of the Pacific coast, has very good drying qualities and better resistant qualities than linseed oil. Bacteriological problems in the fishing industry were also solved at Prince Rupert. A boric acid layer of ice on the outside of certain kinds of fish prevents bacteria.

The lecture closed with a discussion, during which Dr. Martin emphasized the great necessity of chemists in the field of biology.

organization for it most certainly is not. It is high time that this misconception was dispelled."

"The University Young Communist League is a unit of the Young Communist League of Canada. It has no connection with the Student League other than in that some of the members of the Young Communist League are also members of the Student League," declared Mr. M. Wayman of the Student League, when interviewed by The Varsity as to the connection between the Student League and Young Communist League. The unit was organized in the middle of last term and having no headquarters of its own is renting the Student League headquarters for the night.

"Since the assassination of Kirov and the executions that took place immediately afterward, the press and so-called 'labour leaders' (the quotes are Mr. Wayman's) have availed themselves of a long looked-for opportunity to malign the Soviet Government. This particularly affects many students who are just beginning to recognize the progressive position of the Soviet Union. It is to clarify the issue in their minds that this meeting is being held. The Young Communist League feels that it is very important that the students really understand the significance of recent events in the Soviet Union rather than take the ready-made statements emanating from Warsaw and Berlin."

Leo Clavir, the business manager of the Student League, interviewed at the Student League headquarters, declared that he knew nothing of the meeting inasmuch as he did not see The Varsity. "Any arrangements made were made through an individual member and not through me," he declared. "I will have to find out more about this."

As it is essentially a place of experiment, talent and experience are not essential requirements. Opportunities are offered for doing anything from painting, etching, line and colour-printing to interior decorating, wood- and soap-carving, making stage-sets and papier-mache masks. Instruction and most of the materials are free, although there is a slight house charge of 15c a week. Mr. Carl Schaeffer is in charge of the etching and wood-carving classes, Miss Warren of stage-sets, masks, etc.

The first class of the term will be on Friday, January 11. The club asks that those wishing to become members communicate with Elspeth Roger, Amesley Hall, as soon as possible. Women from the other colleges are cordially invited to join.

MAUVAIS ARTS BALL WILL BE "COLOSSAL"

Hereafter—and it is supposed that this affair will be an annual one—poster paint will be purchased by the gallon, and brushes by the gross, so that the Argonaut Rowing Club, which has been secured to receive the brunt of the attack next week, will recall without effort the last Mauvais Arts Ball held by the Architects.

More than 420,000 American citizens reside permanently abroad with 246,101 living in Canada and Newfoundland.

The Truth Shall Make You Scream

By Eugene O. (toots) O'Neilneagle PROLOGUE

The scene is The Varsity office. Ghost (coming out of the copy box with its hair in bow of typewriter ribbon):

It's true, it's true, it's true . . . Reporter (with true reporter's savoir faire): What's true . . . will it make a story?

Ghost: Ivory Soap . . . no, er, pardon me, that's wrong line, but you know, we haven't had many rehearsals . . . the statement that you never know what you may hear at Vic; or whatever it was that The Varsity said yesterday in its article on "The Examination Perfect".

Reporter: How so?

Ghost: On with the play! Let Ripley-nagle be unconquered.

SCENE I

The curtain rises asbestos on and two Varsity reporters are found in the sacred precincts of North House trying to get the truth (1-2 the truth and nothing but 1-4 the truth) free, out of those redoubtable intelligentia of North House, Finbow and Coult. Finbow is improving his stock of wisecracks by perusing Bill the Conqueror by P. C. O. Woodcock-house.

1st Rep: Here are the only two in Vic who can clear up the situation on this half-truth, half-the-truth, half-the-truth-onward business. (Disappears into Finbow's box of raisins which he bought for an ailment not mentioned in The Varsity).

2nd. Ditto: Ok slip us the dope and make it funny.

Finbow: I realize the gravity of the situation, but I find that it behooves me to say that on such an auspicious occasion, etc., etc., . . .

The reporters steal out and go to each other's room to eat cake. The second soon leaves to find some authentic data, in the college itself.

SCENE II

The curtain rises again due to the unprecedented activity of the stage hands and the second reporter is discovered in the act (1). He is pacing the barren halls (in spite of the fact that they supply free truth), looking for someone with a humorous face. At last he sees two males descending the stairs with their whole beings transfused with laughter. Aha, he says sotto voce, and stoppeth one of twain.

One of twain: ?

Reporter: My good fellow could you tell me why you are laughing?

O. of Tw.: Certainly my dear chap we were laughing over our homework! Blackout with flashes of lightning during which the reporter may be seen staggering across some morass with a bandana in the middle . . . obviously some part of the Netherlands . . . He occasionally puts his hands to his head and cries Oh . . . Oh . . . my head.

WOMEN, Con and Pro

AGAINST

If you treat 'em (women) rough you're a "horrible brute" and if you don't you're a "shrinking violet".

Women the strange animal: Just when you want to show them what a big, brawny, two-fisted he-man you are—they up and "mother" you. They go on starving when they're hungry. (That waist-line, you know.) They cry when they're happy.

If you tell them "you're the most beautiful girl in the world" (I personally think you're a poor sap or a damn liar) they coo dovingly "fibber". If you don't whitewash 'em you're "an old fogey". And if you ask them, in sincerity what they think of you you're "fishing for compliments".

Definition of a fool: a woman who introduces her best beau to her best friend.

Their most universal piece of claptrap, stock-in-trade, and eternal standby: "You're neglecting me."

Their most persistent question: "Have I got too much on?" (Referring to lip-stick, rouge, etc., and other revolutionary beautifiers.)

Their silliest habit: Never being on time; they're careful to be just late enough to show you they aren't too anxious—yet never quite so late that you'll be angry with them for the rest of the evening.

Their strangest annoyance: the quickness with which their dresses become creased.

Advice to those who didn't learn to play piano in six easy lessons: never believe a woman who says "don't"—with her eyes shut.

FOR

No woman ever went wrong without a man to help her.

If it were left to men to suffer as women do—the human race would have been extinct long ago.

He can call her any hour, any place, any time of day or night and all's well. But if she call him just once—and usually it's for a mighty good reason—she grows as independent as a peacock at a blackbird's reunion.

They are clever enough to be weak when we are very strong, strong when we are very weak, and tactful enough to let us think it is we who turn the wheels of industry—and that's "what every woman knows."

The astonishment they can show when we tell them something they already know is amazing.

Where is the woman who has not heard somewhere, some place, some time, from some male: "There is no yesterday. There is no tomorrow. There is only the present. (Te skunks!)"

And by the way: Love loves to love loving love.

Em Aitch Tee.

INCONSEQUENCE

"same" . . . superstition or what you will we maintain that when Boo-hoo gave her undivided attentions to the game things went against us. Granted that in spite of her we won at Kingston, consider the situation. (That calls for another of our clever remarks, but time's getting shot, or short, or something.) . . . consider the situation. We had a mascot of our own (Guess that means own, because they didn't win, they lost, which was one of the only other things they could do besides win) . . . a mascot of our own in the person of Mr. Maynard, Jr., who succeeded in diverting the little bear's attention from events in the field and so kept her from putting the jinx on Varsity. The result should convince the most sceptical that we need a mascot for sports.

(Deep breath)

"There are also other ways in which a mascot would be of value" (Believe me, I'll say! Think of the hamburger meat!) . . . would be of value. This is a large and heterogeneous university. (You're telling us!) "and we hear constantly of the difficulty of keeping us together and fostering a proper college spirit." (Now there you are! Let's have more college spirit. We're sick of writin' this guff. But then you aren't reading it and boy, how this space is gettin' filled!) "The difficulty would cease to exist if we were joined in common devotion to and interest in some one object" (such as bigger and better filler in the campus daily.—Adv.) The trouble has been to find the one object and here again we say, "Why not a mascot?" (STILL no question mark. G— I mean gosh, this is AWFUL.)

"We would suggest a bull pup" (delete pup). However we confess this is a matter of personal prejudice and all may not agree. The Varsity extends an invitation to its readers to express their views on a subject which must be of general interest" (That's the end. We confess the project doesn't interest us, but then as we were saying, who are we?)

And why is a mouse when it spins? The higher the fewer, of course. Tak, tak.

We once read a book by Harriet Beecher Stowe. But this one is by LARRY ROGERS DICK.

Windsor—Mrs. Rose A. Thomas was revived from the effects of carbon monoxide poisoning after a thirty-hour struggle by the Windsor Fire Department to save her life.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, FRIDAY, JANUARY 11th, 1935

No. 62

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Toronto—In response to the request that a maximum of 44 hours be set for all industries, Attorney-General Robbuck told members of the International Labour Union yesterday, that the matter would be taken up with the provinces of Quebec and Manitoba, with a view to joint legislation.

Ottawa—Premier Bennett includes as a primary purpose of his reform programme, the protection of the individual at the two points of danger in his career—at the height of his earning power from unscrupulous promoters and in his old age, from his own infirmity.

Saar—Arrival of German-South Americans to vote in Sunday's plebiscite precipitated a battle between cavalry and mounted police and mobs in the streets of Saarbrücken yesterday. This is one of the worst riots that the pre-plebiscite period has as yet witnessed.

Ottawa, Jan. 10. — "Wicked Grits" are insinuating that reform programme of the Hon. R. B. Bennett is prepared by Mr. Herdridge. Liberals intend to begin counter attacks against Bennett with speeches over the radio by Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

Toronto—There is very little doubt in official quarters that the gasoline tax would not be raised in Ontario. Premier L. A. Taschereau of Quebec has several new forms of taxation under consideration.

WORKERS' CLASSES WELL ATTENDED

Feeling Towards Workers' Education Favourable in Ontario

REAL INTEREST SHOWN

At the Economics Building, the Workers Educational Association conducts classes every evening of the week. Eight hundred workers attend classes of this "Workers' Varsity". The association is patterned along the lines of the "Workers Education of Great Britain", but with no direct affiliations. It is connected with the department of University Extension, but is a self-governing body with the sanction of the Board of Governors. Members attend strictly for the information obtained, since they try no examinations, and receive no degrees, certificates or diplomas. The accomplishments of the group have not been restricted by this lack of tangible reward.

Drummond Wren, when interviewed by The Varsity, stated that feeling in Ontario towards workers' education is more favourable than in Quebec. He cited a case where Quebec students had burned books belonging to a similar organization because they suspected day students' money was being used for a library. A short time ago this Quebec movement was raided by the police, its literature destroyed and the secretary sought. The organizer of this group was recently released from the Whiting asylum, sent to one in Washington and has since been released to do similar work in the United States.

The Ontario movement has been accused as a fosterer of fascism, communism and all other "isms". As a fascist school it is supposedly making the worker content with his lot and as a communist one educating the worker in radical thought, but the truth is that the W.E.A. is promoted purely for its educational value.

FEELING SKIPPER JUSTLY ACCUSED

Professor Mackenzie States Decision of Commission Equitable

COMPENSATION ADEQUATE

"Captain Randall, skipper of the I'm Alone, has no just cause for complaint," according to Norman Mackenzie, Professor of International Law. "His temporary arrest was merely an incident in the investigation of the case and in no way a reflection on himself. The decision handed down by the Joint Commission was an equitable one made in the light of all the facts."

If the I'm Alone had been in American waters, Professor Mackenzie explained, it could have been seized for rum-running, for its engagement in that illegal trade was beyond dispute. If the ship were sunk while resisting arrest, so much the worse for the ship. But there was no legal way in which the United States could have apprehended the I'm Alone while it was in neutral waters.

The American captain claimed that the ship was only ten miles off shore; Randall held that they were at least fourteen miles from land. The actual zone of American territoriality is defined as one hour's sailing distance from shore, and the court had a ticklish job in deciding just how fast the I'm Alone could travel and its actual position when it went down. It was entirely a question of fact, and the Commission decided that the Canadian claim was nearer the truth.

The claim for damages put up by the Canadians was, of course, merely tentative; and the damages actually awarded the captain and crew were adequate and justified.

REVIVAL OF SOCIETY TO TAKE PLACE

Calvo-Atlantist Members not Directly Opposed to S.C.M. Views

"Our organization is in no way intended to supplant the S.C.M.," said Mr. G. B. Johnston, president of the Calvo-Atlantist Society. "In fact, many of our prominent members are in sympathy with the S.C.M. and its aims, and might possibly serve on its executive. Neither," he added, "is it connected with the S.C.M., as it is an entirely separate movement, with entirely different aims, although those of the S.C.M. may be a direct repudiation to charges that the Calvo-Atlantist Society was begun as a rival, or enemy of the older movement."

Mr. R. F. Rae, the vice-president, when interviewed, stated that the ideals and motives of the society are to inculcate the ideals of Strength and Honour in the more intellectual type of man at the University. No women, he said, were admitted, as yet to the

Mr. Woodside Quite Certain that Vote will Favour Return to Germany

HITLER'S POWER WANING

In Case of Close Vote League will Interfere to Protect Minority

Serious international complications in the event of a close vote in the Saar valley balloting next Sunday was the prediction of Mr. Willson Woodside, much-travelled member of the Engineering faculty, when interviewed last night. Mr. Woodside expressed his personal opinion that the vote would favour return to German rule by a two to one majority.

"A close vote in favour of return to Germany will give the League of Nations the problem of protecting a large minority from Nazi outrages," he said, adding that there was nothing they could do but step out and allow Germany to step in. He does not expect the League troops to leave for a month or two after the voting. "The Nazis will be very disappointed when they are not allowed to swoop down

MOTOR SHOW SEEN AS SOCIAL EVENT

Officials Hope to Accommodate More Guests This Year than Ever Before

POPULAR ARTISTS PRESENT

The National Motor Show of Canada will once more be on review in the Automobile Building, Toronto, during the week of Jan. 12 to 19.

The array of new models and the innovation of a collection of powerboats will attract many visitors.

As in previous years, the Motor Show will be made an occasion of a continuous social event. The best of music and entertainment is to be provided for the nightly dinner dances. With the increasing popularity of this feature of the Motor Show it is hoped this year, that it will be possible to accommodate more guests.

This year's fashion presentation is to be more beautiful and intriguing than ever, the authorities disclosed.

The popular baritone, Adolph Watterlin, is to be guest artist and will entertain at both afternoon and evening presentations.

The cabaret features this year include "Collette and Barry," the Canadian dance duo, Rhouma-Je, who is noted for her singing, dancing and pantomiming, and Saida Gerard, the celebrated Toronto dancer.

PROFESSOR PASSES

The death occurred yesterday morning of Professor W. E. Macpherson, late of the Ontario College of Education. He had been Professor of History of Education, for a number of years. He was also librarian of O.C.E., as well as editor of "The School". These various offices in the college, had been held by Professor Macpherson for over fifteen years.

LIGHTER FRENCH FILMS BECOME POPULAR

York and Hollywood Theatres Are Meeting Demands for French Plays

The germ nurtured by the French Department of this University, that is, that the regular attendance of French films will eventually be rewarded by enjoyment and comprehension, has affected more than the student body. The York Theatre has started a little enterprise of its own and is showing lighter films on Saturday mornings. Tomorrow's presentation is "Voyage de Noces", starring Brigitte Helm, an outstanding actress very popular on the continent. The second film, "Trois Hommes en Habit", with Tito Chiappa, is noted rather for its originality.

Psychic Science is The Nuts Full of 'Ifs' & 'Ands' & 'Buts'

Reports having come to the omniscient ears of The Varsity that vast numbers of undergraduates have been flocking of late to tea-cup readers, phrenologists, astrologists, palmists and other of the same ilk—we even hear of experiments in hypnosis being carried on in Burwash residences—The Varsity, ever having the good of the student body at heart, decided to investigate the realm of psychic science first hand.

Accordingly three reporters were despatched last evening, after doing considerable research in various tea rooms adjacent to the campus, to the source from which much of this "religion" emanates. The meeting opened appropriately with "Shall We Gather at the River" and the reporters were invited to dismiss the material from their minds with a contribution of two bits.

On being instructed to place an article on a tray for the use of the medium the reporters contributed a collar button, a key to The Varsity office, and a dental plate. The medium was blindfolded and after two verses of "In the Garden" to get him in tune with the infinite, he selected an article from the tray and the following conversation ensued between the medium and the owner:

"I see a condition before you, sister. I believe it is associated with some other person. Is that so?"

LEAGUE OF NATIONS TOPIC OF RIDDELL

International Law and Control by State Urged as Solution to Present-Day Problems

SECRETARIAT IMPORTANT

Owing to a misunderstanding, the meeting of the group in Current Events at Wymilwood was postponed until next Thursday at 5 p.m.

Mr. Riddell did, however, give a short resume of the work discussed last year concerning the work of the League of Nations. He stressed the developing importance of the Secretariat as becoming more and more an executive body of the Assembly, rather than the Council.

The League as an instrument for securing peace possesses all the machinery for pacific settlement of international disputes. Mr. Riddell recommended a book—by De Lisle Burns—"The War and a Changing Civilization", which he said contained a good solid statement of methods of prevention of war.

The modern idea of self-defence differs from the old. We do not have to defend ourselves against a band of marauders, as in olden days, but against an organized and civilized community like our own.

The only solution is that we must submit to some kind of international law. The taking over by the state of the powers of many nobles is compared to present-day situations where the same idea must be carried out on a larger scale—the international state.

The group will begin to discuss next week the works of the League in securing disarmament. Later in the season the discussion will turn to Central Europe—the collapse of democratic institutions after the war,—and the ensuing rise of fascism.

U.C. LIT. HEADS 'DOOMED' LOUD RUMOURS INST

Rumours are rampant. Startling disclosures are expected today, when U.C. men will assemble at a mass meeting in the Junior Common Room from 1.10 to 1.30 p.m.

The Varsity, after diligent inquiry, was unable to ascertain exactly what is at stake. It is rumoured that the executive is tottering, and that local demagogues are about to attack the administration on several fronts.

When approached yesterday, Arn Smith, secretary of the Lit. body, denied the possibility that scandal had sullied the fair escutcheon of the Executive. Paul Gus Bridle, watchdog of the Treasury, when approached, said: "Honi soit qui mal y pense," and when probed further, growled: "Don't bother me, I'm thinking." He looked worried: "All will be made clear," he continued, "as the meeting, which all U.C. executives will attend in force."

When asked if revolution was imminent, he broke into the opening bars of the "Internationale," but quickly recollecting himself, said, "Don't be silly. The executive is firmly in the saddle."

Queen City is Accused by Student of Being Unattractive and Ugly City

PAPERS CREATE IMPRESSION

Too Many Human Interest Stories in Daily Newspapers

The "Toronto Saturday Night" complains that with the advent of Santa Claus and the mayoral elections, Toronto ceases to be interested in world-shaking events. The suggestion that the Queen City should be guilty of provincialism calls forth comment from various students about the campus, most of whom are inclined to agree.

Roxalyn Read, I Trinity, thinks that "it is definitely a mark of ignorance to plaster the front page of a newspaper with large pictures of starving children and sentimental Santa Claus stories. The space should be devoted to cultural subjects such as discussions of Nobel prize winners. And is Toronto narrow-minded? Well, look at 'Reunion in Vienna'." "Why ask if it is narrow-minded?" demands 'New York'. "Just read the four Toronto newspapers, they give a true aspect of its outlook. Toronto the Good is a very apt name for Ontario's capital."

A young don from Winnipeg believes that "Toronto has plenty of culture but doesn't appreciate it; Winnipeg, though less fortunate and with fewer opportunities, is keener and more sincere about its devotion to the arts."

"The outreries in various newspapers throughout the world, immediately after the assassination of Kiroff, were ridiculous in their convictions that Russia had established a proletarian, and that a so-called 'Red Terror' was prevalent in the country at the time," declared Morris Wayman last night, speaking on "Executions in the Soviet Union", at an open meeting of the Young Communist League of the University.

Owing to the absence of Mr. W. Kashman, the speaker, Wayman undertook to deliver an impromptu thesis on the situations connected with Kiroff.

FRENCH CLUB PRODUCES POPULAR PLAY

Two friends, become rivals in love; a grandiose challenge to a duel; and clever incidents revealing typical bourgeois characters, mark this year's production by the French Club of U.C., le Voyage de M. Perrichon.

The play, which will be given in Hart House Theatre on Jan. 31, will be directed by Professor de Champ, Miss A. C. Cole, and Mr. R. Finch. The action is based upon the attempts of Daniel Sadary, played by Charles Carrington, and of Armand Derocches-Earle Hampel, to win the hand of Henriette Perrichon, taken by Miss Betty Gordon.

Stanley Aquarone portrays the comic role of the bourgeois M. Perrichon, much elated over his first trip to Switzerland. His love of the romantic, and dramatic, is well brought out when he is challenged to a duel by the pompous Commandant, played by Eric Medcalfe.

Miss Betty Price takes the role of the wife of M. Perrichon.

Convention Comment

Recently there was held at Washington, D.C., a convention of College editors, attended by the editor of The Varsity as representative from the University of Toronto. Very little has been said in these columns yet about the gathering, which was financed by Mr. William Randolph Hearst.

We in Canada can not appreciate the feeling which the yellow journalism and reactionary jingoistic policies of the Hearst papers arouse in intelligent minds. The University of Toronto student reaction to the Toronto Daily Star is perhaps the best local example, but very much too mild.

Excerpts from News-Week, an American publication devoted to an analysis of the world's news, are reprinted here because they show the keenest perception regarding Mr. Hearst's actions that we have seen in print to date.

Without moving from the luxurious baronial halls of his huge San Simeon, Calif., ranch-house, William Randolph Hearst can stir up more chicken feathers than a tornado in a hen house. In the last fortnight the country's first publisher provoked three major furries.

A reference is made to a humorous incident in the White House reception for the College Editors:

Secret Service agents assigned to the White House Executive Offices keep a close watch on the President's callers. Last week they admitted five student editors of college papers (see page 22) to Mr. Roosevelt's oval office.

A larger group of the college newspaper men waited their turn in the reception room across the hall. When the door opened for their entrance, Walter Christie Jr., who came all the way from the University of California to attend a Hearst-sponsored editorial conference and meet President Roosevelt, hurried forward. He saw a chance for a little leg-pulling.

"Well, Comrade Harris, now is now big moment," he stage-whispered to Chandler Harris, a fellow Californian.

The nearest Secret Service agent caught the Red word "Comrade". Excitedly he stuck his head into Mr. Roosevelt's office.

"Hey," he yelled at the five already inside, "one of you come out and identify these guys. We don't know who they are."

Under the sub-heading Bogey, details are given of a typical Hearst publicity stunt, one which greatly incensed the campus editors to the south. It occurred just before the convention.

Bogey: Last fortnight the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities received a request to investigate "a campaign of terrorism against teachers in American colleges." The petition came from educators at Columbia, New York University, and Union Theological Seminary.

Trouble began at Syracuse University in upstate New York. Two young Hearst reporters, posing as prospective students, walked into the office of Dr. John N. Washburne, head of the educational psychology department. They said they were interested in communism and wanted to visit Russia. Dr. Washburne treated them politely.

Next day the Hearst-owned Syracuse Journal ran flaming headlines: "DRIVE ALL RADICAL PROFESSORS AND STUDENTS FROM UNIVERSITIES." Dr. Washburne's temper flared when he saw himself quoted as being a Communist.

A few days later in Manhattan two other "students" called on Dr. George S. Counts, Professor Education at Columbia's Teachers College. He remembered the Syracuse incident. When they tried to pump him, he pumped them. They were reporters from Hearst's New York Evening Journal. A circulation-getting, red-baiting campaign had flopped.

'TWIXT TWO

BOOKS

My dear Phyllis,

A book in Hart House library has provoked me to think about something—the "spiciness" of popular literature. This particular volume is by one of the fairly well known modern pornographers; in the front of it and in the back all sorts of people have written down their opinions on the book. One remark has led to another until the blank pages are just covered with burning words. The revealing thing is that even those who have been most revolted by the writing have apparently read it all, and therefore have probably relished a good deal of it secretly. You know some chaps—our friend F— is one—who rather pride themselves on always being able to pick out the most juicy specimen on a shelf, and then enjoying it without any false shame whatever. Of course, he is also a discriminating judge of literature in the more old-fashioned sense; but he has enough good sense to realize that he is only normal if he reads a lot of books for the sake of their "sex-appeal".

Have you noticed in the book advertisements how poor old Boccaccio's Decameron and Balzac's Droll Stories, besides a number of others, have been rejuvenated by large editions in handsome bindings? Are these authors misused, or did they intend their books to be read in the modern attitude? I have heard professors recommend these books but always in the greatest seriousness, as gems of literature. I'll bet you the writers had a darned good idea what they were doing!

But take a look at other amusements today: the most subtly suggestive movies, the ravishment of pictures of beautiful women, and even the ubiquitous dirty joke. All these are tremendously popular, in spite of the preachers who prophesy doom on us. Why! why, should we try to conceal all this? Is it wise to have a hypocritical eloque of decency? Secrecy and restrictions will not prevent people from getting what they want, and aren't they entitled to do as they like? —Ted.

Further reference is made to the convention of College Editors under the heading, Peace Pipe.

Peace Pipe: In California Hearst fumed about a questionnaire sent him by college newspaper editors asking his opinion on war, armaments, and national defense. Hearst's jingoistic answers provoked a barrage of critical college editorials.

Aware that no national figure can withstand the antagonism of the nation's youth, Hearst called a peace meeting. At his expense 37 college editors last week rode into Washington to drink cocktails with Eleanor (Cissy) Patterson, editor of the Hearst-owned Washington Herald. Later they heard speeches by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Sir Wilton Lewis, London Times correspondent, and Robert S. Allen, "Washington Merry-Go-Round" columnist. They were received by President Roosevelt (see page 9).

With the Hearst-Youth hatchet well buried, a few of the junketing editors travelled on to New York to eat dinner at the Ritz Tower Hotel with Arthur Brisbane, Bainbridge Colby, and Bruce Barton. After dinner one of the editors asked Mr. Barton what he thought of the Hearst-discovered Communist menace in the colleges. The country's highest-paid advertising-copy writer grunted: "I think it's a lot of bull."

There is only one correction we would call to the attention of News-Week. The "Hearst-Youth hatchet", allegedly buried at the convention, was merely tossed into the underbrush for the time being, and will appear again at the earliest opportunity.

The fact is that anti Hearst feeling was very strong among the assembled editors. The short-lived college-communist scare, referred to above under the Bogey title, occurred after arrangements for meeting had been made. By the time the editors got together they had become quite aroused over the question, since being a communist apparently is a social stigma in some parts of the United States.

Possibly from a desire to appear gentlemanly, since the convention was costing Mr. Hearst quite a few thousand dollars, no official reference of any kind was made to these recent events, or anything which might in any way have a connection with Mr. Hearst. So, to outward appearance, the Hearst-Youth hatchet has disappeared, and the pipe of peace taken its place.

The Intercollegiate Daily Newspaper Association hopes to meet again this year, but will refuse to meet under Mr. Hearst's financial patronage. By the time it meets again, the hidden hatchet will have made its reappearance, and the peace-pipe used for lighting a few literary bombshells in the college press. If the peace lasts that long it will be a very great surprise.

Lessons in the social graces have been instituted at the University of Minnesota following the request of numerous students. No credit is being given this year, but if successful, the course will become a part of the regular curriculum next year. —Junior Collegian.

CONTRIBUTOR'S DAY

At the University of Illinois they turn out an eight or ten page daily rag which prints all kinds of news, and even Winchell's column, (not our idea of a nice diversion for the U. of I.). They have a column as well which is run by home-grown talent, oddly enough known as the Campus Scout. The striking feature of the column is the amount of material contributed, evidently, from outsiders. Firmly believing in the principle of allowing anyone to do our work who will, we are again going to give you the contents of our morning mail, good, bad, or indecent.

BLUE HOCKEY TEAM TO MEET OAKVILLE

Varsity Last in League—to Battle with Fast Opponents

Trailing dismally in the cellar position, Varsity play Oakville in the last game of the first half of the senior O.H.A. at the Church Street citadel to-night.

The students, although finishing second in every league game to date, have always finished a good second and have been in there fighting every minute of the game. Wednesday night it was a different story. Up against a slow skating team and with a better than average chance to win the Blues displayed a lack-lustre style of play and seemed content to end up one goal down.

One half of the team tried hard the full sixty minutes but the remainder just went through the motions. At one stage of the "wake" the collegians had a man advantage for two minutes but the best they could do was get ONE shot on "Dinty" Moore and that from outside the blue line.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

The meeting of the Hockey Club, which Pat Harrison, the president, had hoped to call this week, has had to be postponed until the beginning of next week due to several complications about practice hours. The managers in the various colleges are arranging about rinks and times, and all those interested in hockey are hoping and praying for a general freeze-up. It does seem to be getting a little colder—but all we can do is wait patiently and hope for the best.

A further delay is occasioned when an appeal from the St. Hilda's manager that one of the Trinity tennis courts be flooded to provide a cushion for themselves is considered by the powers that be. This extra rink will relieve the congestion at Little Vic if it is granted but right now it does not seem very likely that the request will go through.

The first real meeting of the Swimming Club will also be held early next week. The date of the intercollegiate meet has been tentatively set for March 6. There are now less than two months before this big event so again we urge you, one and all, to get right in there and keep at it until the bitter end.

The second intercollegiate basketball practice came off last night and was definitely more encouraging than the first. And you will be relieved to know that Kay Brown is turning out this year, which is a distinct lead off many people's minds.

February certainly seems to have every promise of being one big month in women's sports. Probably the hockey series will not be completed until early in the month. Then there is the badminton tournament and the faculty swimming meets. At the end of the month the intercollegiate basketball games are to be played at Queen's. And then on March 6 as a grand finale—or something—we have the intercollegiate swimming meet. So there is certainly plenty of scope ahead for everyone interested in sports—and there is no time like the present to get started.

Tonight the Blues stacked up against the fast slating men of Oakville sporting such stars as the Allen brothers, "Rat" Porder, and Pears, and Sunny Thompson. However, a win is by no means an impossibility and would prevent the students from being completely kalmanned in the first half of the schedule.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Big Bill Tilden's tennis troupe now operating in New York City seems to be the one sporting attraction which has not suffered materially from the box office standpoint as a result of the much maligned depression. The addition of George Lott to the circle must have caused Tilden's pride some unpleasant moments. Tilden, the press agents tell us, has a strong dislike for the aforementioned Mr. Lott. Tilden's dislike no doubt attained a new high last night when he viewed the 15,000 customers who contributed something like $40,000.00 to see the first meeting of the two rivals in pro ranks. We can picture his rage as he collected his share of the receipts. Mr. Tilden, it would appear, knows something about publicity as well as tennis.

Tonight the Varsity hockey team will meet the Oakville Villians at the Maple Leaf Gardens. For the past few weeks we have been calling Varsity to win their encounters, hoping to eventually call one right. In this regard our best efforts were a failure. The Blue team simply refused to win games. In their game with Port Cloborne here earlier in the week, the entire team played hockey as though they had had a rare old time in New York. What they will do tonight remains to be seen. The one fact which stands out is that the Blue team are the lightest in the circuit. With such a club, it is necessary to play offensive hockey for sixty minutes if they hope to win games.

While it is quite obvious that the students are outclassed in the loop, it is equally obvious that they do not know how to conduct themselves in a manner which will be productive of goals. More than once, when the students have needed a tally badly, they have found the opposition short handed, and even with the advantage of an extra man were unable to get ONE shot on the net, before the penalized player returned. This has occurred several times this season, and from it there can be drawn only one conclusion.

The friends and followers of the rowing crew will assemble tonight for their annual banquet at Hart House. The Varsity team have quite an ambitious programme mapped out and the future should see some marked improvement in the conditions under which the oarsmen have to labour. The coming Olympics are proving to be an attraction and it is the intention of Coach Loudon to assemble a team this season, which if kept together for the season following, should have more than a slight chance of representing Canada in the Games. This appears more than likely when it is recalled that Varsity had crews in the Olympics in '24 and again in '28. The erection of a club house appears to have at last taken a definite move and it is probable that the future will see the U. of T. team with an up-to-date training establishment. This, of course, depends on the support the project receives from the graduates interested.

WOODSIDE EXPRESSES OPINION ON GERMANY

on the Saar on January 14."

Mr. Woodside felt that in the case of a small majority in favour of League of Nations rule, a cry would be raised against other nations of "The Saar has been stolen", and provide infinite possibilities of trouble from Germany. Unless the vote is definitely in favour of the Saar linking its fate with Hitler's, the League will practically be forced to deal with the question of protecting the minority.

The threat of a general exodus of anti-Nazis was not very serious, in Mr. Woodside's opinion. "There is no place they can go," he said. "France recently passed a law keeping foreign workmen out of the country, and Luxembourg will not take them. The result will be that the well known leaders will get out, but the workers will hang on to what they possess, and take the worst that comes."

Two main schools of thought were outlined. The first, which is shared by the British government, is the diplomatic view that the Saar should go back to Germany, and so cease being a potential cause of war. The other opinion says that the Saar must not go to Germany, but should join the Reichstag fire and Dolfus' murder as another tragic error and loss of prestige, and become another nail in Hitler's political coffin.

"Hitler's power is definitely on the wane," Mr. Woodside declared. "A year ago there would have been no doubt that the outcome would favour Hitler. Three months from now and the vote would be against him. At the present time, while I believe the vote will favour a return to Germany, anything is likely to happen."

HITLER EXTOLLED

pany Herr Grodte was visiting the University, pointed out that there had been a great deal of construction work initiated last spring. It was subsidized by loans made by the Reich to home owners and others who wished to make alterations, additions or to build new structures. The plan was somewhat parallel to the Homeowners' Loan Fund which was inaugurated in the United States as a part of President Roosevelt's recovery programme.

In reply to a question as to whether this construction programme might be regarded as a means of inflation, Herr Grodte declared that Germany was not considering inflation. He also stated that the country had great faith in the financial leadership of the Nazi fiscal expert, Schacht.

Herr Grodte displayed the greatest enthusiasm for the work of Hitler, especially in promoting the industrial life of the nation. Before the Third Reich there were strikes, considerable labour trouble. Now with the Arbeitsfront, the regimented workers union, everything was flowing smoothly.

When the Fuehrer first came into power Herr Grodte was in the midst of a wage dispute. Hitler settled this by keeping the wages up and forcing the contractors to reduce their profits. "At first I did not like it," he confessed, "but now I have so much work that I am more than satisfied."

According to Mr. Woodside the Nazis have been expending quite a bit of money in East Prussia and it was as a result of this that there was comparative prosperity in that province. The question is how long will it last? Herr Grodte expressed his opinion in a simile: "We are pouring water into the pump in order to prime it. In two years much has been done by Hitler. Give him five or ten and we can do anything."

VARSITY SENIORS PLAY AT ST. KITTS

Leadership to be Settled in Deciding Game of Season

BLUES LINE-UP NOT CHOSEN

Tomorrow night will find Varsity's senior basketball squad in action at St. Catharines—that cage-minded town—in a scheduled Big Six contest which will decide the league leadership. Fresh from a well-earned victory over West End Y last Wednesday, Varsity should be in winning form, but so should the St. Kitts squad with a string of wins behind them, so the game looms up as the battle of the season.

Undefeated this season, Varsity will be trying for their fifth consecutive victory and to equal St. Kitts' record of five wins in as many starts. At present, the St. Kitts aggregation of cage artists are leading the league with ten points, due to their five straight wins, with the Blue and White in second place, two points behind. However, in basketball parlance the two teams' records are equal, each battling 1000. But after Saturday's game, only one of them will be in this happy state.

Varsity's starting line-up has not been completely chosen yet, but the personnel of the team will be the same as in Wednesday's game—the so-termed regular line of Bodrug, Marks, Meagher, Gold and Connelly, and the co-players, Levy, Munroe, Meneel, Crowley, Gordon and N. Newman.

There will probably be some juggling of positions and lines in the game tomorrow, as several of the above-mentioned players perform capably in more than one position, and due to the effectiveness of some of the reserve players in the recent game with West End, Marks, Meagher and Munroe are liable to be switched about, in search of the maximum scoring punch.

One may wonder why such a small town as St. Catharines has such a good basketball team, but the fact remains that they have. Ted Reeve would probably give the credit to a diet of corn syrup, but whatever the reason, they have the cage game tactics down to a fine art and will give the Blue and White hoop-the-ball squad forty busy minutes when they tangle tomorrow night.

COMMUNIST MEETING

off's assassination. The executions in the Soviet Union may be said to have had their origin in the revolution, when on November 17, 1917, a mass movement occurred on the part of a vast majority of the population who decided to oppose the central government and to obey the orders of the Soviets. They had their own militia and their leaders, just prior to the revolution, were Bolsheviks. The reaction of this was civil war for years afterwards, and at the same time, differences of opinion existed between the two leaders of the Bolshevik party, thus hindering the establishment of the Soviet Union.

"Then the flame was kindled on December the first, when Kiroff, a member of the Political Bureau of the Soviets, was shot in Leningrad." He had been a sort of "safety valve man" for a time and was a staunch supporter of Stalin. He had gained the enmity of the opposition groups whose policies were to oppose the leadership of communism in order to hinder the establishment of socialism.

In the countries immediately surrounding Russia, two groups, communists and fascists developed, both very anxious to overthrow the Soviet regime. They sent men for espionage to Russia, but out of 117, about 30 of them were shot before Kiroff's assassination.

"Some people have called this synonymous to Hitler's purge of June 30th, but such an idea is absurd," stated Wayman, "in that no one was killed who was not directly involved in the assassination and the opposition was not a theoretical one, whereas Hitler's purge was the reaction of a dictator."

PSYCHIC SCIENCE IS JUST A FAKE

"Well-l, yes."

"Of course, of course, the spirit just told me. Do you know any person whose initials are A, E, H, M, J, T, or W?"

"Why, yes!"

"Well, this person is standing right beside me and says that the condition is going to work out all right for you and you are going to be very, very happy. Do you understand me? God bless you. Next, please."

Another article being selected:

"Ah, the light is flashing right down to where you are seated. Have you a mother in the land of spirit?"

"No."

"Well, it must be your father."

"No."

"He says his name is John. Do you know a John in the spirit world?"

"No."

"Well, has the person behind you got his feet on your chair? Ah, I thought so. I was getting cross vibrations. Next."

A sealed question was given the medium. "Your question refers to another person. Is that not so?"

"More or less."

"This is a person to whom you have been married for some time and I see a circle of elephants surrounding this person in a purple aura. Beware, they are trifling with another man but with the help of the spirits this condition is going to solve itself. Do you know a man named Tighlah-Pileazer? He is the one."

"No."

"Well, I'll leave him with you, brother. God bless you. Next." The question submitted was "Where and oh where has my little dog gone?" Nuts. We'll stick to the Oxford Group.

Afternoon and evening performances show promise to soon become a reality.

Aunt Mary's Answers Ease Life's Load For Many a Seeker-After-the-Truth

By G. R.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

I am 5 feet 2 inches tall, weigh 160 pounds and have red hair. I have received a bid to the masquerade and would like to go as a Spanish dancing girl. Do you think I would look nice?

Yours in doubt, Tiny.

Ans.: No, my dear, I don't think you're quite the type. I know there is an intriguing aroma about things Spanish, but then again, there is a fascinating atmosphere about the Greek that I think would be more in your line. Why not go as Helen of Troy—the face that lunched a thousand chops, if you know what I mean.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

Why are they putting up that horrid new flag-pole? The old one was much more attractive and looked perfectly strong enough.

Yours, Aesthesia.

Ans.: The flag wore out.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

We are two fourth year School men and would like to locate two good enough women for the next Scarlet and Gold dance. Can you help us out?

Trusting to your good judgment, we are,

Yours hopefully, Science.

Ans.: Phone Queen's Hall. In the remote possibility of failure, take a Bay car to Prospect Cemetery. You might be able to dig up a couple there. You could put an ad in The Varsity. If all else fails, try the Salvation Army; they'll save you a couple.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

I have been asked to go on a blind date. Do you approve of them?

Sincerely, Victoria.

Ans.: If you can't get any others, I would say the blinder the better.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

I have been engaged to a boy for twelve years, but have not yet married because of my youth. Don't you think thirty is the proper age for a woman?

Yours sincerely, Alumnae.

Ans.: You are quite right. If a woman isn't proper by that time she never will be.

Inconsequence

It doesn't seem too far from the beginning of the term, yet, to say a few well-guarded words about a little piece of negligence that may not seem very important, but has caused considerable indignation and heat under the collars, especially of suburban students who commute daily to the campus.

We refer to this business of having a wide discrepancy between the nominal and actual starting dates of the Easter term, amounting to anywhere between two and five days. We're not quarrelling with the professors for any number of extra holidays they want to take. They have a certain amount of work to cover and know ahead about the number of lectures they will need for it. Our sympathies are definitely with them there.

What we do consider grounds for objection is the antiquated and careless methods of advising students that professors are not starting lectures until such a date. Frequently, even, no such advice is given at all, and the student is left to deduce from the evidence of a locked door and reverberating, unanswered knock, that the professor is not even at the University. The writer well remembers, harking back to trusting days of First Year Pass, arriving note-book in hand at the various conveniences of time and place on the first day of term and feeling slightly silly in the presence of vast and echoing desertion in each case. We have since learned that First Year Pass is notorious for this phenomenon, students being equally guilty with professors.

But now, in the third year of a fairly difficult honour course, the case is different. The upper years of an honour course are groups of men and women considered to be making a detailed study of a specialty with definitely serious intentions, and as such to be willing or even anxious to pursue their work. They are much more likely to turn up on the first day of term ready to dig in. And it is likely to cause no little annoyance to a student from Scarborough, York Mills, Mimico or Long Branch or points remoter to commute for hours on oddly scheduled public transport facilities to find at the end of his rainbow a little slip of paper reading "Professor Claptrap will not be able, etc., etc., etc." particularly if such student is pretty certain he could have spent his time a lot more profitably at home.

The writer avoided the difficulty this year with a little discreet telephoning, finding incidentally that one professor was out of town and that the other for the next day wasn't going to lecture anyway. But if all the students in all a professor's classes called up about the same time the night before, this system would be revealed as a trifle cumbersome.

We suggest using the mails. An unsealed letter costs only a cent. By a simple process of multiplication it is seen that three or four hundred cost only three or four dollars. Plus about a dollar's worth of the average secretary's time, the cost of advising by mail the students in a professor's class that he will not start lectures before a certain date, is a mere bagatelle compared with the enormous economic loss entailed by the present system, a loss containing a number of human factors as well as carfare, gasoline, shoe leather and accident insurance.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Saar District—About half a million votes were cast in the Saar area yesterday to decide the future ownership of the district. A German victory is expected and the Nazis have been staging celebrations, while the French element have petitioned the League of Nations for a partitioning of the area. The status quo leaders have charged the foreign plebiscite officials of playing into the hands of the Nazis.

Jugoslavia—A train in the Yugoslavian mountains was completely buried by snow yesterday in the worst blizzard in years, and the occupants are in grave danger.

California—Anelia Earhart Putnam successfully completed her solo flight from Honolulu to Oakland, California, completing the 2400 mile trip in about eighteen hours.

Toronto—The Thorncliffe fire-bug was blamed for an outbreak of fire in the shed containing all the equipment of the Toronto Ski Club. The fire was soon extinguished but might have been disastrous.

Detroit—Toronto Maple Leafs hockey team defeated the Detroit Red Wings by a score of 2-0.

PLAN LECTURE TOUR FOR WORDSWORTH

Anti-War Society Hopes to Call Eastern Canada
Congress

TO BE DISCUSSED TONIGHT

Plans for an eastern Canada Congress to be held in the near future will be the feature of tonight's meeting of the Anti-War Society in the Womens Union. Details of a magazine to be published at the end of the month will also be discussed.

The Congress will deal with the furtherance of world peace by the youth of the Dominion. An important detail will be the presentation of reports from Ken Woodsworth (III Vic) and Marjorie Drummond (III U.C.) who attended the International Congress at Brussels. It is also intended to arrange for a lecture tour for Mr. Woodsworth on his return, during which he will describe his trip and the business transacted at the Congress. Delegates from McGill University and two Windsor high schools have already announced their intention of being present. An Anti-War Society is in process of formation at Queen's and will probably send delegates. Letters are being sent to Western and the Maritime universities.

At this meeting plans will be made for a journal which is to be published at the end of this month containing the complete reports of the Brussels Congress. Mr. Woodsworth and Miss Drummond, who were in England for a short time at the conclusion of the Congress, sailed for Canada on the 9th and are expected in Toronto during the latter part of this week. The world congress is expected to serve as a starting point for important advances in the Canadian societies. A national convention may be held in the spring to unite the Canadian universities on the issue.

MACDONALD-CARTIER CLUB HEADS SUPPORT NEW BENNETT POLICIES

ERROR CORRECTED

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir,
Whilst thanking you for your very kind but—I fear—not wholly accurate account of my academic career, I should like to correct an error which it would be discourteous to ignore.

I am not the Head of the French Department at University College. That position is, of course, occupied by my colleague, Professor F. C. Jeanneret.

Yours sincerely,
F. C. Green.
The Varsity wishes to make a belated acknowledgment of its error.

PHOTO EXHIBITS UNUSUALLY GOOD

Entries not so Numerous as in Previous Showings in Sketch Room

AWARDS MADE TONIGHT

The Thirteenth Annual Exhibition of Photographs is being presented today in the Sketch Room by the Camera Committee of Hart House. Mr. G. F. M. Smith, secretary of the committee, states that the number of prints submitted is slightly less than that of last year but that the quality is quite equal if not superior to previous showings. About eighty of the entries have been hung in the Sketch Room, where they will be judged. Awards in the "Scientific and Nature" class will be made by Professor K. B. Jackson, while the remaining classes will be in charge of Mr. Thornton Johnston. The decisions of the judges will be passed during the private showing at eight o'clock this evening, attended by the committee and their guests. The exhibition will not be thrown open to the students until Tuesday morning. On Sunday, January 27th, members of Hart House will have the opportunity of bringing in guests to view the exhibits.

RARE HONOUR CONFERRED ON DOCTOR A. R. OAFOE

Will be Made Honorary Fellow of Academy of Medicine

Dr. Allan Roy Oafoe, of quintuplet fame, and a graduate of 1907 from the University of Toronto, has been accorded the rare distinction of being made an Honorary Fellow of the Academy of Medicine. The Varsity was informed on Saturday. The person receiving this honour can be elected only by a unanimous vote of the Academy, on the recommendation of the Council. Only three can be elected in any one year, and the number of Honorary Fellows may never exceed twenty-five, so that the membership is necessarily restricted.

In Dr. Oafoe's case, the honour was conferred on him as representing the finest type of general practitioner, whose valuable work is seldom adequately appreciated. The Varsity was told. The membership includes such eminent men as Sir Frederick Banting, Dr. Forthingham, Professor J. J. R. MacLeod, Professor J. C. McLennan, Sir William Munk, and Hon. W. R. Riddell. Deceased members have included Dr. Alexander McPhedran, Sir William Osler and others. Dr. Oafoe has also lectured before the Academy on December 4.

Hopes to Correct Existing

FAVOURS STATE CONTROL

"Unearned Incomes" to be Taxed More Heavily in Future

"The Prime Minister is to be commended for his desire to correct the evils of the capitalist system and to retain at the same time the best features thereof," was the reply of J. Jeffries, president of the Macdonald-Cartier Club, when he was questioned by The Varsity on the subject of recent speeches of the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. "To do this," Jeffries went on, "the Prime Minister has realized that it will be better to embark on a policy of State control rather than State ownership. He sees that it would have been unwise to have embarked upon such a reform before he had brought about a certain measure of recovery."

Speaking of the Liberal party, Mr. Jeffries said, "It is not the desire of the Macdonald-Cartier Club to criticize any party unfairly but we cannot help but feel that the Liberals sadly lack leadership and understanding of present day problems."

R. S. L. McAdam, vice-president of the club, subscribed to the views of Jeffries and added that Bennett has not yet stated how he intended to pay for the proposed reforms or how he would put them through. McAdams re-

BASKETEERS MEET DOUBLE REVERSE

Week-End Disastrous for Varsity Teams in "Y"

JUNIORS BAOLY BEATEN

Mac McCutcheon's junior and intermediate teams took defeat in a double dose at the hands of similar Broadway squads on the latter's home floor Saturday night in two Y.M.C.A. league fixtures. The juniors wound up on the tail end of a 34-14 count while the intermediates were also submerged by a 38-19 score. Both Blue teams appeared to have an off night and the Y teams looked like champions on the evening's play.

The Y juniors showed a complete reversal of their form in which they bowed to Varsity earlier in the year at Hart House. Their beautiful all-around game seemed to have the Blues hopelessly at sea from almost the first skirmish. Mac's boys never got going as the scrappy Y outfit were piling up an overwhelming lead in the first half amassing a 20-4 margin at the half-way mark. The Blues were better able to hold the Y team in check in the

Junior-Senior Dance Proves Very Attractive

On Wednesday, January 23, sparkling music and gay surroundings are expected to attract a large crowd to the annual Junior-Senior dance, held each year by the students of third and fourth years at University College.

The dance will be sponsored by the students in third year, who will act as hosts to all the students who are in their graduating year. The financial arrangements are very attractive, especially to expectant graduates. It is expected that Principal and Mrs. Wallace will lend their patronage to the event.

JEFFERY GETS ONLY GOAL

Draw Game Produces Best
Hockey of Current Season

By George C. Vair

By virtue of consistent attacking thrusts and sound defensive hockey, backed by the sensational goalkeeping of Bob Lougheed, the Varsity senior hockey entry earned a 1-1 tie with Oakville at Maple Leaf Garden last Friday night.

The game was fast and keenly contested with both squads making some nice plays, but they failed to click against Fordor and Lougheed, the rival net minders. Mike Rodden had an easy evening with only four penalties being handed out.

Jeffrey, working with Hendry and McClelland on the first line, got the first counter halfway through the second period. McClelland carried the puck to the defence, but was taken out of play by Moore. Jeffrey picked up the loose disc in the corner and his shot, deflected by Sutcliffe's stick, found the corner of the net. Sixty-eight seconds later Pearcey Allen slipped the rubber to Townsley, who was uncovered and the Villain centre beat the helpless Lougheed for the tying tally.

Led by McClelland, Varsity's hard working pivot player, the Blues bombarded the Oakville citadel during the last period and throughout the overtime, but it had no effect on the red light behind the efficient Fordor. Sutcliffe and Moore bore the brunt of the attack when the Villains began to tire before the relentless Blues in this frame. Moore relented the weakening Oakvilles by doing some creditable rushing and his shots were invariably on the mark, but Lougheed kept him

FIGHTING POSTIES TRIM SENIOR BEES

Post Office Team Play Strong Defensive Game to Win in Overtime

VARSITY USES NEW LINE

A crowd of about 2500 people at Varsity Arena saw the Blue team lose by a 2-1 score to Post Office in the first game of the Major Commercial series on Saturday afternoon.

Varsity presented a new line-up consisting of many of the senior team but were unable to hold the Post Office aggregation, who played a hard fighting brand of hockey.

The first period opened fast with Post Office showing an edge in the play. "Posties" also showed an ability to back check well and on few occasions were Varsity able to break away or get a clear shot on their opponents' net.

Thrills galore filled the second period. Varsity seemed to get a new start and showed a decided improvement over their showing in the first cant. Penalties began to crop up Campbell was Varsity's "bad man" with three. Patterson scored with Varsity short-handed on a shot from the blue line. Then not three minutes later Jeffrey stickhandled his way through the Post Office team for a beautiful goal. In the

REDUCE ADMISSION FOR U.C. ARTS BALL

Will Transfer Dance to Great Hall if Attendance
Warrants

HIGH QUALITY RETAINED

Despite the depression, University College Literary and Athletic Society have decreed that the show must go on, the show in this particular case being that traditional formal frolic, the Arts Ball. This was the decision announced to the members of the college present at the mass meeting held Friday afternoon in the junior common room.

The dance this year will be held in the music room of Hart House, and while the capacity of this room is set at eighty couples, if more than this number are present, the gala event will be transferred to the Great Hall. The price of admission has been sharply reduced from that charged in former years but the sponsors of the dance are emphatic that this fact will in no way impair the usual high quality of this annual affair.

UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA CENTRE OF CONTROVERSY

Educational Aims Tend to Destroy Faith in Country is Charge

The Student Christian Movement in the University of Manitoba is holding an enquiry into the relationships between the university and the province of Manitoba as a whole.

The regular meetings of the conference commence on Jan. 19 and will be held in the parliament buildings.

This conference has been proposed as a result of a strong feeling which has arisen from criticisms suggesting that the university is more closely related to the city of Winnipeg than to the province of Manitoba. University men and women have been accused of seeking an education merely as a means of acquiring positions in urban centres outside the country and thus showing a lack of faith in the future of their province and western Canada as a whole.

The conference proposes to examine the possibilities of building a richer western culture not only in the cities but throughout the provinces.

Hectic Battle Produced As Straight Win

CONNELLY LEADS SCORERS

Bodrug Scores Tying Point in Dying Moments of Extra Session

By Art Rogers

Varsity registered their fifth straight victory in the Big Six on Saturday night, when they nosed out St. Catharines on their own floor by the score of 33-31 in an exciting overtime struggle. From start to finish it was a game that had the fans on the edge of their seats and the grandstand rally that St. Kitts put on in the second half had the rabid home town supporters gasping for air. Then Crowley scored the winning basket for Varsity with thirty seconds left to go and put a great finish on a thrilling basketball game.

The St. Kitts team took an early lead, only to have Varsity wipe it out and forge ahead. At half time the students were on the long end of a 21-13 score and looked like sure winners on the play. They kept up the scoring streak and made it 26-13 before the Saints' rally got under way. Meagher who played a sterling game, was banished and Varsity called a breather with the score 28-27. The checking became very close at this stage and neither team could get near the basket. Hugh Marks and C. Cambray were banished by the foul route and then Bodrug scored a foul shot. On the next play H. Cambray tied the score up but neither team could score before the final whistle.

In the overtime period Dixon put the home team two up in the first minute. The Varsity cause seemed lost with Gold being banished with four personals. Bodrug came through with the tying counter, however, and then Crowley shot the winning basket for Varsity with thirty seconds left.

Connolly was the outstanding man for Toronto with 13 points to his credit and performing the "ironman stunt" by playing the full game. Bodrug and Meagher also helped the Varsity cause, while Dixon and Peart, who was the local favourite, did yeoman service for St. Kitts.

Varsity: Newman (1), Marks, Gold (3), Meagher (8), Connolly (13), Bodrug (6), Munroe, Crowley (2), Mencil, Gordon, and Levy.

St. Kitts: H. Cambray (5), Haine (1), C. Cambray (1), Dixon (11), Newman (5), Peart (8), Graham, Sullivan and Fitzgerald.

Referee: Cal Kellar.

HEPBURN POLICIES PLAYED AT MEETING

Government Censured in Re-

Question

LAUO DECREASED EXPENSES

Scoring the Hepburn government on the basis of its method of handling the liquor question, Trinity College Literary Society in a political debate Friday night placed its official censure on the present government, strongly upholding a motion which "deplored the record of the Hepburn government up to the present."

The administration was also attacked for allegedly endangering Ontario's natural resources by its wholesale dismissal of fire rangers, while the opposition pointed out the decreases effected in expenditures at Queen's Park, and lauded the new welfare policy.

Creative Thinkers

Mr. Aldous Huxley, in a recent address, made a statement which has very real implication for those young things who so lately have been making their friends the recipients of graduation pictures. His words were somewhat as follows: "The efficiency, of the machine necessitates the existence of a race of uncreative producers, whose part becomes less necessary while they in turn become less independent and therefore less self-respecting. Since machines can perform anything except original creation a premium is put upon the creative mind. The artist and original thinker becomes

*Like a colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves—*

He points the way to the conclusion that greater emphasis should be laid on leisure-time occupations; personality rather than efficiency and the process rather than its result a test of value. To quote that very learned gentleman's conclusion: "If we are to survive mechanization we must make a profound change in our philosophy of life."

Whether or not it is a fault in our system we must admit that the years spent at university—especially does this apply to arts students—do not fit the individual to settle readily into the role of uncreative producer. Moreover it is obvious that all members of the class of thirty-five, or any other class, are not original thinkers and artists. Even if that were the case recognition would come to few. The need for their profound change in philosophy will make itself felt at a very early date after graduation. This year's crop have to decide the direction of the change for themselves: if they go with the tide and allow their self-respect to dwindle with the years, they will at worst only be perpetrating the mistake made by countless numbers of their predecessors.

It seems platitudinous to suggest that they find an outlet for their energies in amateur dramatic societies, choirs, leatherwork, etc., etc. But these certainly have their place in a society such as ours, in which such sublimations are deemed right and proper as long as they are useless and amusing. The warning should be included with such prescriptions that the patient should not bore or annoy his friends or in any other way disturb the peace.

But if this is what Mr. Huxley meant when he said that we must make a profound change in our philosophy of life (and it probably wasn't), we would be inclined to agree with our friends of the Soviet Union and their admirers here and elsewhere in saying that these remedies, too, are merely opiates, that a changed environment is necessary in order to bring about such a fundamental change in philosophy that could and would make an industrial society one in which the soul of a B.A. Toronto would delight.

A Step Forward

Plans for the celebration of the sixteenth anniversary of the New School for Social Research in New York City brings to mind the lack of an adequate institution of this kind at Toronto.

Adult education at the New School is not a system by which the adult retrieves the fundamentals of elementary and high school or college work, lost through circumstances which prevented his attending school as a youth. The New School is a means of discovering the adult in education, of diagnosing his problem, and attempting a solution in terms of the present.

The establishment of such a school here would be a progressive step forward, but would go only part of the way toward solving the problem. Teachers, school principals, and holders of graduate degrees form the largest group of students who have attended to New School so far. The case would be the same anywhere. The more one studies, the greater is one's craving for knowledge. We need not worry about the real student, for he would get what he wanted in any case.

There is a vast army of misfits who could be benefited. This army of misfits is composed of people who would be assets to the community if their energies were directed along the right lines, but they are at present unemployable. They belong to all classes. We can find them among our own acquaintances.

Some, pushed into positions by friends, will eventually find a niche which is a tight enough fit that they are not dislodged until they are forgotten. They will live their lives, not bothering anyone particularly, but not benefiting the world as they might. Others, with still less talents, will be intermittently or continuously a burden to some individual, or to the community, as long as they live. It is the tragedy of a wasted life which is most to be regretted. Whether a man be a moron, or an average human being, there is a place for him in the order of society.

The nature of this place, it is the business of a school such as the New School for Social Research to find out. There are courses in every field, both in lecture and workshop. It is the object of these courses to draw a man out and discover something in him, latent though it may be, which will enable him to do some work better than any other.

It is a school which might well be a part of every university in the country.

The Hungry Hungarian

If you look up a political atlas of Europe, you will find that Hungary is a country of eight and a half million people living in an area of forty thousand square miles. If, however, you look at an ethnographical map of the country, you will find that the land of the Magyars far overreaches the political boundaries to take in considerable territory now possessed by the three countries of the Little Entente.

This condition of affairs has been forcibly brought to our attention by the recent happenings in which the city of Szeged on the southern border was swamped by refugees as if a second Vesuvius were just over the Yugoslav border. Piteous from Budapest show families of ten to twelve crowded into temporary quarters in straw-littered barns, distraught mothers trying to catch a wink of sleep with their few possessions as a pillow while their babies lack even the minimum of clothing.

After the World War, Hungary was separated from Austria and shortly after Bela Kun set up his Communist government. To "aid" Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Jugo-Slavia, overthrew this government by force of arms, but on retiring were careful to see that they retained considerable territory whose possession a stronger Hungary would have protested. Czechoslovakia held Pressburg, which gave her a front along the Danube, while the other two countries helped themselves to a considerable portion of the Banat, the fertile plain in the south which has always been one of the leading factors in the agricultural wealth of the country. Even at that, in Transylvania, which was given to Rumania because there is a plurality, not a majority, of Rumanians there, if the German and Magyar element are combined, it should give the country to Hungary; the Germans are Hungarians in all but language, being the descendants of Saxon settlers introduced about a thousand years ago by the Kings of Hungary to resist the Turks who were beginning to menace the country, and hence they have always considered the kings their rulers.

This unfortunate situation may be attributed perhaps to the fact that when the Treaty of Trianon was signed, the country was so prostrate that those who imposed the terms lost sight of the fact that there is a vigorous Magyar nationality which should be taken into consideration even when it is temporarily downed. In all fairness, Hungary has come off badly, and some sort of treaty revision is worth consideration.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Sunday Evening Concert

With two internationally famous symphonic conductors and pianists and Toronto's most colourful singer as artists, Hart House celebrated the one hundredth birthday of its Sunday Evening Concerts last night in the Great Hall. Reginald Stewart and J. Campbell MacInnes accompanied by Dr. Ernest MacMillan were the guests of the evening. Mr. Stewart and Mr. MacInnes were the artists on the first Sunday Evening Concert held on November 12, 1922. In an unbroken series these concerts have been held, eight a year for over twelve years. The whole arrangement owe much to the energy and foresight of Campbell MacInnes, who since Hart House appeared on the campus in 1919 has fostered and helped the growth of musical activities in the University.

Mr. Campbell MacInnes started the programme last evening with two of Graham Peet's arrangements; the first, a French folk-song and the second, a well-known Scottish ballad, The Two Sisters. The singer finished the programme with a group of songs composed and arranged especially for the gifted baritone who has become a beloved campus figure. Among the most outstanding and satisfying of these were, I sing of a maid that is matchless, by Dr. Ernest MacMillan, continued on Page 4)

Let's Go Places

The picture shown at the York on Saturday presented just another of those quaint little French stories. A "proprietor", newly bound in matrimony to an actress, finds that she has signed another movie contract and will not take the planned Noces de Voyage. The poor gentleman, owner of two tickets to Capri, is not to be done out of his trip and invites another young lady to accompany him. This damsel is virtuous, so fortifies her good intentions with a make-believe fiancé who must be produced in flesh and blood when Capri is reached. The wife makes time to personally investigate the situation. Complications? Well, what do you think? Of course, Mr. A. has fallen completely for Miss C. but with the delightful scenic background of Naples, some excellent pantomiming by a hairdresser who is suddenly informed by his fair client that they are engaged, and to the tune of catchy little songs that in no way interrupt the story, the young love is triumphant and the correct angles coincide. The film was a typical modern musical comedy and a graphic answer to those critics who thought French actresses unattractive. The two specimens in Saturday's film could hardly be called beautiful—but they sure were cute! D.H.C.

FAMOUS INSTITUTIONS

Some time ago it was decided that if the students at the University were given other media for self-expression they might give up frolicking around in Square Dances and Sir Roger Uncoverlies and other forms of poker. So they started The Varsity, a literary journal, which has been printed annually ever since.

Besides the Christmas Literary Issue, other copies have been added, now totalling 100 a year. They are all printed because editors are paid by the issue, an idea that has been copied by Mr. Charles Vance Millar.

After a while they called it the Undergraduate Newspaper, because few of the staff ever get to be graduates. There has still been no news published.

When Hart House Great Hall was opened, The Varsity was given an office in the opposite end in order to stifle certain embarrassing truths. The Varsity Office is used chiefly by the S.A.C. for phoning home to say that

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

Today is "Blue" Monday as far as competing Blue teams are concerned, with a number of upsets being recorded in every branch of sport. Out of seven games played Varsity won one, tied two and lost four, which isn't so good in any league. The Varsity-Broadview junior basketball game goes down as the biggest upset when the eastern quintet ran up a 34-14 score to win in a canter. The intermediates, after winning on Wednesday to have one win and one loss to their credit took a night off and let Broadview make a night of it by winning the second game 38-19.

The senior hockey entry avoided being kalsomined in the first half of the senior O.H.A. schedule when they earned a split decision with the Oakville squad. Anybody who saw the collegians spend a weary hour with the Ports last Tuesday night wouldn't have recognized the students in their overtime duel with the Villains. They had speed to burn and on many occasions checked their opponents to a standstill. Bob Longhead is certainly doing a good job in goal in place of Frank Shipp who is still out with a bad eye. In three games last week, two of which went overtime, he held the opposition to five goals.

Yes, Varsity's senior Big Six entry defeated St. Catharines 33-31 to remain undefeated and on top of the heap. It was a see-saw battle with the Blues scoring the winning basket in the last thirty seconds of a hectic game in which Varsity lost Meagher, Marks and Bodrug via the foul route. St. Kitts are the hardest team in the loop to beat on their own floor. If you don't believe us look up the back files. We did.

Evidently scholarship students don't devote all their time to their studies. Witness the case of J. R. Baldwin, graduate of Toronto University who received a Rhodes scholarship last year and is patrolling the right rail for the Oxford hockey team which is now making a tour in Switzerland. He is also secretary-treasurer of the club.

Things look brighter for the rowing enthusiasts attending the University since the annual dinner at Hart House last Friday when Coach Loudon and Dr. Cody mentioned the possibility of new quarters for rowing activities on Toronto's waterfront. If the present plan succeeds, they will be owned by the University and will provide accommodation for graduates, as well as undergraduates who wish to row. It seems to us that this would alleviate the financial situation (at least the maintaining costs) to some extent since certain fees would be required and no doubt the membership would increase over its present number.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

At last the weather has taken a turn which makes it seem that hockey will soon be possible. There is to be a meeting of the Hockey Club on Tuesday, January 15, at 5 p.m. in Room 82, U.C., at which a schedule of the interfaculty games will be drawn up. It is hoped that these games will get started by the middle of next week, provided, of course, we do not have another thaw. This will give the teams a week and a half to get organized and work up some form, and then after that there is really no better practice than an actual game.

U.C. will probably be a far more serious threat to the present champions, the Scarlet and Gold pucksters, than they have been in past years, as they have several intercollegiate players included in their number who previously have been ineligible for interfaculty play. They are entering two teams, and practices are to start this week at the Varsity Arena. All those who are interested are asked by Jean Atkinson, the manager, to watch the Sports Notices for further information.

It is hoped that by the end of this week the first round of the Vic Round Robin badminton tournament will be completed. A goodly number signed the list which was posted at Victoria College last week, and it looks as if there is going to be the same zest and enthusiasm for badminton as is displayed for every sport in which Vic participates.

The next intercollegiate basketball practice is called for 6 p.m. tomorrow. On Thursday there were one or two fewer out than on Tuesday, but these were girls busy with rushing who will in the future be right on deck. A few basketballers turned out on Thursday for the first time, which is encouraging. It is hoped that there will be still more new faces among those present tomorrow evening.

ORGANIZING BEGINS FOR JENNINGS CUP

Interfaculty Hockey Schedule to be Drawn Up Immediately

A meeting of the managers of the hockey teams to be entered in the annual interfaculty Jennings Cup series will be held this afternoon in the Athletic Directorate Room at 4.30 to organize for the season. Under the revised regulations governing interfaculty contests, the Committee of Management now consists of the Vice-President of the Hockey Club and the manager of each of the teams entered in the competition provided that not more than one member shall be from any one faculty or college.

In order to take advantage of the present cold weather and get as many games played on the outside ice as possible, it is essential that there should be a full attendance at this afternoon's meeting.

Teams were entered last year from the following faculties and colleges: S.P.S. (2 teams); Meds (2 teams); U.C. (2 teams); Trinity, Victoria; Dents; Forestry, Pharmacy, Wycliffe; Knox; Emmanuel; O.C.E. If any of these are not being entered this year notice should be sent to Jimmy Mac-

ST. CATHARINES HOLD BLUE TEAM TO DRAW

Tie Game Gives Flower City Team First Point of Series

The Varsity senior water polo team was held to a 5-5 tie on Saturday night in the St. Catharines pool. It was a St. Catharines home game and they showed a complete reversal of form in holding the league-leading students in check. The St. Kitts team had lost all their previous games and only for the superb goal tending of Kingsberg in the Varsity nets they would have registered their first win.

The home team opened up the game with a strong and telling offensive. They scored two goals in the first two minutes of play and led at the half-way mark with an advantage of 3-2. However, Culiner evaded the point and Cress McCatty put Varsity on top a few minutes later with a beautiful solo attempt when he drew the goal-keeper out and whipped the ball into the net. The advantage was wiped out with a Pherson, the chairman, in time for today's meeting. It is hoped to play the first game towards the end of the present week.

HAMILTON SCORE EASY WIN IN INTERCITY POLO TILT

Flare-Up Occurs in Second Period of Exciting Contest

On Friday night the junior water polo squad paid an ill-timed visit to Hamilton for they came away stung by an unexpected defeat of 6-1. This is the same score that Varsity defeated Hamilton here last Wednesday. The superior speed of the homesters was evident in the huge Municipal Pool, where the game was played. They repeatedly swam away from their checks despite the valiant attempts of the Varsity team to match strokes with the famed Hamilton speeders.

The second half was a veritable nightmare for Varsity as Hamilton piled up the goals. Allister and Mc-score from Swan but restored a minute later by W. McCatty. With a minute to go Clark did the hero act for St. Kitts and tied the score.

Along with Kingsberg, the McCatty brothers and Culiner were the pick of the Toronto squad. McGarrigle was the outstanding player for St. Catharines, and had a hand in scoring four of his team's goals.

All games start at 4.10.

Varsity volleyball team lost its first game in the city league at Broadview Y last Saturday afternoon, succumbing to the Y team by a score of 15-12, 9-15, 15-9.

Cormack each registered once and then for variety Jack Hoey took a punch at Beatty and was penalized. Varsity were unable to take advantage of this, however, for Allister got his second goal of the period when his shot had Thompson beaten cleanly. Whiteman added number six for Hamilton and the crowd were commencing to yawn. Beatty saved Varsity the whitewash, however, when he beat the whistle by two seconds with his goal.

Hamilton: Goal, Gillispe; defence, J. Hoey, Whiteman; rover, Purnell; centre, McCormack; wings, B. Hoey, Al. lister.

Varsity: Goal, Thompson; defence, Charters, Gerard; rover, Burrows; centre, Stratton; wings, Beatty, Walker. Referees: Thompson, Dilworth.

second half but at no time was there any doubt as to the ultimate winners. Maxwell and Black were especially outstanding for the Y squad, with Shack, Merson, Chesson and Levantes also playing starry roles in their team's victory. Cooper sank three long shots in the second half, accounting for nearly half of the Blue total. Hogg, McGregor and Kralauer also looked good for Varsity.

"Scoop" Rennie's intermediate team had a much more difficult time defeating Mac's squad than the score would indicate as they counted most of their baskets in bunches of 2 and 3 at a time. They started off as if they were going to mop up the floor with the Blues by piling up a 16-1 lead near the end of the first half, but Varsity came back strong at the end of the half to bring the score up to 17-10 at the whistle. The smooth running Y quintet was functioning on all four the whole evening and the hard fighting Blues found it very difficult to match their pace as the Y team added to their lead in the second half. Their inability to keep the Y centre star, Bredon, and Moores, ace defenceman in check, was disastrous for Varsity as this duo accounted for 21 points between them. Samme, Breathe, Martin and Stronach also displayed championship form for the Y team. The Blues all tried hard, with nobody being especially outstanding.

FIGHTING POSTIES

third period both teams played real smart hockey, giving the crowd some interesting moments, but no score resulted. Full time saw both teams on their last legs.

At the start of the extra frame Morgan missed a beautiful chance for Varsity when he was right in on top of Timson. Summerhill scored on a nice play for Post Office. Varsity put on five forwards but all their efforts were in vain and the game ended with the "Posties" one up.

For the winners the whole team played excellent hockey and to single out one man would be an injustice to his team-mates.

Varsity did not combine as well as usual, but the playing of MacPherson, Jeffrey and Rey left little to be desired.

Post Office: Goal, Timson; defence, Patterson, Marshall; wings, Walker, McLean; centre, Miller; subs, Summerhill, Dobson, Kressler, Phillips, Doran.

Varsity: Goal, Lougheed; defence, Driscoll, Campbell; wings, Jeffrey, Rey, centre, MacPherson; subs, McConvey, Bauer, Valiquette, Cozzi, Morgan.

Referees: Deniord, Mollenhauser.

off the score sheet.

Due to the absence of Captain Jimmie McPherson, Coach Stevens brought up Charles and Valiquette from the intermediates and both turned in fine games. Charles, after once getting the feel of things, showed no hesitation in stepping into all and sundry and his speedy rushes had the crowd of 3,000 on their feet at frequent intervals.

Lougheed, making his second senior appearance, merits four stars for his evening's work, while McClelland, besides leading the Blue offensive, showed a decided penchant for back-checking opposing forwards.

Moore was outstanding on the Oakville team, while the Allen brothers, Peer, Townsley and Forder continue to turn in remarkable performances for the Villains.

Varsity: Goal, Lougheed; defence, Charles, Rey; centre, McClelland; wings, Jeffrey, Hendry; subs, Devine, Sweeney, Valiquette, Campbell.

Oakville: Goal, Forder; defence, Moore, Sutcliffe; centre, Townsley; wings, P. Allen, Peer; subs, Cassidy, S. Allen, Kitson, Mathewson, Cunningham.

Referee: Mike Rodden.

The theory that "a little learning is a dangerous thing" may explain why some students cut class.

Some students should remember that there are other students who are conscientious enough to complete their courses without polishing apples.

ductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and accompanist last evening, and Is my team ploughing? by George Butterworth. Leo Smith's music for G. K. Chesterton's poem The Donkey gives the poem a very undesired effect. The doleful and bitter interpretation does not bring out the subtle joy and humour in the poem.

Reginald Stewart gave a sparkling programme which consisted mostly of Chopin, although the meaty portion was the Prelude and Fugue in minor by Mendelssohn, and Moussorgsky's Hopok. Mr. Stewart had ample opportunity to display all the brilliancy and agility for which he is noted. The melodic pianoforte music of Chopin, of which the Wolfs in C sharp minor and the Bolide in A flat were the most delightful, was so enjoyed that the tremendous applause brought Mr. Stewart back for an encore.

The Sunday Evening Concerts at Hart House have now become a tradition and as such their successful future is assured. But more, the regular capacity attendance is a tribute to those who have accepted the responsibility of preparing the concerts. The students have shown, by their unfailing interest, that they appreciate the co-operation of the musicians and that Sunday Evening Concerts are as permanent as Hart House itself.

Friday Afternoon Recital

Mr. Boris Berlin, pianist, and Adolph Watroff, baritone, were the guest artists at Hart House last Friday afternoon.

The entire programme featured Russian music. The artists succeeded splendidly in creating the atmosphere requisite to their numbers.

Mr. Berlin's descriptions were interestingly presented and his first number was The Lark by Glinka, who, as Mr. Berlin pointed out, was really the first Russian composer of any note. Glinka was, through his orchestral powers, the teacher of Stravinsky, a modern writer and orchestra conductor.

The Lark was followed by Tchaikovsky's Troika, which was well received and well played.

Mr. Adolph Watroff, a prominent young Toronto tenor, by virtue of an enthusiastic and dramatically forceful personality, captured the hearts of his listeners completely by his excellently rendered group of Russian folk songs. Mr. Watroff's voice is of a powerful and satisfying character, and by far the most important, well controlled.

His first numbers were Tempt me not, by Glinka, and The siege of Kagar by Moussorgsky. Both numbers were expressively given and a decidedly Russian flavour prevailed throughout, which, being decidedly foreign, was decidedly interesting.

Mr. Boris Berlin's final numbers were well received, particularly his modern Russian Scriabin number—Prelude.

Art Gallery

Of particular interest to undergraduates at the Gallery this month is the exhibition of student problems and water-colour sketches of the architectural students. The designs cover a wide diversity of subjects from a beach club and a residence for a retired naval officer to a monastery in the Rocky Mountains. The subjects are competently handled on the whole with the modern treatment having a decided preference. The treatment of some of the subjects show a lack of individuality, which is always a bad sign in a school. The renderings showed competent handling but were lacking in individuality of treatment.

The field sketches in water colour were the highlight of the students' show. The small display compares very favourably with the work done in this medium by the College of Art students. The handling of a waterfall and a water-side scene by J. T. Ridley were exceptionally good. His technique shows a confidence in handling that is very satisfying. Two northern scenes by W. H. Gilleland are also worthy of special mention. His Birch Trees and Water is a capable piece of work. More power to the students. It is to be hoped that we will see more of their work in the Hart House Exhibition next month.

The display of photographs and models by the Toronto architects is not up to snuff this year. Perhaps it is due to a lack of activity in the profession during the last few years. At any rate the work displayed contains nothing of any outstanding merit. The miniature interiors which are the work of local interior decorators has attracted considerable interest. They were inspired by similar work from New York which was shown here at the last architectural. They are not as well executed as the American examples but are no doubt of interest to home-lovers. The display of Quebec handicrafts which completes the exhibition is an interesting display of some of the fine work which was done in early Canada which is only now being fully realized.

Toronto Symphony

The special matinee concert of Saturday permitted us to hear Dalies Frantz, guest artist of Tuesday evening last, in Beethoven's Concerto No. 1. The successive engagement was welcome as a means of crystallizing first impressions and we might say sustaining them.

The very great enthusiasm which Mr. Frantz evoked Tuesday evening when he played the Liszt piano concerto, was not surprising in that his

RELIGIOUS ISSUE

My Dear Ted,

Why are students so mentally apathetic towards religion?—because after all, they are. Do you ever see religious meetings on the campus as crowded as social functions? Do people come to you and ask you to come to a prayer meeting, cheerfully expecting an enthusiastic acquiescence? No!

Don't you feel that students hate the idea of religion, and everything connected with it? It seems to me that to some people it is only a cloak for present evils, and to others it is only an alternative to a fiery hell. I am beginning to believe that these opinions really are rather general.

Consider a student. In conversation you find him interesting—good ideas, good expression—but touch on his personal religion and he "closes up". No, he doesn't want to be drawn into anything like that. Why not? Well, it's not just in his line. Hasn't he any beliefs? Yes, but why should they be shown to the public? They're private property so to speak.

One begins to wonder if there is anything in this religion business. It seems that religion isn't wanted—what good does it do to talk about "objectivity" and standards of values? And yet—look at these religious organizations in our midst. I nearly always find that those people that I like best to imitate have a close connection with these groups. I don't know of any other people so energetic, hard working, and so full of life, as these. They seem so confident that life is wonderful and worthwhile! I wonder why! It is really a most complicated affair!

reading was ideally suited to the music—brilliant and sympathetic with romantic feeling—and his manner engaging indeed.

But that Mr. Frantz should immediately be included in the ranks of the greatest pianists seems to me highly problematical! The Saturday concert revealed weaknesses all too apparent. The Beethoven was excellent in its own way but that way was decidedly romantic. Beautifully played it was—even too delicate for the background of a rough accompaniment—but with a weakness rather than a strength of conception.

This feeling of "almost but not quite" was even more noticeable in the solo group. The Organ Fugue began with promise but fell away in anti-climax. The Intermezzo was ordinary. The Ritual Fire Dance unconvincing and too hurried to be decisive.

Much musical endowment and technical facility there, to be sure, but much subtlety and a corresponding lack of classic strength and stability.

After the blame thing is printed a guy named Harry delivers it to all the colleges and residences, where the students are expected to convey it to the various receptacles provided for its destruction.

The chief function of the paper is to justify the existence of the various

Senior Vic. Start Season With Impressive Victory

Opening the current baseball season, Trinity and Senior Vic played a fine game of ball on Friday afternoon in the big gym at Hart House. Senior Vic won the game by the overwhelming score of 14 to 3, and on the play they deserved the win. In the first inning they opened up with a barrage of hits and piled up a score of eight runs before three were counted out. Edwards, the Victoria pitcher, blanked the Black and Red batters with his superb pitching in the second half of the inning.

In making these statements he added that he was referring particularly to legislation regarding "unemployment insurance" and uniform company laws.

"The lower and middle classes in Canada are taxed beyond their ability to pay. Canada cannot go further into debt. ### MR. COE DISCUSSES LONG'S POSITION

Declares Conditions Improving
Under Roosevelt's
New Deal

PENSION PLAN IMPRACTICAL

"Outside of the state of Louisiana, I don't think the general population of United States takes Huey Long seriously," Mr. V. F. Coe told The Varsity yesterday in an interview in which he was questioned regarding the career of Huey Long and his chances of being the next president of United States. Mr. Coe described many interesting incidents relating to the rise of Long to the position of virtual dictator of his state. In regard to an address that Senator Long delivered last week in which he spoke of the "Roosevelt Depression," Mr. Coe said, "Huey Long is hardly justified in speaking of the 'Roosevelt Depression' conditions in the United States have yearly shown a certain degree of improvement since Roosevelt's New Deal came into being."

The reporter also questioned Mr. Coe on the Townsend plan for old age pensions, which, it is proposed, will be financed by a two per cent sales tax. "I have grave doubts," he said, "that such a scheme could be financed by a two per cent sales tax." The scheme, as outlined, will provide $200 a month income for all persons in United States over 60 years of age. It would cost the country about $24,000,000,000 to finance such a proposition. It is hoped that by putting this money into circulation, economic conditions would show an immediate improvement. "We cannot wait and suffer while Roosevelt's construction programme is getting under way," says Huey Long.

SAAR PROBLEM STRESSES NEED OF TREATY REVISION

VARSITY DEBATERS TO GO ON THE AIR

Smith and Rae Will Debate Against Queen's Team

NATION-WIDE HOOK-UP

A. C. Smith and Saul Rae will represent Varsity in the first round of an inter-university radio debating series, which is composed of most of the important Canadian universities, on Friday evening, January 18, from 9:00-9:30 p.m. over the Toronto radio station, CRCT. They will debate against the Queen's University team of J. T. Weir and E. T. Sherwood. S. M. Hermant, IV U.C., who last year participated in probably the first Canadian radio-broadcasted intercollegiate debate, will assist Smith and Rae.

The subject is "Resolved that there is as much scope for individuality in industry under government control as under restricted competition." Each speech will be given over the radio station of the city concerned. The nation-wide hook-up will take place under the control of the Canadian Radio Commission.

The winner of the Varsity-Queen's debate will contend on February 1 against the winner of the McMaster-Western University debate. The McMaster-Western debate will be held on January 25, the subject being "That our system of co-education in universities should be abolished."

Semi-finals will then be held between the Ontario group and a western group composed of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The other semi-final will be between a French group composed of Laval, Montreal and Ottawa Universities, and an Eastern group including McGill, New Brunswick and Dalhousie.

In all probability the final debate will be held on February 15. The subject for the final debate will be "Resolved that democracy is suitable only for periods of prosperity."

FOUNDED IN 1852

"Trinity College is celebrating today the Ceremony of Inauguration which was held on Thursday, January 15th, 1852, when the first students were admitted and addresses were delivered by the Right Reverend John Strachan, D.D., Lord Bishop of Toronto; the Chief Justice, Sir John Beverley Robinson, the Venerable Archdeacon Bethune and the Reverend George Whitaker, first Provost of the College."

This was the statement given out by Professor Cosgrave, present Provost of Trinity. The commemoration takes the form of a banquet, followed by speeches, at which all Trinity students gather to drink toasts to the founders.

"In 1904 Trinity College was federated with the University of Toronto, since which date students of Trinity College have received instruction from University professors in subjects taught by the University and have been enabled to qualify for all scholarships and degrees of the University of Toronto."

Political Welfare of Europe

Co-operation

LANGE DISCUSSES SAAR

Advent of Hitler Regime Arouses Opposition in Saar

"The Saar has indeed been a test case. It has not only shown the strength and weakness of the League of Nations, but it has proved again that Franco-German relations are by the very nature of European politics the key to peace or war in the world." This was the opinion expressed by Victor Lange of the German staff of University College in a discussion of the Saar problem. Yesterday afternoon he broadcast an address to the Canadian Club on this same subject.

He went on to say, "It has shown that the political welfare of Europe cannot in the future depend on the letter of the treaty, but only on a flexible co-operation between France and Germany, and on the sound application of the principle of international equality. No two great nations in Europe are by the very nature of their economic life so well fitted for collaboration as the two central states of Europe."

"There was until January, 1933, no Saar problem," declared Mr. Lange.

NO COMPLICATIONS IN PARLIAMENTARY CLUB

Governor-General Hermant to Open House on Thursday

"With the exception of the regrettable incident resulting from the recent drop in the price of green apples, there have been no internal complications in the ranks of the University College Parliamentary Club," stated N. M. Pivnick, in a statement made to The Varsity yesterday. Mr. Pivnick, speaker of the house, was unable to give any information as to the possible content of the speech from the throne, implying that he was "out in the cold again."

The session will be called to order at four o'clock, Thursday, Jan. 17th, by Gov.-Gen. Lord Hermant. The premier, Rt. Hon. Wilfrid Smith, has successfully weathered the storm of the Christmas recess, and Hon. Israel Kaplansky is once again the Leader of the Opposition.

From a reliable source, The Varsity learns that there is absolutely no foundation for the rumour that Premier Smith is to make his radio debut in the near future, or for the equally current report that several co-eds are to be presented at this session.

Saar Votes Nazi

Official information this morning announces an overwhelming victory for the Hitlerites in the Saar plebiscite. 476,089 votes were cast for reunion with Germany, and but 48,256 against it.

Reports state that Germany has perfected every detail to enable the reincorporation of the Saar Valley into the Reich within a month. The vast majority of this rich mining area have indicated their approval of this change of government, and those in opposition are reported ready to flee the country.

Anti-Hitlerites, Jews in particular, are emigrating rapidly to France, whose frontier towns are prepared to house and feed temporarily the estimated 40,000 refugees. The influx of these malcontents is expected to add immeasurably to France's unemployment difficulties.

DISCUSSES LEGISLATION

Mr. Bruce Marshall, III Political Science, a staunch defender of Liberalism, when asked for his opinions on the Hon. R. B. Bennett's radio talks, replied, "Mr. Bennett's bedtime stories over the radio have fizzled out. The only thing about which he has been definite is what has already been done. In his speech last Friday he bemoaned the fact that the opposition had not been content to sit unconcerned while he ran the country."

"Secondly, the Liberal party stood opposed to a privately controlled Central Bank. That they are right is proven by the attempt of St. James St. to gain control of it through the Canadian Chamber of Commerce."

"Thirdly, it was through effective opposition by the Liberals that the Natural Products Marketing Act, drawn up only after a great deal of pressure by the B.C. fruit growers, was amended some 27 times and as a result has amounted to something."

"Next, the Farmers' Credit Arrangement Act, for which Mr. Bennett claims so much credit is by no means new. Similar legislation has been in force for years in the Western provinces; a Liberal government in Alberta, having first introduced it under a public utilities commission."

"Again, Mr. Bennett also wrongly claims the credit for making arrange-

NEW OBSERVATORY AWAITS TELESCOPE

Installation of Main Lens Expected by Early Summer

SECOND LARGEST IN WORLD

"It is unlikely that the construction of the observatory will be completed within my lifetime," Professor R. K. Young, of the department of astronomy in this University told The Varsity during an interview last Friday, when asked how soon construction work on the new David Dunlap Observatory would be completed. "But," he added with a smile, "if you refer to the construction of the chief telescope, that awaits only the arrival and installation of the main lens. There has been several failures in the attempt to produce the finishing process in England; but we expect it to be shipped in the early summer."

The casting, annealing, grinding and polishing of this two and one half ton disc forms a history in itself. The 74-inch telescope, when completed, will rate second in light grasping power, only to the 100-inch telescope at Mt. Wilson, California. No pains have been spared to make it efficient in performance and convenient to operate. Its fifty ton bulk is electrically controlled and embodies the last word in mechanical precision.

In the south dome of the administrative building is a 19-inch reflector, constructed by Professor Young. A photo-visual telescope may be secured for the centre dome and a battery of fast photographic telescopes for the one to the north. The building itself

ENGLISH LANGUAGE MOST UNIVERSAL

Deny Inability of English

OPINION OF FACULTY

Members of the language departments of the University of Toronto do not seem to agree with the suggestion that the English race are born with an inability to learn foreign languages. Whereas foreigners come into the country and within a year or two can speak the language almost perfectly, English people may spend many years abroad and know almost as little about foreign languages as they would had they remained at home.

"I certainly do not think that there is any inherent capacity or ability for learning foreign languages in any people," said Professor Jeanneret, head of the French Department at University College. "Perhaps it is due to the fact that English people can get along with their own language so universally, that they do not make the effort to learn any other. Foreigners are forced to make such an effort but otherwise I do not find as a rule that they speak

Roosevelt May Be Forced to Adopt Dictatorial Powers

GOLD CLAUSE BONDS ISSUE

Supreme Court's Decision
May Break Present System

A new crisis is being faced in the United States, in the opinion of Dr. L. T. Morgan of the Economics staff, that may force President Roosevelt to again adopt dictatorial powers, as a result of the case that is now before the Supreme Court as regards the Gold Clause bonds.

The bonds in question have a clause that guarantees the payment will be made in gold; which is opposed to the present monetary policy of the Roosevelt regime. This policy has caused the value of the gold dollar to rise to one dollar and sixty-five cents, and the investors are suing the government for payment in gold or its equivalent in American money. The attorney-general of the United States claims that the action of the government in voiding the gold clauses (and paying an American dollar for a gold dollar demanded) is strictly within its constitutional rights. The Supreme Court will hand down its decision in a short time.

An adverse decision, according to Dr. Morgan, besides tremendously increasing public and private debt in the States might bring to a breaking point a system already in difficulties. Such unfavourable action might indicate the future fate of much other emergency legislation, that has been passed since President Roosevelt came into power; hence the worry of the government over this decision.

The government, however, has two alternatives by which it may circumvent an adverse decision. First, the president may declare an emergency and thereupon assume dictatorial powers.

KING GORDON SPEAKS ON SOCIAL GOSPEL

Urges that Canada be Moulded Along Christian Lines

STRESSES CHURCH'S POWER

"The world is undergoing a revolutionary period," affirmed Professor J. King Gordon. "It is quite futile to take sides, either for or against this condition." Professor Gordon was addressing the S.C.M. of Victoria College on the "Futility of the So-called 'Social Gospel' of Modern Times", yesterday at Emmanuel College.

European affairs have now reached an advanced point, which discussion groups are unable to change. During their periods of development, each country was open to various influences. Far-seeing men took advantage of these opportunities to further themselves and their countries. This attitude is confirmed by Mussolini's words, "I saw an empty throne and I took it." Professor King Gordon urged that Canada, which is still in a fluid condition, should be moulded along Christian lines. He affirmed that it is quite possible to do this, because, while men may not make a revolution, they can and should influence its course.

Before the Russian revolution religion was closely bound up with the existing social order. The result was that with the sweeping changes effected by the revolution, everything connected with the old order, including religion, had to go. Now is the time

Motor Show is Voted Swell Schoolmen Raise a Lusty Yell

"No, no, a thousand times no," sang 800 enthusiastic Schoolmen with some assistance from Gypsy Rhouma-Je, Stan St. John, and an unidentified flageolet-player. "More, more," shouted the audience, for last night was Engineers' night at the Motor Show. And then silence, while enraptured Scientists watched Colette and Barry do the old steps with a new twist and all the frills.

Motorboats, motor cars, not that anyone noticed them, Toike Oikes and more Toike Oikes. Beautiful yachting girls who sang sailor songs to admiring Sophs and Frosh, and contracted writer's cramp autographing literature ("telephone number, please").

The fashion parade was voted a great success. The boys certainly do like the new cellophane dresses. Applause and encores greeted each new beauty, but it appears that the clothes received only passing notice, although one very, very Freshman was heard to remark that the dresses were too far into them, or the models were too far into them. Many a Schoolman has blustered hands today as proof of his appreciation.

Yes, there were cars there too. One chap actually started to look at them, but they tapped him, so that was all right. The best chariot in the lot, so said they all, was the vest-pocket Vauxall, looking for all the world like a power kiddie car; seating one passenger, this microscopic conveyance was shipped across the ocean by aeroplane and boat.

Well, it was a great night!

Know Thy University

Among the criticisms levelled at us as students one which bears more weight than the rest, is that we fail to enrich our store of general knowledge. The standards of our University demand a creditable showing in our chosen field of study. It is up to us, as individuals, to face the self-imposed task of laying up a greater store of knowledge than that demanded by our specialized duties. To begin with, we should "Know our University".

With how much of its history are we familiar? Do we know all the departments that make up the University of Toronto? Do we know the approximate location of each department, when and how it became part of the University, and what is its contribution?

The new David Dunlap Observatory, which is described on today's front page, should be of general interest to all students. We should know that the Observatory is near Richmond Hill, about fifteen miles north of Toronto, because atmospheric conditions are more favourable there than elsewhere near Toronto. We should know that it is Canada's third large observatory. We should realize that it fills a long-felt need in the Astronomical Department of this University, and will enable scientists to attack the problems waiting to be solved. We should know these facts, even though the possession of a giant telescope has never been foremost amongst our personal desires.

Questions

"Mexico City, January 8, 1935: Five thousand students rioted around headquarters of the Red Shirts, militant anti-clerical organization . . . Five students were . . . wounded by gunfire . . . and more than twenty students were arrested."—Toronto Evening Telegram.

If a bit of research amongst newspaper files were indulged in, it would result in quotations of a similar nature from almost every country in the world—except Canada.

Why is Canada such an outstanding exception? Is it because Canadian politics are so undeveloped (or should it read that interest in politics by Canadians is so undeveloped?), or is the Canadian student so involved in academic activities that he has no time or inclination for the affairs of the country?

Until recently the United States student (and with him was lumped in the Canadian student in the term—the "American student") was regarded with great contempt by European standards of judgment. The only thing over which the American student could become enthusiastic was sports—rugby, baseball, hockey, etc. Within the past few years an active interest in public affairs has been expressed. And it would seem that once such an interest is apparent, a new vitality becomes inherent in student life: the students become a definite factor in the community. It is notorious how rapidly Canada follows where the United States leads—a very natural big-brother leadership, of course. Will the Canadian student follow the U.S.A. student in this?

It is generally accepted now that the average Canadian is becoming more political-conscious—decidedly so. If student life is a reflection of community life in general, then it must follow that the average Canadian student is becoming more political-conscious. And there would seem to be some truth in that—judging from scraps of conversation overheard amongst students across the lunch table, at tea time, or during the odd bit of gossiping. The old questions of "who won?", "what was the score?", "were you at the game?", are gradually being replaced by "what do you think of so-and-so's speech?", "were you at such-and-such a meeting?", "what is the situation in Timbuctoo".

In the U.S.A., participation in activities that result in notoriety for the university are followed by the expulsion of the students involved. What degree of attention is paid by University authorities to the political organizations on the campus of any tinge, from pure white to flaming scarlet? Has any organization or individual member of an organization been singled out and given warning against too decided an expression of opinion? If the authorities have so far not been alarmed by the extremely weak dabblings of the students, will that policy continue? If current activities amongst the students are being jealously watched, will observation change to active interference, if the students unite strongly on any national political policy?

We are not considering the good or bad qualities or such a situation. This is merely a hypothetical questioning as to the reception that would be given to newspaper accounts of the nature quoted above, with "Canada" replacing "Mexico".

Arma Virumque Cano

It's dark on Observatory Hill. It isn't a very large hill,—just a high sloping lawn criss-crossed with the muddy footprints of people in a hurry. People who come to Observatory Hill are always hurrying,—hurrying to lectures, to lunch, to labs. No one ever comes to Observatory Hill at night. Perhaps if the hill were a little higher it might be more romantic. The cannons and the towering flag pole lend their atmosphere, but the Observatory isn't even that, anymore.

In fact, Varsity almost hasn't got an Observatory Hill, nor has it a Kissing Rock. But the cinder pathway running down behind the Museum and along the Trinity Campus is a handy shortcut from Diana's when you've got to get back by 10.30, and it's a nice little stroll even in winter time. Then, there's the sheltered walk that leads through the U.C. quad and along the Cloisters. Even the shortcut below Knox is blessed with its Gothic shadows.

Certainly, residence reception rooms aren't much help, and late leaves are a nuisance. But love laughs at late leaves, and the Old Ox Road can be any romantic spot. For it's dark almost everywhere, when it's dark on Observatory Hill.

Count Your Blessings

The modern tendency is so generally toward fault-finding that it may be a healthy change for our mental attitude if we occasionally stop and "count our blessings". There are many points on which the University may be criticized and these columns have not been behindhand in voicing the criticism. But let us sometimes give credit where credit is due and we shall be surprised at what our University has to offer us.

Passing up for the moment the extremely high academic standards for which we are so justly famous, let us scan the Coming Events column of just one issue of The Varsity. There is scarcely a branch of extra-curricular activity not represented on our campus. Politics, economics, music, drama, journalism, debating. Surely no one ever came here and failed to find at least one activity in which he could take an interest. Whatever may be the particular flare of the student he is assured of an opportunity of indulging in it.

There are, of course, those who confine themselves to the purely academic side of college life, and they it is who are frequently the first to criticize the University. The fault lies in themselves. They are enjoying only half their heritage and one day when scholarships and medals have been forgotten by an unheeding public they will regret their failure to benefit from campus activities.

It is only by entering into college life in all its aspects that we receive that training for later life which is the aim of every University. Here within the sheltering walls of the University we have an opportunity to experiment with our pet theories which we might never find in the world. So let us take full advantage of all that is offered us and be thankful.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Hart House Theatre

Dramatic mystery pervades Hart House Theatre this week. Rupert Harvey has directed an English mystery tale written by Emyln Williams A Murder Has Been Arranged. Williams is a young English actor and writer, especially remembered for his very fine translation and adaptation from the French of The Late Christopher Bean. A Murder Has Been Arranged is good theatre, very gripping if somewhat unconvincing. The caste carries the play off well. Margaret Grant as Beatrice Jasper, Andrew Allan as Maurice Mullins and Percy Schutte as Sir Charles Jasper take the major roles and they give the play all the required atmosphere. Miss Grant, a recent star in the Hart House firmament, is for the most part very well poised on the stage and has besides a pleasing, well trained voice. She might, however, control her voice and her acting a bit in the more violent scenes. Andrew Allan as the villain is open to somewhat the same criticism; to be more precise, he over-acts in the long second act. The arranging and committing the murder is too long-winded and flowing in the Shakespearean manner, all of which over-strains the imagination. Murray Bonnycastle as Jimmy North, the rather ineffectual hero, would be better if his stage movements were more definite. Eleanor Barton as Miss Groze, the scheming secretary, gives a sound performance and Frances Rostance as the gold-grubbing mother, is better in this modern play than she often is in her frequent appearances in Dickens and Shakespeare. Charlotte Kyle does a very convincing bit of characterization as the Cockney maid.

The plot of the play is laid on the stage of a "dead" theatre in London and is developed around a will for two million pounds, black magic and an unscrupulous rival heir. The combination of a spooky, empty theatre, ghosts, and well planned murder results in a very thrilling play, which is effectively enhanced by a capable caste, thoroughly directed. The sad part of the evening was the half-filled house. May we suggest that more publicity be done for Hart House productions. Somebody, not too afraid of current expression and who could put in some time and

Eddie Cantor provides the current disappointment at Loew's this week in his latest extravaganza, "Kid Millions". There is no shortage of effective settings or extravagant costumes, and the gorgeous gals, typical of any Cantor picture, are more gorgeous than ever before, but somehow the picture falls flat. The length of the picture, together with the entire absence of a plot, leaves something lacking. If you are a Cantor fan you will like it, however, and in any case there are a couple of catchy tunes well sung, and plenty of good laughs. There is a really beautiful travel talk on Ireland, and a hilarious Laurel and Hardy comedy to round out the programme.

C.R.E.

For good rousing entertainment of the old school, Broadway Bill, at present occupying the screen at the Imperial, can certainly not be equalled in this age of Limberlosts and Cabbage Patches and what not. A chronicle of the events of the film would sound as if several thriller writers had pooled all their stock situations and added a couple of new ones. The difficulties that lie in the way of Broadway William (who, by the way, is a racehorse) in his efforts to get to the post for the Imperial Derby are such as to discourage a veritable Bucephalus, but in spite of all, William finally gets to the post, which really was not a surprise, and quite orthodoxly he comes in by a nose in spite of the jockey's efforts to pull him.

The story is interlarded with some very amusing character bits, and some good humour that saved it from being mere food for Saturday afternoon rumination, and there is an attempt, fairly successful, to present a picture of true sport in contrast to the low and mean attitude of the professional gamblers who infest the turf. Bill is a

When we advertised for more contributions, and went so far as to offer prizes, we were rash enough to use the words "good, bad or indecent". So far the contestants for the big theatre tickets have concentrated on the third alternative. Here is the best, worst, and indecentest of them all.

From The Varsity: "Dear Aunt Mary; I have been engaged to a boy for twelve years but have not yet married because of my youth. Don't you think thirty is the proper age for a woman?"

Is the girl paying the penalty for being a tardy Nordic, or is she just plain lucky?

Cherchez le vieux pappy, I'd say! Mother India.

Hm! C-C C-C

Apart from this sort of thing, the contest is progressing quite well. Mother India is otherwise anonymous; but if she succeeds in identifying herself, (or, as we suspect, himself), more precisely, she is so far in the lead. However, the identification will entail the breaking down of the suspicions of a hardboiled and untrusting nature.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

There is to be a very important and vital meeting of the Hockey Club at 5 p.m. this afternoon in Room 82, U.C. at which the schedule for the inter-faculty games will be drawn up. It is essential that every representative be present. One single absentee can make the entire meeting a total fiasco since every college's practice hours must be considered. And if the schedule is not completed immediately the hockey weather will disappear and this sport will have to be indefinitely postponed, which will lead to large conflicts and complications.

In accordance with the custom of past years the Hart House pool is again to be loaned to us for a practice swim on Thursday, February 28, the preliminaries on Tuesday, March 5, and the final meet on Wednesday, March 6. It is very unfortunate that the women have no adequate pool of their own, and it is only through the extreme kindness of Hart House that competitive swimming between the various faculties is made possible. We have been asked by the president of the Swimming Club to convey the appreciation of all the women swimmers of the University for this very real privilege.

Several of the faculties have not been heard from as yet and have made no effort to indicate whether or not they intend to be represented in the meet. If any person or faculty wishes any further particulars she has only to phone Enid Palmer, Kingsdale 2231 to get full information. The meet provides for all types of swimming and diving and besides being a very good thing to watch, gives a big thrill to all participants. That Hart House pool is a real place to swim! And may we add here that the grads are giving up their regular night to allow us to have the pool for practicing on February 28.

Anyone who plans to play hockey or badminton or to swim should see Dr. Gordon immediately. It really is unfair to her to let it all pile up until the last minute. And after all these physical examinations are for our own good—we are not doing Dr. Gordon any large favour by going to her.

BLUE TEAM MEET TORONTOS TONIGHT

Tie with Oakville Team
Marks Lone Success

DIFFERENT LINE-UP

"T was ever thus, "To the victors go the spoils" and so far with the first half of the senior hockey schedule completed the University of Toronto hockeyists have only been able to enjoy the booty of success on the old winter pastime to the extent of one lone point gained in their 1-1 overtime draw with the shifty Villan sextet of Oakville. The persistence with which Dame Fortune has disdained to smile forth upon the battling Blues has been discouraging, but tonight at Varsity Arena Stevens' senior sextet will endeavour to obliterate their charitable idiosyncrasies of the past by turning aside that all star mercantile aggregation known as the Torontos.

Their last encounter at Maple Leaf Gardens was a natural and Torontos were very fortunate in gaining a 4-3 decision over the senior Blues after a rousing battle in which the students carried the play in a frenzied attempt to score. However, it was not to be as the Torontos outfit hung on, adhering to safe defensive tactics. In tonight's match the Varsity squad should be able to cope with the more or less individual sorties of the Torontos with their fast combination plays. However, their slipping from close in should tell the tale and Varsity are determined to come through and raise the prestige of the Varsity squad among hockey's fandom.

The lineup for the senior Blues will likely be a little different as Warren Stevens is determined to find the best combination possible and for the defence chores Campbell, Charles and Rey will be available, while formation of the forward lines will likely have McClelland, Hendry, and MacPherson back in harness again.

VARSITY ROWING CREW COMMENCES TRAINING

All of Last Year's Victorious
Rowers Will Again Compete

It is a long cry from January to July, but the Varsity rowing crew last night began training in hopes of producing a winning crew at the Canadian Henley. Promptly at five o'clock last night, Coach T. R. Loudon assembled his forces in the rowing room and sent them through their paces.

All of last year's crew which notched up the eighth successive victory in the intercollegiate match with McGill will be back this year. As three of the team were under the usual poundage for senior eight competition it is likely that this year Varsity will have a strong 150 pound team as well as a senior outfit.

While last night was the first night and newcomers are expected to enrol all week, two men showed prospects of strengthening the team. The first was Pratt from British Columbia, who rowed for Canada in the doubles at the 1932 Olympics. Sutton was the other surprise of the evening as this diminutive gentleman weighs only 101 pounds and should be very suitable for the position of cox.

It is expected that there will be a keener interest than usual shown in rowing this year as plans are under way to build a new club house. If these materialize, it is expected that four crews will be formed, two senior, a 150 and a 140 pound outfit. As the winning teams at the Canadian Henley will be sent to the Olympics the competition should be more strenuous than usual on the Welland Canal this summer.

A lifetime of happiness! No man alive could bear it; it would be a hell on earth.—George Bernard Shaw.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By B. J. McGuire

Toronto's chosen people, the men who form the hockey club bearing that name, and chosen for the express purpose of doing battle for Canada in the next Olympics, will do one of many preliminary battles at Varsity Arena tonight. The opposition will be the senior Blues, proud possessors of a brand new point in the O.H.A. circuit. Just how well the students will bear up under this new responsibility remains to be seen. One thing which inspires confidence is the fact that they cannot lose this acquisition. Theirs will be the task of adding to it. It will be recalled that the last time the Blues started against this aggregation, people felt just a little bit sorry for them. On that occasion they spotted the Torontos three goals early in the session and then went on to provide one of the most thrilling encounters of the season. A repetition of this would certainly enhance the popularity of the hard fighting youngsters.

Two truck loads of glory hunting athletes will roll in to the U.S. late this week in an effort to best some of the neighbours' boys in the field of athletic endeavour and to get some cheap cigarettes. The first contingent will leave Thursday and will take along some trunks and a basketball for a series of encounters with colleges at Alfred, Oronia and Scranton. The second brigade will lie themselves to Buffalo and Rochester and there will meet the opposition in a series of bitter swimming duels. The Varsity squad will have some speedy natators on the starting float and should do themselves proud in this tour.

While for the past few years it has been customary for Varsity boxers to journey southward when they were in need of chastisement, they have now reversed the procedure by inviting the boxers of Syracuse University to come here and administer to their needs. This they will do on January 26th. While it is admitted that the Syracuse lads are pleasant enough company to mingle with in a social way they are not so pleasant when they start trading leather for keeps in the 20 foot ring. At that there should be some rare old battles in the gym when the visitors tangle with Powell, Gibson and some of the leading fistie lights around the campus.

Big Bill Tilden started something. By the simple expedient of informing the public that he had a quarrel with a certain Mr. Lott, and would like to do something about it, he managed to pack Madison Square Gardens with the largest crowd ever to see a pro tennis tussle in New York. Always quick on the pick up, the pro hockey magnates now find that there is a feud existing between several players, on different clubs of course, and these feuds are now rating several columns in the press, who probably find it profitable to give space to the hired hands and their hockey pursuits. John Public is now supposed to be impressed, save up his egg money and go to the next game to see havoc wrought in large doses. The funny part of it all is that he probably will.

ROWERS HONOUR COACH LOUDON

At the annual banquet of the University of Toronto Rowing Club, Professor T. R. Loudon, the veteran coach of that organization, was presented with a bronze "T" as a token of gratitude for the service he has rendered the rowing crews. Professor Loudon has coached eight Varsity boats to victory in intercollegiate competition.

During his reply Professor Loudon mentioned the possibility of new and better quarters for rowing activities on Toronto's waterfront. Plans are now being made to secure accommodation which will be owned by the University and which will be available for graduate as well as undergraduate members of the Rowing Club.

S.P.S. DEFEATS PHARMACY IN BASEBALL GAME

Sr. S.P.S. defeated Pharmacy in an intercollegiate baseball game yesterday afternoon by 15-2. It was the first game of the season for both teams, and as a result the fielding was rather sloppy. Hawker pitched well for School and had a big edge on Stewart and Ballantyne, who divided the twirling job for Pharmacy.

Sr. S.P.S.: Hawker, Sweet, Troster, Silver, Cook, Young, Junker, Miller and Smith.

Pharmacy: Stewart, Ballantyne, Kofsky, Bingham, McBain, Gilbert, Ford, Pugen, Foxton, Green and Bellack.

DENTS SCORE VICTORY IN BASKETBALL GAME

In a fast moving basketball game Dents took Forestry 24-13 in the little gym, Hart House, yesterday afternoon. The Forestry quintet managed to hold the Blue and Red to an 11-9 score in the first half but the Dents came back strong to run in 12 points in the last half. The Woodsmen tried hard throughout but they were no match for their faster opponents.

Dents: Andrews, Weir, Kingsberg, Dempster, Stoughton, O. Brown, Potashin, J. Brown, Parish, Nefsky, and Mason.

Forestry: Barron, Hick, Harrison, Chalk, Skolke, Kantole, Greer, Higgin. Referee: Himel.

QUEEN'S PLAN PURCHASE OF VALUABLE MACHINE

Queen's University is contemplating the purchase of a 600,000 volt high tension machine for atomic experimentation in research physics.

There are only six such machines in the world and if the necessary $17,000 can be raised this will be the first machine of its kind in Canada.

The danger from the machine will be very great and it will be necessary to install a lead enclosed chamber to prevent the death-dealing rays from escaping.

The final decision as to the purchase will depend on whether the remaining $5,000 necessary to pay for the machine can be raised.

It is thought that the shorter wave-lengths of the X-ray such as this machine would offer have better results in the treatment of cancer than the longer wave-lengths.

SPEAKER DESCRIBES LIFE OF EARLY CANADIANS

"In the early days of the nineteenth century many families located on the shores of the Red River. These pioneers were forced to revert to primitive measures of obtaining a livelihood but they met with no small measure of success," remarked Mr. Hazard in the opening of his address on Canada's Unspoiled Wilderness, speaking to the Women's Canadian Club.

He went on to speak of the huge buffalo herds and the buffalo hunts which played an extensive part in the life of the people who killed them for their meat, their hides and their fat. Thousands of buffalo were killed until the ravages of the skin hunter caused them to almost totally disappear.

"The various Indian tribes were constantly engaged in warfare. A man's object was to steal horses, take scalps and get himself a wife. They experienced every kind of despair and remorse, they loved and hated just as we do."

The settlement of the prairie provinces is one of the outstanding features of economic development in Canada. Due to those early pioneers, they are now permanently settled and the future is very bright.

This action would have to take place within the thirty days allowed in registering a revision of decision given by the court. Dr. Morgan concluded that the case may be considered a momentous one and the decision will be eagerly awaited.

Mr. V. But, he remarked that the greatest worry of White House was whether such a decision might set a precedent that could cause a good deal of the emergency legislation to be annulled, and hence take away some of the power now enjoyed by the president.

DEBATES COMMITTEE ANNOUNCES CHANGES

The election procedure for the Hart House Debate Committee has been changed this year. A. C. Smith, the secretary, announced today. No nomination will be accepted for any candidate who has not spoken on a paper or from the floor at least one debate previous to the election debate. Also, a modified faculty rule has been introduced. After two men have been elected for any one college or faculty, a third man will not be elected for that college or faculty if there is a candidate who has at least 40 votes from a college or faculty which has as yet no candidate elected. The colleges or faculties of the two members of the previous year's committee who are carried over will not have any effect on the election.

ments for loaning money to farmers. The legislation re farm loans was passed in 1927 by the King government. The Heppburn government is making loans to farmers at 4 per cent; the Bennett government is making loans at 5 1-2 per cent.

"No amount of pre-election sermons Mr. Bennett's statement concerning will make the youth of Canada forget University students, 'Why can't they find work?' It is because they feel entitled to make a choice. There is plenty of work to be done but it is not the kind which they wish to do."

"Furthermore, concerning matters of great future importance, Mr. Bennett promises he will do something. What will he do about what the Edmonton Bulletin, one of the few Canadian papers that dared to print the facts, calls 'One of the most flagrant pieces of financial buccannery that has taken place within the shadow of the parliament buildings at Ottawa—the handing over by the government of the Beauharnois Power project 'without the payment of a dollar' to the power monopolists."

"Finally, Mr. Bennett's posing as the champion of the common people and his expecting them to believe his promises is nothing short of sublime."

ENGLISH LANGUAGE MDST UNIVERSAL

any more perfectly than English people who take the same pains."

Various foreign-born students when interviewed by The Varsity did not seem to feel that they had any more original capacity for languages but that it was more a matter of convenience. "We have to learn English rapidly—it is a definite necessity. It would be practically impossible to get along in Canada without a fairly fluent use of English, whereas English students abroad will find their language spoken almost everywhere."

Mademoiselle Riese, of the French Department of Victoria College, agreed with the statement that English were much slower to learn a foreign language than continental. "The English are much slower to express themselves—they don't want to make mistakes so they refrain from making the necessary effort. They may, and often do as a rule, know more actual French than a Frenchman knows English, but they are shy about attempting to use the language and thus are unable to speak it correctly. Another reason for their seeming ignorance, is because so many high schools use the old method of teaching languages, emphasizing the grammar and reading rather than the actual pronunciation."

"I have noticed a great difference," continued Mademoiselle Riese, "since I first came to Canada seven years ago, in the attitude which people seem to be taking in regard to the speaking of foreign languages. Both students and society in general seem to be making an effort to learn to talk—they seem to feel that it is almost necessary today to know one other language. There has been a tremendous change and in my opinion it is certainly one for the better."

'TWIXT TWO

RELIGIOUS ISSUE

Dearest Phyllis:
The Battlexe says to me this morning, "Huey Long," says she, "aims to take Louisiana and hand it right over to the Soviets in Mexico—Texas goes with it." Then she says, "Boy, what about the ten commandments? If it were in your hands today to dispose of them, what would you do?"

"Missus," I says, having think it over a little, "them commandments is more often broke than kept—and most of them is out of date. Murder and stealing and perjury is about all we pay any attention to now." And then I reached the door and beat it as fast as I could—because I had a nine o'clock lecture.

Now this woman presents an interesting problem. She is a pious Presbyterian, widely travelled and well read. In spite of her intimate acquaintance with some sides of international politics, yet she looks on all Jews as Communists; for the Russians are so many incarnations of the devil. The British are the chosen of God because they are descended from the lost tribes of Israel; the Japanese are about to attack both India and China, with perhaps Australia thrown in; Imperialism is of God, Socialism is of the devil and all pacifists are paid agents of Moscow. Oh! but why extend the list any more; she is just a conservative; the only wicked thing she does is read novels.

There are lots more of the same ilk. I am completely at sea when it comes to discussing anything with them; we are not on the same ground. To me, there are two sides at least to every question; as a student I am not prepared to take up the cudgels on either side—I am here to learn. That is why I sympathise with the scientists who can't see politics for trees, and that is why I am one of those students you ran down yesterday, who are so apathetic to religion; it is too one-sided. In the future I shall have some opinions for the present, no. The golden mean for me. And gosh, my dear, are you going to be a "Battlexe" too!

horse who has been trained to race, and even when his jockey tries to hold him in (a wicked plot) he takes the bit in his teeth and wins the race, after which comes the unexpected climax when Bill passes out and drops dead on the run after the finish. We presume that the formality of weighing in was foregone on the occasion, owing to the nil nisi bonum convention. There follows a funeral at which the dirty bounders are shown in the throes of the realization of the fact that the poor dumb horse had more sporting blood than the lot of them. Besides Bill and his mascot, a rooster named Skeets, we present bouquets to Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy, and the man who played Colonel Pettigrew, a combination of Major Hoople and J. W. Wimpy.

Apart from any insincere flattery, the play this week is an entertaining piece and well produced. Anyone with any love for the legitimate theatre, ought to find the presentation quite pleasing. Hart House Theatre, by its constant attempt to add to our theatre life, deserves the support of everybody with any claim to appreciation, among whom, we hope, are many students.

The A.C. Players' Guild

Professor G. Wilson Knight and Miss Josephine Barrington will present scenes from "Hamlet" at the Players' Guild this week. The soliloquy "Oh, what a rogue and peasant slave am I", will be given, from the end of the second act, followed by the scene in the Queen's apartment, from the third, in which Hamlet kills Polonius. Mr. Dick Fonger will play Polonius.

University audiences are well acquainted with Professor Knight's views on the portrayal of "Hamlet" and his emphasis on the importance of keeping the powerful death symbolism in sight and the essential evil in Hamlet himself. Professor Knight has said that considering his constantly widening range of experience, this performance may differ from earlier ones.

Miss Barrington is president of the Shakespeare Society, of which Mr. Fonger is also a member. Both are well known on Toronto stages, and Mr. Fonger is particularly familiar to Guild audiences.

Art Gallery

The Camera Club exhibition this year is not of exceptional merit. The pictures are, as is the case in so many exhibitions of this type, examples of technical skill much more than pictures. Too many of them are snapshots glorified into large size pictures with excellent technique but totally lacking in composition and design.

The work of S. A. Sangster was outstanding for a grasp of this essential of a good photograph. The landscape and seascape section showed the best work. In this class too many of the examples showed a tendency to confuse a spectacular or interesting display of light and shadow for a really pleasing composition. A little less of the technique and more of the artist in the efforts would produce considerable improvement in the quality of the work. The architectural section was particularly weak. This important field has been largely overlooked by both amateur and professional photographers in this city. The portraits were not of exceptional merit and in this class "Saida Gerard" by S. A. Sangster was one of the outstanding photographs of the show.

LANGE DISCUSSES SAAR PROBLEM

"France wanted the Saar, a distinctly German district, for economic reasons. Clemenceau had swayed the makers of the treaty of Versailles to make the existing agreement by championing the rights of the 150,000 Frenchmen living in the Saar. As a matter of fact there were only 339 according to the census of 1913. But as the total population is about 750,000, France never had the faintest hope that the Saarlanders would vote for union with France or even the continued protection of the League. However, the establishment of the Hitler regime in Germany and the emigration of a few thousand discontented Germans to the Saar territory, gave new and somewhat unexpected strength to the ease of those who would support, not a submission to France, but the continuation of League rule," stated Mr. Lange. "Since then there has ensued the extremely lively and more often than not desperate struggle between the pro and anti-Nazi Saarlanders, which has been carried on by all kinds of propaganda."

The fears of armed intervention raised by the near approach of the plebiscite, were overcome by emigration of the League at the suggestion of Britain. "The League has always tried to act as fairly as it seemed possible," but it has not always escaped accusation. However, it has to a certain extent proved itself capable of functioning as an international mediator. But its weaknesses have also been laid bare. Mr. Lange concluded, "Its worst feature seems to be that in its present form it tends to perpetuate ad infinitum the treaty of Versailles. The morale of the Saar problem therefore is: Reform the League, by vetoing the treaty, or else the treaty as well as the League will soon be 'Not only dead but damned.'"

If Roosevelt Gold Policy
"Ultra Vires" Bankruptcy Predicted

HIGHLY UNLIKELY

"A renewal of bankruptcy and depression in the United States," was prophesied by Professor A. F. W. Plumptre, of the Department of Political Economy of the U.S. Supreme Court rules that President Roosevelt acted beyond his powers in the gold clause issue. However, he considers this result highly unlikely.

The present "gold clause" discussion in the United States relates to a clause inserted in many bonds providing for payment in gold. President Roosevelt, in ruling it illegal for any private interests to hold gold, made this impossible and subsequently passed legislation providing for the payment of such debts in legal tender of the United States.

This action has been criticised as ultra vires and has come up before the Supreme Court for decision. From a purely legal standpoint the decision (Continued on Page 4)

COMMERCE CLUB DANCE TAKES PLACE TONIGHT

The annual Commerce Club At-Home is a prominent University event which will take place tonight. The location is to be the Roof Garden of the Royal York Hotel, and the music will be supplied by Karl Mueller and his Varsity Entertainers.

Among the honoured guests of the evening will be Miss I. M. Biss, Professor C. A. Ashley, Professor E. J. Urwick, and Professor F. R. Crombie. On the committee are G. T. Parmenter, P. K. Griggs, F. M. Vanstone, and T. J. Bell. Herb Mitchell will be in charge of the ticket sale at the Royal York.

The president of the Commerce Club, Mr. G. T. Parmenter, stated that the annual At-Home was likely to be the most successful reception on record. "All of the graduates have been canvassed, and a large number have stated that they will attend," he said. "Many of them are holding surprise parties before the dance. We expect a gay and happy crowd."

MYSCORE PLANTERS HONOR DR. COLEMAN

Receives Tea and Coffee Services in Recognition of Work in India

ON BOTANY STAFF

At the last meeting of the Senate of the University of Toronto the presentation was made to Dr. Leslie Coleman, C.I.E., of the Department of Botany, of a silver tea service and coffee service on behalf of the Mysore Planters' Association of India.

Dr. Coleman was Director of Agriculture in Mysore previous to coming to Toronto. Obligated to leave, owing to ill-health, on short notice, the association was unable to arrange a presentation before he left and requested that President H. J. Cody arrange to have him presented with the gift on their behalf.

In a letter to H. J. Cody from Mr. A. L. Hill of the Mysore Planters' Association high tribute is paid to Dr. Coleman:

"Dr. Coleman served for 26 years in the Mysore Agricultural Department. His study of the prevention and cure of fungoid diseases gave him a wide reputation as a mycologist. To give but one instance, he saved the areas nuts throughout Mysore and other parts of South India by discovering a 100 per cent preventative of the Koleroga disease of that plant. ### SUCCESS OF DIALECT OEPENOS ON AUTHOR

Should not be Attempted Unless Writer Sure of His Ground

Writing in dialect is quite a common practice among modern poets and authors, but the success of this type of work is absolutely dependent on the individual author. The Varsity learned in an interview with the Department of English yesterday.

"To say that Kipling would write more naturally and entertainingly in straight English than he does in dialect does not make good sense. It depends entirely on the type of story or poem that is being written," said Mr. Endicott of the English department.

Another member of the staff who preferred to remain anonymous, said that the use of dialect does not affect the natural atmosphere of the story. A story of a working man in London would naturally be far more effective in dialect than in straight king's English. No definite statement can be made, however, as to which method of writing is more desired. No author should attempt to write in dialect unless he is perfectly certain that he can carry the whole story through in that dialect. The best result will be obtained when the writer uses the dialect of his immediate environment. This guarantees the fact that he is sure of his ground.

SEE PRACTICAL BEARING

The physics department of the University of Toronto continues to lead in the field of low temperature research with the announcement of further progress in research with liquid helium by three graduate students working under Dr. E. F. Burton, head of McLennan Laboratories.

During their work it has been found that liquid helium has a viscosity not greater than ordinary air, and that any object passing through it would meet with no more resistance than through air.

The three young men whose experiment, carried out in the Physics Department under Dr. E. F. Burton, has resulted in this discovery, are J. O. Wilhelm, A. B. Meizner and A. R. Clark. Mr. Wilhelm has charge of the (Continued on Page 4)

SCALE ARMOUR SUIT ON VIEW AT MUSEUM

Buckle Fixes Date of Only Suit as Belonging to 600 B.C.

Professor C. T. Currelly, director of the Royal Ontario Museum, recently discovered in London the only suit of scale armour in existence. It is now the property of the province of Ontario and is on view in the Museum.

This suit was found, which was the scene of a battle, several hundred years before Christ, between Hannibal and the Romans. Probably this suit of armour belonged to one of the vanquished Roman soldiers. The date has been approximately set as 600 B.C. on account of the type of buckle on the belt.

The scales are loosely joined making the armour form-fitting. They are of bronze hammered out by hand, and graduating in size from the neck down. Excellent protection would be afforded for downward blows, but upward thrusts would prove fatal.

Says Psychological Tests Are Unsuitable to Ontario

Students Barred As Fees Unpaid

Forty students at the University of Toronto will be forced to forego the pleasure of writing their May examinations because of their failure to pay their Christmas term fees, according to A. B. Fennell, registrar.

There were 400 students at first notified that they must meet this obligation, or they would be excluded from the University. All but 40 of these complied. The Students' Administrative Council loan fund was applied to in many of these cases to make up the amount required.

No strenuous effort will be made by the University to keep these students from attending lectures, as the cost of polling the lecture rooms would exceed the actual loss of the fees. When examination time comes, however, the students in arrears will be entirely disregarded.

Mr. Fennell stated that the number is about the same as last year, and that there would be more when the other departments had been heard from.

"The successful campaign for the sending of a delegation to the World Congress of Students against War must be followed up by the building of a large student anti-war movement in Canada," was the statement made by Angus Blair, chairman of last night's meeting of the Anti-War Society.

At the meeting, a letter from McGill University was read stating that the McGill League against War and the Suppression of Civil Liberties would support such a congress. It was also reported that two high schools in Windsor would likewise send delegates. Plans were formulated to have delegates from Queen's, Western, McMaster, as well as the high schools of Eastern Canada. The tentative plans (Continued on Page 4)

COSGRAVE EXTOLLS TRINITY'S FOUNDER

Commemorate Inauguration of the College by Bishop Strachan

EIGHTY THIRIO BANQUET

"Trinity graduates and undergraduates have every reason to be proud of the sturdy, robust character of the founder of their college," said Provost Cosgrave of Trinity in his speech last night on the occasion of the eighty-third banquet held in commemoration of the inauguration of the college by John Strachan, first Bishop of Toronto, on January 15th, 1852.

Last night's banquet was the only celebration in connection with the commemoration. The Provost's speech came after a dinner attended by all resident and non-resident students of the college and by the majority of the present staff. "John Strachan," said Professor Cosgrave, "was over seventy years of age at the time of the foundation. He had come to Canada at the beginning of the century at the age of seventeen and had already founded two Universities in this country, namely King's College and McGill; in 1849 King's College was secularised and in the same year Bishop Strachan went over to England and secured the support of such prominent men as Sir Robert Peel, Gladstone and the Duke of Wellington. He returned and proceeded to found Trinity University.

STORY OF SCIENCE TRACED BY BRETT

Development of Man's Ideas Illustrated by Use of Slides

The third meeting of the Philosophy Club was addressed last night by Professor Brett, its honorary president, on some aspects of the history of science. With the aid of a humorous and valuable collection of slides he sketched the development of the biological and physical sciences from earliest times to the sixteenth century. Mr. Brett emphasized the work of isolated geniuses such as Leonardo da Vinci, Tycho, Galileo and Newton. Of particular interest were the slides showing the development of man's conception of the solar system and terrestrial geography. The anatomical diagrams of the Middle Ages were amusing if not instructive to the modern Meds.

At the beginning of the meeting Mr. Pearson, Mr. McKinnon and Miss Beaton were elected officers for the ensuing year. Mr. Pearson stated that the Rev. J. R. P. Sclater had accepted an invitation to speak to the club on Tuesday the twelfth of February.

Will Fill Post as Director of the Hart House Theatre

PERMANENT POSITION

Mrs. Pyper Will Stage Plays with Student Casts Next Year

The appointment of Nancy Pyper as Director of Hart House Theatre for 1935-36 was yesterday officially confirmed by Mr. B. K. Sandwell, chairman of the Board of Syndics. Since the resignation of Mr. Edgar Stone from this position last year, each play of the current season has been in the hands of a guest director, and it will be remembered that Mrs. Pyper produced "The Devil's Disciple" here last fall.

"Three rousing British cheers!" was the characteristic exclamation of approval to come from Nancy Pyper when The Varsity reporter suggested that any efforts upon her part to include students in future Hart House productions would receive strong support. "I do hope to do brilliant plays by Shaw and some of the Russian writers, with the students, for I feel that they are the logical people to produce such work." While at this early date it is impossible for the new Director of the Theatre to announce any definite policy with regard to the nature or number of plays to be staged next year, she is looking forward eagerly to working with students of the (Continued on Page 3)

MIRSKYS SUCCESSFUL IN ROBINETTE OEBATES

Third Year Team Advocates Censorship to Educate the Producers

The team of J. Mirsky and M. Mirsky were adjudged the winners against three competing teams in the first round of the Robinette Trophy debates held in the junior common room of University College yesterday. This team will represent the third year in the forthcoming inter-year debates. The subject debated was, "Resolved, that censorship of the movies is desirable."

The winners based their argument chiefly upon the necessity of educating the producers of motion pictures to the manufacture of decent pictures which would make censorship unnecessary. The team of McCann and Levine deplored censorship and advocated the establishment of a government board of directors at Hollywood. Bissel and Sheaffer condemned the subject matter of pictures shown to children, while their opponents, Ozanne and Bryce, claimed that censorship was undemocratic, unsound and unscientific, favouring instead a National Board of Review.

SYSTEMATIC WORK BEST FOR WRITERS

Pointers Given on How to Produce Successful Short Stories

"The main thing about the writing game is to do it systematically. You'll turn out so much more material than if you go at it haphazardly." Such was the advice given by Olive Burns Kirby, speaking yesterday afternoon to the Women's Press Club. Mrs. Kirby is a short story writer for the Canadian Home Journal.

A short story is a dramatic narrative told with one dominating emotional effect. The average inexperienced writer strives for more than one and fails, as a result.

The Right to Vote

The Mail and Empire, with its characteristic zeal for the civic welfare, comes forward with a leading editorial condemning the extension of the municipal vote to all citizens over twenty-one. "The vote," it says, sententiously, "should belong only to those who pay the shot," in other words to those whose money pays the taxes, and "should not be handed over to mere striplings who may not even have a job."

The Varsity would well be justified in remarking that this type of paper, although well suited to the age in which it came into being, must have received a severe scare in its infancy which prevented it from growing past its tenth year. The age it represents is an age of property and not an age of machinery. In that day young people were able to proceed from their educational institutions into a wide and spacious world, where, generally speaking, there was plenty of opportunity, and the top was always roomy. Today where is this security, this room for leisurely expansion?

This tax-paying class, of which our contemporary talks so importantly, are "paying the shot" to be sure. Our harassed home-owners are hanging on these days to the little they have with a grimace which is pitiable to behold. Unless help comes soon, there won't be a citizen who will own his home. Thousands are homeless, thousands more are unemployed. Among our older generation there is no enthusiasm for change; they are too occupied in hanging on and too worried with the fear that they may not be able to hang on long enough.

There is a listlessness and a hopelessness among them which not even Mr. Bennett's glowing promises can wholly dispel. The future is not with them. The refashioning of the world belongs to the youth of this nation. With these "striplings" who have no jobs, and under present circumstances, can hardly hope to get jobs. To these the Mail and Empire refuse the right to vote.

When is Immorality?

Nudist literature is now freely and openly displayed and sold in Toronto. On the magazine stand of a well-known drug store not far from the campus, the writer found the official monthly of one of the English sun-bathing societies. It is a medium-sized, very British-looking periodical, which has been sold at that place for some months. The January issue contains letters, articles, advertisements and one short story, all pertaining to the subject of physical, mental and moral improvement through free exposure of the body to the elements, and the attainment of physical well-being generally. It also contains photographs, both professional and amateur, of unclothed men and women at work, at play and in various artistic poses.

The quiet, normal, almost homely honesty of the whole doctrine is impressively restful and refreshing in contrast to the vast, senseless turmoil which rages when people who know nothing about the subject get hold of it.

And few doctrines in this age of controversy have been attacked with such bitterness, all the bitterness of which they are capable who are mortally afraid to have the light of logic stabbing into the dark corners of minds made useless by long disuse. Few controversies, therefore, have revealed with such damaging clearness the terrifying fact that the vast body of mankind is not a creature of reason at all, but the prisoner of prejudice. In 1935, men are still stuck, head-downward, in the black bog of superstition. Furthermore, they desire fiercely to stay there, as anyone will agree who has ever tried to reason a pet superstition away from a person of "ordinary" (!) mentality.

The idea that nudity is immorality could be called the No. 1 moral superstition of the century. Any dictionary will explode the idea immediately. The two words are absolutely unrelated. Yet how the idea hangs on! After all, few people bother with dictionaries, and fewer will bother with these lines, certainly, yet there is the truth!

As reported in Time, it recently came to the ears of Alfred E. Smith, who among other things is head of the U.S. Legion of Decency, that a private nudist party had been held in a hired hall in New York City, and that upon trial, the state laws were found inadequate to make this a misdemeanor, being confined to exposure of the person in public. Hereupon the former Governor of the largest state in the Union, and one-time candidate for President of the United States of America, solemnly proposed this amendment: (the italics are ours)

"A person who in any place willfully exposes his person . . . in the presence of two or more persons of the opposite sex whose persons . . . are similarly exposed . . . or who . . . in any capacity hires, leases or permits the land, building or premises . . . over which he has control to be used for any such purposes, is guilty of a misdemeanor."

A more stinging self-indictment of the mentality of politicians would be hard to imagine!

The wide open opportunity to make this ridiculous was seized immediately. Rev. Dr. Isley Boone, executive secretary of the International Nudist Conference, wrote:

"There is more social danger to our young folks in a quart of gin than in three miles of State-censored movie film (Mr. Smith's Legion of Decency is largely responsible for the movie boycott and censorship drive in the east). There is a striking inconsistency between the removal of prohibition from liquor (for which Mr. Smith fought) and the placing of prohibition upon a movement which by actual results, has everywhere been hailed as a blessing and in no instances has been cited as the source of immorality or illicit relations."

The New York Herald Tribune wrote editorially:

"In this controversy it is much easier to go part way with Dr. Boone than it is to go anywhere at all with the Legion of Decency . . . The exhibitionists among these folk who would go through the world as they came into it are a trifling minority . . . All testimony goes to show that the great majority of these latter-day Edenites take their antics in the altogether solemnly, if not sadly. . . . All non-nudist reporters on the life of a nudist camp find it insufferably dull. They are diverted by nothing about it so much as the quiet but firm sway of the proprieties. . . . The truth of the matter seems to be that the average nudist is a puritan. . . . He notes with triumph that he experiences no wicked reactions to visions that are allegedly wicked. This indulgence may seem thoroughly absurd; but when the Legion of Decency sets out to have it pronounced immoral, is it not simply compounding an absurdity?"

A male friend of the writer's, with a young lady also of his acquaintance, were walking last summer near the shore of one of the smaller Muskoka lakes. Desiring a swim, but having no suits, they simply took off their clothes, had their swim, lay out on a narrow beach to dry, put their clothes on and resumed their walk. Knowing something of the characters of these two, the writer defies any reader of this article to find the slightest trace of immorality in the act. But what a time they would have had in convincing a morality court, or even their families! Unclothed swimming parties are particularly toothsome prey of the cotton-stockinged variety of moralists.

The answer to all this is simple enough. Immorality has nothing whatever to do with any material consideration, nor is any material condition, nudity included, conducive to immorality. Immorality is a STATE OF MIND. One who would be immoral with no clothes at all would be just as immoral in the costume of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition. Furthermore, those who know about the subject seem agreed that clothes are more "conducive to immorality" than the complete lack of them.

They have found evidence that the mystery surrounding the concealed form of the opposite sex has led to unhealthy thoughts and speculations in sensual minds. Moreover, people who have confessed to such speculations in their own minds have found that upon returning from a stay at a nudist gathering the whole burden has been lifted from them, and happier, freer lives have been the result. After the first edge of their curiosity had worn off, they say, they lost interest completely in the form of the opposite sex, frequently because they were hugely disappointed!

BAD HOUSEKEEPING

The Royal Commission on Housing sent in a report on some of the slums on St. George and Huron Sts. that was only suppressed by the University authorities at the last minute in order to save the reputation of Knox College and the Dental Faculty. The report found that some of the social conditions were indeed appalling, especially on Spadina Ave., Russell St. and Washington Ave.

Some of the items are perhaps of interest, and will be valuable in correcting our many social evils. In one room on Spadina Ave. near Bloor St. it was discovered that the previous occupant had died, but had not been noticed among the debris on the floor. In each corner stood several pairs of socks, and a choice collection of pyjamas and assorted unmentionables decorated the floor, from which the tenant was accustomed to selecting his shirt for the day, blindfolded. When rusty blades and old dance programmes questioned about the empty bottles, scattered about he showed no sense of community responsibility, but muttered something about decorations relieving the monotony of a room.

On the way to the next place the Commission noticed an odd odor, which was later identified as fresh air, which they soon became accustomed to again. The next place turned out to a palatial apartment on Washington Ave. where several young girls were found in the midst of a wild orgy of oysters and wine. These young ladies were saving money by a sort of communal system, in which the housework was equitably divided. They had a broom attached to the tea wagon, and thus the room was swept whenever the tea wagon was moved. Each girl housekept for one week at a time, and if anyone complained about the cooking, she im-

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By M. A. F.

There is to be an important meeting of the Swimming Club at 5 p.m. today in Room 82, U.C. It will be impossible to make the desired plans for the interfaculty meet and practices as well as for the faculty contests without a full attendance.

The hockey schedule for the week beginning Monday, January 21 appears in another part of this issue. The preliminaries of this series will run over three weeks and further schedules will appear in a few days. There are 42 games to be played in all before the finals can be played off so we have a real season ahead of us. Seven teams are entered this year: two from Vic, two from U.C., and one from Meds, St. Mike's, St. Hilda's. With the exception of the home games of either of the Vic teams which are played on the Little Vic cushion all games will be played at the Varsity rink.

Jimmy MacPherson, Oswald Dyke, Norman McClelland, and Bob Brennan are to referee all games. The reason for having the same refs for all the matches is that at the conclusion of the series an all-star team will be chosen. To do this it is necessary that experienced hockey players get a line on the available interfaculty material right from the first contest.

Every game must be played unless the ice is actually non-existent, there is to be no defaulting just because rinks are not in A1 condition. In the case of a match really having to be cancelled the president of the Hockey Club requests that the managers of the teams concerned let her know immediately when they propose to play the postponed game.

Last night the St. Hilda's pucksters got out on the ice for the first official practice. The turn-out was decidedly encouraging, and there seemed to be plenty of enthusiasm and pep. The freshie material showed up especially well. Helen Elliott, Shiela Bull, and Elaine Knight look like real skaters and should prove a decided advantage to the Blue and Grey squad. Certainly 378 has more hockey players than any year which has appeared at Trinity in some time.

S.P.S. FROSH ARE GAY AT ANNUAL YEAR SOIREE

It was the freshmen's night yesterday in S.P.S. when a hundred School frosh made merry at Parkdale Canoe Club with all the customary gay abandon of an engineer's dance. The occasion was the annual winter term first year party. The everlasting School-Arts feud flared up for a few minutes at one stage of the proceedings when a "crasher" from U.C. was discovered. The luckless Arts man was promptly hustled off to the showers and summarily dealt with. He returned undaunted but after leading an Arts yell merged inconspicuously with the crowd. It was all part of the fun.

At the Good Companions, 1179 Bay Street, east side, just below Bloor, Varsity people are meeting these days. Almost any time during the day can be found groups of students discussing campus affairs over tea, lunch or dinner. For Varsity people have found that the Good Companions meals cannot be beaten. Food reasonably priced that is cooked just right. The students' lunch has become most popular and then there is the famous steak dinner. Added to this is the attractive atmosphere of the place, delightful surroundings where one can relax and enjoy life, for whether you come for a meal or between lecture coffee you are made most welcome. Get the habit, drop in to-day to the Good Companions and if you do like many others, you will become a regular patron.

VARSITY PUT ON A GOOD DISPLAY BUT FAIL TO WIN

Blue and White Hockeyists Almost Provide Upset for Torontos

McPHERSON SCORES THREE

Unable to Surmount Second Period Lead, They Drop 4-3 Decision

That gallant band of hockey players who wear the Blue and White livery of the University of Toronto in their hockey wars, are still the neglected children of fortune as far as winning games goes. The students elated last night with the flashy Toronto team at Varsity Arena and after providing the customers with one of the best games of the season—lost, 4-3.

As has been the case in the past, it was not that Torontos were too good for Varsity but that the Blue team showed their usual unfamiliarity with the territory immediately surrounding the opposing nets and when they found themselves in that particular part of the rink, began consulting their compasses rather than attempting to score. On the territorial play they were far superior on the evening's performance and they missed more scoring chances than an ordinary team would need to win several games.

The game, however, did provide an opportunity for the followers to see the Blue team playing real hockey in every end of the rink but one. The Torontos were checked to a standstill and the speed which the Blue team displayed on the attack was not matched by the winners. The game, although fast, was unusually clean. Two penalties appeared in the first period, and it was while Rey was pining away in the penance department that the Torontos came from behind to tie the count, and then go to the front. Not one single penalty was imposed during the second session and only one during the third.

Credit for the splendid showing of the students must in a large part be shared between Jimmy MacPherson and Bob Loughheed. Jimmy scored all four of the Varsity counters while Loughheed was a tower of strength in the Varsity nets. The nonchalance with which Bob bats the puck away from his citadel is rather hard on the customers' nerves, but is seldom equalled in effectiveness.

For the brief period of five minutes the fans had a chance to see Varsity out in front, when MacPherson took McClelland's pass for the opener early in the first period. A penalty allowed Torontos to rally and when Rey, the penitence, returned, it was after Hodges had tied the count and Oliver had stickhandled his way through the entire team to put the Torontos in front. MacPherson and McClelland again combined to tie the count before the session ended.

In the second period disaster overtook the Blue team; Acheson and Oliver scored in turn while Varsity were unable to beat Goldie once. Normie McClelland missed a golden opportunity in this period when he went in on top of Goldie all alone but failed to get by him.

In the final period Jeffery carried the puck the length of the ice on a beautiful play, passed perfectly to MacPherson for the last counter Varsity was able to collect. A sustained attack in the last few minutes had the play up around the Torontos nets for five minutes but it never got beyond Goldie. For Varsity the work of MacPherson, Loughheed, Jeffery, Valiquette and Rey was outstanding, while Oliver, Goldie and the defensive team of MacAlpine and Bowman were the best of the winners.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Ken Burn

Lady Luck did not choose to don a blue and white sweater last night and as a result Varsity dropped a close decision to Torontos in an exceedingly interesting hockey match at Varsity Arena. The Blue team had more than their share of the play but could not push the tying goal past Andy Goldie in the Torontos net. The game in many respects was a repetition of the last encounter of the two clubs when Torontos also won by a 4-3 count. In both instances Torontos capitalized on Varsity penalties and sank home counters that gave them the game.

Varsity's performance last night was very refreshing after some of the previous efforts. Every man worked hard and when the game ended some of the players were on the point of exhaustion. Particularly prominent was Jimmy MacPherson who scored the three Varsity tallies. Normie McClelland also turned in a brilliant performance, organizing the plays that resulted in the first two goals. The only criticism that can be directed against last night's game was that Varsity were inaccurate in their shooting. They had more shots on goal than the All-Stars but were not as effective in their shooting.

Those of us who look favourably on the idea of international intercollegiate hockey had another cross added to our back the other day when the sports editor of "Canada's most influential newspaper" stated it was not feasible. Of course we refer to the Globe, which leads us to hope the international circuit will become a reality next winter so we can sit back and grin disdainfully.

The experts and the would-be dittoes have been calling Hamilton to take the O.H.A. since the beginning of the season. Unfortunately at the time of writing we can see no reason why their predictions will not be verified. Personally, outside of Varsity, we would like to see Oakville take the title because they are the smoothest working club in the league, because they play a comparatively clean game, and because they always put on an interesting display. With regard to the O.H.A. situation we are going to put our heads in the noose in the accepted suicidal manner by calling Varsity to tie or take Hamilton before the season is over.

It is quite easy to call one team to take another but to have some reasons for your selection is a different matter. In case you are interested here are ours for the above selection. Hamilton's record has been just a little too perfect and conversely Varsity's a little too rank. In the last game between the clubs Varsity outplayed the Bengals until midway in the second period when they ran into a string of penalties and blew up. Finally Varsity are playing a lot better hockey than before the holidays. And besides which, we have just had our tea and read.

The interfaculty hockey schedule will get under way at the beginning of next week. There will be two seven team group meetings with the winners meeting in a playoff to decide who will hold the Jennings Cup.

While some faculties are prone to believe that all the exercise Vic students get is trying to walk from north east corner of the campus to the chemistry building in ten minutes flat, this will be materially disproved when the friends, supporters and members of her athletic teams gather to make merry at the Athletic At-Home on Friday night.

GOLDENBERG IN FINALS FOR A. F. COVENTRY CUP

Wins from Noyes and Earns Right to Represent Graduates

M. Goldenberg defeated W. Noyes last evening, 16-14, 15-8, 15-12, to win the graduates' section of the Hart House singles squash tournament, and to enter the final for the A. F. Coventry Cup. The game climaxed a tournament in which many fine games have been played. Both players were extremely cautious at all times, and Goldenberg's victory was due to his superior steadiness. The final for the A. F. Coventry Cup will be played between M. Goldenberg and C. McCutcheon at a date to be announced shortly. On the basis of the tournaments that are now being completed, a team of two men will be chosen to represent Hart House in the annual singles tournament of the Canadian Squash Racquets Association to be held at the Carlton Club, Toronto, on the first three days in February.

SR. SCHOOL TAKE VIC IN BASKETBALL OPENER

Rough Tactics and Poor Ball Handling Are Predominant

Yesterday afternoon Sr. S.P.S. clocked out a 17-16 victory over Sr. Vic in the opening interfaculty basketball game. The game, which was played in the little gym at Hart House, produced a mediocre brand of ball. Both teams showed lack of practice and were inclined to rough tactics.

The School team started the first half with a barrage of shots and had the best of a 15-2 score at the halfway mark. They weakened in the second half and were outscored by Vic 14-2. The Vic team displayed lack of finish around the basket with disastrous effect to their score.

O'Flynn and Miller were the stars for School, while Faux with 8 points to his credit was the shining light for the Victoria team.

Sr. S.P.S.: Wilkinson 4, O'Flynn 3, Reid, Wood 2, Miller 4, Black, Westheuser, Brigham.

Sr. Vic: Price, Richardson 3, Gladish 4, Faux 8, Toole 1, Edwards 1, Hills, Cameron, Rutledge, Cockfield.

Referee: Forsyth.

U.C. MUSIC CLUB SEEKS CAST FOR "6000 NEWS"

The U.C. Music Club met yesterday afternoon at the Women's Union for the first tryouts of "Good News", which they will be producing shortly. The score has been cut and is ready to be put on. It is a matter now of getting a cast. A large number of women and a few men turned out for the tryouts, which points to either shyness or indifference on the men's part. The tryouts were made three at a time for the three women's parts of the score.

University, and—"I do hope it will be a successful season!"

Before coming to Toronto a little over a year ago, Nancy Pypher was in Winnipeg for some time directing plays for the Little Theatre groups there, and at that time did considerable work with student dramatic societies which gained wide commendation. Previous to this, Mrs. Pypher was connected with similar organizations in England.

Commenting upon Nancy Pypher's appointment to the directorship of Hart House Theatre, Melville Key, manager of the theatre, last night told The Varsity, "She has the ability to make people act—to take raw material and bring out the hidden ability."

The new Director is scheduled to produce another play in Hart House before the conclusion of the present season, it is understood.

the editors. Unless the first two or three paragraphs of a story grip his eye, he throws it aside. So you should strive to get the characters in at the first and avoid changing your viewpoint."

Mrs. Kirby stressed the importance of making the characters live. If they live in the mind of the writer they will live in the mind of the reader.

As a last injunction Mrs. Kirby counselled any amateur short story writer not to write letters to editors.

"They won't love you if you do. And don't take up the editor's time by going to see him. This is one of his pet peeves."

"Sooner or later you'll find out whether you can write or not. I would advise anyone who considers writing to go into advertising or newspaper work. There is no better school in which to learn the rudiments of writing."
